We now note the question at the head of this article, "And where is he," i. e. the dead man who has wasted away. We find the answer in the 12th verse, "So man lieth down and riseth not till the heavens be no more, they shall not awake nor be raised out of their sleep. We also learn from Scripture the condition mentally. Psa. vi. 5, "For in death there is no remembrance of thee; in the grave (sheol) who shall give thee thanks?" Psa. cxiv. 17. "The dead praise not the Lord, neither any that go down into silence." Psa. cxlvi. 3, 4, "Put not your trust in princes, nor in the son of man in whom there is no help; his breath goeth forth, he returneth to his earth, in that very day his thoughts perish." Eccl. ix. 10, "Whatsoever thy hand findeth to do, do it with thy might, for there is no work, nor device, nor wisdom in the grave (sheol) where thou goest."

It seems from these Scriptures that the dead are quite dead, and utterly unable to "hop around" or talk, and that there can be no reward or punishment before judgment. And there can be no judgment before the time "until the Lord come." Because he hath appointed a day in the which he will judge the world in righteousness by that man whom he hath ordained." Rev. xx. 12, 13, "And I saw the dead small and great stand before God and the books were opened, and another book was opened, which is the book of life and the dead were judged out of those things which were written in the book according to their works, and the sea gave up the dead which were in it and death and hell, (hades, the grave, marg.) delivered up the dead which were in them, and they were judged every man according to their works, and death and hell were cast into the lake of fire. This is the second death. And whosoever was not found written in the book of life was cast into the lake of fire." 2 Tim. iv. 1, "I charge ye therefore before God and the Lord Jesus, who shall judge the quick (living) and the dead at his appearing and kingdom." Here we have the time and place, and the parties to be judged. We will be either dead or alive; if dead we will come forth at the call of the Son of God, they that have done good unto the resurrection of life, and they that have done evil unto the resurrection of damnation. Hence the judgment and reward will not precede the resurrection. No doubt Robert G. Ingersoll and James Boyd Brady and C. C. Ramsay will be there.

The Restitution of all Things.

"And he shall send Jesus Christ, which before was preached unto you, whom the heaven must receive until the times of restitution of all things, which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." Acts iii. 20, 21.

This is an important passage of Scripture. It sets forth the restitution of all things biblically and positively. "And he shall send Jesus Christ, which before was preached unto you, [but who hath been crucified, and hath ascended into heaven, and] whom the heaven must receive [or contain] until the times of the restitution of all things, which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." The restitution of all things is to take place when Jesus Christ descends from heaven, at the second advent, at the end of the world. He had ascended into heaven bodily and visibly: the heavens contain him until the times of restitution; and then he will visit the earth again. Now when shall he visit the earth again? Answer, At the resurrection of the dead, at the end of the world.

"And while they looked steadfastly toward heaven as he went up, behold, two men stood by them in white apparel: which also said, Ye men of Galilee, why stand ye gazing up into heaven? This same Jesus which is taken up from you into heaven, shall so come in like manner as ye have seen him go into heaven." Acts i. 10, 11.

Again: "For the Lord himself shall descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of the archangel, and with the trump of God: and the dead in Christ shall rise first." 1 Thes. iv. 16.

Again: "But every man in his own order: Christ the first fruits; afterward they that are Christ's at his coming." 1 Cor. xv. 23.

Again: "In a moment, in the twinkling of an eye, at the last trump: for the trumpet shall sound, and the dead shall be raised incorruptible, and we shall be changed." 1 Cor. xv. 52.

Again: "Verily, verily, I say unto you, the hour is coming, and now is, when the dead shall hear the voice of the Son of God; and they that hear shall live." John v. 25.

Again: "And he shall send his angels with a great sound of a trumpet, and they shall gather together his elect from the four winds, from one end of heaven to the other." Matt. xxiv. 31.

I might quote many parallel texts, but let us conclude from all this, that the restitution of all things is to take place at the resurrection of the dead.

The learned Parkhurst gives this view of the subject, and quotes Stockius at large as agreeing with him. We do not understand that the restitution shall not begin until that time, but that it shall then be completed, and filled up, so that it may be said: all things are restored.

What is this restitution? It is the putting of the things back into their original condition. Man was originally created in the image of God; but the divine image has been obscured by sin; and men now bear the image of the earthly. But at the resurrection, when Christ shall appear, the restitution of all things shall take place, and then mankind will be restored to the image of God again: for Saint Paul says, that at the resurrection mankind shall be changed from the earthly to the heavenly image. 1 Cor. xv. 49.

"And as we have borne the image of the earthly, we shall also bear the image of the heavenly." 1 Cor. xv. 49.

Again: "For whom he did foreknow, he also did predestinate to be conformed to the image of his Son, that he might be the first born among many brethren." Rom. viii. 29.

Again: "But we all, with open face beholding as in a glass the glory of the Lord, are changed into the same image from glory to glory, even as by the Spirit of the Lord." 2 Cor. iii. 18.

Again: "Who shall change our body, that it may be fashioned like unto his glorious body, according to the working whereby he is able even to subdue all things unto himself." Phil. iii. 21.

Again: "Beloved, now are we the sons of God, and it doth not yet appear what we shall be: but we know that, when he shall appear, we shall be like him: for we shall see him as he is." 1 John iii. 2.

This heavenly image which we have lost, we obtain back again at the resurrection of the dead; and to this the blessed Savior's language agrees, for he saith, that in the resurrection man shall be as the image of God in heaven; they shall bear the heavenly image.

"For in the resurrection they neither marry, nor are given in marriage, but are as the angels of God in heaven." Matt. xxii. 30.

That they can die no more, and "shall be the children of God, being the children of the resurrection."

"So also is the resurrection of the dead. It is sown in corruption; it is raised in incorruption." 1 Cor. xv. 42.

Again: "Then shall the righteous shine forth as the sun in the kingdom of their Father. Who hath ears to hear, let him hear." Matt. xiii. 43.

God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began; not as clearly and fully as he hath revealed it in the gospel.

Moses, one of the earliest prophets, foretold the extinction of evil [that is, the extinction of evil at the second advent], when he represented sin under the figure of a serpent, whose head the seed of the woman was to bruise. "I will put enmity between thee and the woman, and between thy seed and her seed: it shall bruise thy head, and thou shalt bruise his heel." Gen. iii. 15. The seed of the woman was Jesus Christ.

"And Jesus himself began to be about thirty years of age, being (as was supposed) the son of Joseph, which was the son of Heli, which was the son of Matthat, which was the son of Levi, which was the son of Nazin, which was the son of Asli, which was the son of Nagge. Which was the son of Maath, which was the son of Mattathias, which was the son of Semit, which was the son of Joseph, which was the son of Juda, which was the son of Johanna, which was the son of Rhesa, which was the son of Zorobabel, which was the son of Salathiel, which was the son of Neri. Which was the son Melchi, which was the son of Addi, which was the son of Cosam, which was the son of Elmodam, which was the son of Er, which was the son of José, which was the son of Eliezer, which was the son of Jorim, which was the son of Matthat, which was the son of Levi, which was the son of Simeon, which was the son of Juda, which was the son of Joseph, which was the son of Jonan, which was the son of Eliakim, which was the son of Melea, which was the son of Menan, which was the son Mattatha, which was the son of Nathan, which was the son of David, which was the son of Jesse, which was the son of Booz, which was the son of Salmon, which the son of Naasson, which was the son of Aminadab, which was the son of Aram, which was the son of Esrom, which was the son of Phares, which was the son of Juda, which was the son of Jacob, which was the son of Isaac, which was the son of Abraham, which was the son of Thara, which was the son of Nachor, which was the son of Saruch, which was the son of Ragau, which was the son of Phalec, which was the son of Heber, which was the son of Sala, which was the son of Cainan, which was the son of Arphaxad, which was the son of Sem, which was the son of Noe, which was the son of Lamech, which was the son Mathusala, which was the son of Enoch, which was the son of Jared, which was the son of Maleleel, which was the son of Cainan, which was the son of Enos, which was the son of Seth, which was the son of Adam, which was the son of God." Luke iii. 23-38.

In these verses of Scripture does the evangelist trace through seventy-five generations, the descent of Jesus Christ from Eve.

The ablest commentators all agree "that all the prophets from Adam, and upward, had an idea of the final extinction of evil, at the resurrection, at the end of the world; had their eye upon the promise in that garden, and spoke of salvation and delivery by Jesus Christ, by his breaking the head, and destroying the devil and his kingdom."

At the resurrection Christ will totally destroy evil. This is adduced in Heb. ii. 15 and 1 John iii. 8, "For they that say such things declare plainly that they seek a country." "He that committeth sin is of the devil: for the devil sinneth from the beginning. For this purpose the Son of God was manifested that he might destroy the works of the devil."

We read in John iii 16, "For God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life."

At the restitution of all things, "God will swallow up death in victory." Isa. xxv. 8. This is to take place at the resurrection of the dead, for Paul quotes these words, and applies them to the resurrection of the dead, in Cor. xv. 54, "For when this corruptible shall have put on incorruption, and this mortal shall have put on immortality, then shall be brought to pass the saying that is written, Death is swallowed up in victory."

Again: "And no man hath ascended up to heaven, but he that came down from heaven, even the Son of Man which is in heaven." John iii. 13.

Again: "The first man is of the earth, earthy; the second man is the Lord from heaven." 1 Cor. xv. 47.

Again: "For David is not ascended into the heavens; but he saith himself, The Lord said unto my Lord, Sit thou on my right hand." Acts ii. 34.

Again: "Now that he ascended, what is it but that he also descended first into the lower parts of the earth? He that descended is the same also that ascended up far above all heavens, that he might fill all things." Eph. iv. 9, 10.

Again: "For in him dwelleth all the fulness of the godhead bodily." Col. ii. 9.

Again, "Know ye not that we are the temple of God, and that the Spirit of God dwelleth in you?" 1 Cor. iii. 16.

At the restitution of all things the "Lord God will wipe away all tears from off all faces." Isa. xxv. 8. The restitution of all things will not have been accomplished until the saints are in the presence of Christ. Sorrow and pain shall cease.

Isa. xl. 5. The glory of the Lord shall be revealed, and all flesh shall see it together. This is the declaration of Jehovah, for the prophet adds The mouth of the Lord hath spoken it."

The moment that Christ shall come on the cloud which shall waft him on its wings from the throne on which he now sits, all who sleep in the dust shall see him. The dead in Christ will rise first, says the apostle: then, we which are alive and remain, shall be caught up to meet the Lord in the air. What a sublime spectacle that will be! But the joy, and the glory! One rises, as he hears Christ calling him, and ascends under Christs raiment of white! Christ's people shall rise first, those who are not Christ's will be destroyed for the wages of sin is death.

Yes, the end is near. Awake and watch. Christ our Lord is coming.

Eugene B. Willard.

Fear Not!

"Fear not! I am thy shield and thy exceeding great reward."

A shield is a covering, a protection. I am thy covering, thy protection. Christ is our shield from the darts of the enemy: our protection when the storms of life o'er take us; our shelter in life, in death, in the great hereafter. He is our Rock, the only safe foundation for us to build upon. Our Rock, within whose shadow we may find rest. Our safe abiding place. He is also our reward. In him we find redemption—in him is life. Mortality is death! From the cradle to the grave is a downward road. But in Christ is immortality—life. Which means no tears, no sorrow, no sickness, no pain, no darkness. These are the heritage of immortality. Christ is our "shield and our exceeding great reward." He gives us protection now, and in the great hereafter laughter for tears, joy for sorrow, health for sickness, pleasure for pain, light for darkness, and life for death. Why need we fear what comes with this assurance to rely upon?

Editor Restitution:

We left Colorado Springs on the third, came by Denver, laid over one day, saw the city, which is a grand, lively city. From thence to Greely, which is a nice shady town; from Greely to Ft. Collins, which is nestled close to the mountains, and a grand farming country on the east, a nice town. Here I made inquiry for Bro. Hickox, but could not find him, the post master said he got his mail there. I did not find any one that knew him. From Ft. Collins we came to Laramie, Wyoming. We left Ft. Collins yesterday morning and our road has been through the mountains till about noon today. It is grand to travel through the mountains, but we came out on the east side. We have the range to cross yet, snow on the range is constantly in sight, from 25 to 40 miles away. We are all well and enjoying the trip splendid. We travel from 30 to 35 miles a day. More anon.

Yours in hope,

M. L. Adams.

Announcement.

The annual conference of the Church of God in Nebraska will be held at Blair, beginning on Friday, Sept. 8, 1899, and will continue for ten days.

We are anxious to make this the best meeting we have ever had. To do this we need your presence, your sympathy and your prayers.

Come and spend ten days with those of the like precious faith in the service of the blessed Master.

Before the meeting we should like to hear from each church belonging to the conference in regard to the officers they want for the coming year. Send your votes to the secretary at Arapahoe, Neb., by Sept. 3.

Once more asking your presence, your help and your prayers for the success of the meeting, I am

Your sister in the hope of eternal life,

Resa Gounox,
Secretary.

'Tis True.

There is a man the printer loves,
And he is wondrous wise; whene'er he writes the printer man he dotteth all his i's. And when he's dotted all of them with carefulness and ease, he punctuates each paragraph and crosses all his t's. Upon one side alone he writes, and never rolls his leaves:
and from the mun of ink a smile and mark "Insert" receives. And when a question he doth ask—taught wisely he hath been—he doth the goodly penny stamp, for postage back, put in. He gives the place from which he writes—his address the printer needs —and plainly writes his honored name, so he that runneth reads. He writes, revises, reads, corrects, and rewrites all again, and keeps one copy safe and sends one to the printer man.
And thus by taking little pains, at trifling care and cost, assures himself his manuscript will not be buried or lost. And so he speaks through all the land, and thousands hear his word, and in the coming day shall know how much he served the Lord.
So let all those who long to write, take pattern by this man, with jet black ink and paper white, do just the best they can; and then the printer man shall know and bless them as his friends, all through life's journey as they go, until that journey ends.

Unspotted From the World.

See how intolerant religion is. She starts with what men have declared to be impossible. She refuses to bring down her standards. She insists that men must come up to her. No man is thoroughly religious, she declares, unless he does this which is so hard to do, unless he goes through this world untainted, as the sunbeam goes through the mist.

Religion refuses to be degraded into a mere means of fulfilling the purposes of man's selfishness. She proclaims absolute standards, and will not lower them. She will not say to any man, weak and compromising with the world, "Well, your case is a hard one, and for you I waive a part of my demands. For you religion shall mean not to do this or that sin. These other sins, in consideration of your feebleness and temptations, I give you leave to do." Before every man, in the thickest of the world's contagions, she stands and says with her unwavering voice, "Come out. Be separate. Keep yourself unspotted from the world."

There is something sublime in this unsparingness. It also proves that our religion is divine when it undertakes for man so divine a task. It could not sustain itself in its great claim to be from God unless it took the high and godlike ground, that whoever named the name of Christ must depart from all iniquity.

Conference Notice.

The Kansas and Missouri Conference of the Church of God will meet for their annual Conference meeting in Sabetha, Kan., at 9 A. M. Sept. 7, 1899. A general meeting will be held in connection with this Conference, commencing on the 2nd. A programme will be arranged consisting of discourses, essays and song service. This will be our second annual meeting and we desire to make it the best. So let all come who can, and where there are a number of brethren let them send a delegate, so that the representation may be as good as possible. Sabetha is at the crossing of the Grand Island and Rock Island Railroad, sixty miles west of St. Joseph, Mo. A committee will meet all parties at the trains. Let all who come bring bedding; living tents will be furnished at a low rate, also meals after the order of the Omaha meeting.

For the committee.

Illinois Conference

The next annual Conference of the Churches of God in Christ Jesus will convene at Oregon, Ill. Friday, Sept. 22, and continue over Sunday. This will be our second annual conference. We are arranging for a profitable meeting. Brothers Eychoner, Conner, and Hadler have signified their intention to be present, while other evangelists have been invited. The programme will be published later. It is hoped that a good delegation will be present from each of the churches of Illinois, prepared to take an active part in the meeting, so an invitation is extended to the brethren throughout the State who are connected with any church society or otherwise, to be with us, also to brethren outside the State.

It is particularly requested that all who design to be present shall notify Brother J. A. Lindsay, Oregon, Ill. as soon as possible, who is preparing to make provision to entertain all who come from a distance free, and in order that this may be properly done he would like to know as early as possible in advance how many purpose coming.

Oregon is on the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy R. R.

Letters from isolated members who cannot be present will be received and read with pleasure. Either come or send a few words of comfort and good cheer.

Jas. W. Wilson, Pres.
Lyman Booth, Secy.

Report of Meeting.

The meeting held at BurrOak, in the Overmyer grove, last Sunday, resulted in four coming out on the Lord's side and going down in the watery grave, putting off the old man with all his evil deeds, and putting on Christ by baptism.

The meeting was good, and Bro. Austin preached four discourses. His preaching came from the heart, and it reached the hearts of his hearers, so we were all benefited by the meetings. The Class at North Union has concluded to once more put forward its best effort in the cause of Christ, and may one and all henceforth continue in the work.

We have no Chapel of our own, so have concluded to meet from house to house to study the Word.

Your brother in Christ.
G. W. Smith.

Our Helping Fund.

We whose names are given herewith, believing that it is our duty to provide a fund to be used in sending The Restitution to those too poor to pay for it themselves, do cheerfully give the amount set opposite our names for the purpose of aiding the managers of the paper to supply the needy ones. This fund to be applied as the donors request, (or when left to the publisher to decide) only for those who themselves state their circumstances and need, or whose case is presented by some one known to be trustworthy.

Low Fare to Philadelphia.

The thirty-third National Encampment and Reunion of the Grand Army of the Republic will be held at Philadelphia Sep. 4-9 inclusive. For this event special excursion tickets will be sold to Philadelphia via the Pennsylvania Lines Sep. 1, 2, 3, and 4.

Three forms of tickets will be on sale at special reduced fares, which will be as cheap over the Pennsylvania Route as any other line.

One cent per mile, except where the one way rate is $11.00 or less, will be the rate from ticket stations west of Pittsburgh. Tickets sold at this low fare will be good for continuous journey in both directions.

Tickets via Baltimore and Washington will be sold at the lowest one-way rate, and will be good for stop over at Baltimore and the National Capital, and also valid for an additional stop over in each direction east of Pittsburgh.

Tickets over diverse routes (going over one direct route and returning another) will be sold at the single fare rate plus $2.00. These tickets will also be good for stop over at Baltimore and Washington, in addition to one stop over in each direction east of Pittsburgh.

The return limit on all excursion tickets by these lines will be Sep. 12, which may be extended to Sep. 30 inclusive by depositing tickets with the joint Agent at Philadelphia.

All Pennsylvania lines lead to Philadelphia, and principal points on this system have daily through sleeping-car and coach service to the Quaker City, enabling passengers to go without changing cars. The route is via Pittsburgh and Harrisburg and by the most interesting portions of Pennsylvania.

Philadelphia is reached by daylight by all trains over the Pennsylvania route from points west of Pittsburgh. This gives visitors an opportunity to select quarters and get located before night.

The Pennsylvania station at Philadelphia is located in the heart of the city, opposite the great City Hall and to the hotel, boarding house and business portions.

For information about rates, time of trains and other advantages offered by these lines apply to local passenger and ticket agents, or address F. VanDusen, Chief Assistant General Passenger Agent, Pittsburgh, Pa.

The "Colorado Special" leaves Chicago 10:00 A. M. daily, arrives Denver 2:55 next day and Colorado Springs same evening, only one night en route. All meals in dining cars. Pacific Express leaves Chicago 10:30 P. M. daily, arrives Denver and Colorado Springs the second morning, no change of cars either train. For particulars apply to agents of connecting lines or A. H. Waggener, 6 Jackson place, Indianapolis, Ind.—sept. 2.

Works of Bro. Wiley Jones.

Twelve Works, or the true meaning of Hell, Soul, Spirit, Ghost, Paradise, Incorruption, Incorruptible, Immortal, Immortality, Forever, Everlasting, Eternal, and their originals as learned by their uses in the Bible. A tract of 40 pages, sold formerly at 10 cents a copy.

The Gospel of the Kingdom, an 8 page, double column tract, sold formerly at 10 cents a dozen.

Early Lessons, suitable for old and young, 30 pages, sold formerly for 10 cents a copy.

These works are excellent for use by those who wish to do missionary labor, and we offer them at such a low price that they should be out in a short time. Bro. Jones had large editions of these tracts printed, and by dying suddenly, and his Widow being in feeble health, we have undertaken the task of selling them. Her income is quite limited, and all that can be gotten out of the sales goes to her after expenses are paid. When you buy these tracts you get several times worth of your money, and also aid a worthy Sister, who will thank you for it.

Assorted package 30 cents per pound. Gospel of the Kingdom, alone at 25 cents per pound.

The Gospel of the Kingdom.

Advocated in a series of Ten Discourses. A Volume of 283 pages, cloth 25 cents, leather bound, embossed, and gilt edges, $1.00. By Wiley Jones. This book is so well known that it is only necessary to announce that it is for sale, to insure a market for it. We have undertaken to dispose of these books for the Widow of our lamented Brother Jones, and while getting them at this low price, you at the same time will help Sister Jones to much-needed money.

Work.

Up! there is no time for rest today
There's work to be done
For every willing heart and hand,
The blessed daylight through.
No man we know, rich, or poor,
Sure in the city ought,
Which hides beneath its crowded shades
The indoors of the lost.

Up, there's no crime so dark today,
Brother, of human kind,
In many a dark and sterile spot,
Are groping, halt and blind,
And there are burdens to be borne,
And fetters to be broke,
And trees of evil to be hewn down
With many a solemn stroke.

Up! for the world is full of sin,
The earth is sown with sin,
Quick springs up, like the noxious tares,
Amidst the good within.
And though at first 'tis by blades,
Of sickness and sunshine born,
The laborer needs but rest, and straight
They overtop his corn!

Then up! our dreams of rest today!
The foes are all around,
And some one sped in ambush lie,
And some do mate the ground.
Then let us gird the harness on
To wrestle, or to toil,
He who o'ercomes the golden crown,
He conqueror wins the spoil!

Judges Chapter 21.

1. And the sons of Israel took an oath in Mussepheth, saying, We will not a man of us give his daughter to Benjamin for a wife.

2. And the laity went to Bailthel and sat down there until evening in the presence of God and lifted up their voice and lamented with a great lamentation.

3. And said, Why, O Lord God of Israel, hath this occurred, that there lust taken away in thy visitations one tribe from Israel?

4. And it came to pass on the morrow that the laity arose also in the morning and built an altar there, and offered whole-burnt offerings services and peteering rites.

5. And the sons of Israel said, Who from all the tribes of Israel hath not come up unto the Lord in the church-assembly? Because the oath was a great one on those who had come up unto the Lord in Mussepheth, they saying with death shall he have died.

6. And the sons of Israel were comforted in relation to Benjamin, their brother and said, A cutting off today hath there been of one tribe from Israel.

7. What shall we do for the residue who are left for wives? And we have sworn in the Lord that we will not give unto them from our daughters for wives.

8. And they said, What one from the tribes of Israel is there that did not come up unto the Lord in Mussepheth? And lo, a man had not come to the church assembly to the camp from Jabeis of Galaad.

9. And the laity made a review and there was no man there from the inhabitants of Jabeis of Galiad.

10. And the synagoge sent twelve thousand men from the sons of ability (the host) and directed them, saying, Go your way and smite the inhabitants of Jabeis of Galiaad with the mouth of the sword.

11. And this shall ye do. Every male and every married woman shall ye anathematize, but the virgins shall ye share, and they did in this wise,

12. And they found from the inhabitants of Jabeis Galaad four hundred young women virgins who had not known a husband in the marriage relation, and they brought them into the camp in Seeloom which is in a land of Canaan.

13. And all the synagogue sent and talked with the sons of Benjamin in the rock of Remmoon and called them unto peace.

14. And Benjamin returned unto the sons of Israel in that period, and the sons of Israel gave unto them the women they had saved alive from the daughters of Jabeis of Galaad and in this wise was it pleasing to them.

15. And the laity were comforted in regard to Benjamin because the Lord had caused a cleaving hiss in the tribes of Israel.

16. And the leaders of the synagogue said, What shall we do for the residue for wives? Because women had disappeared from Benjamin.

17. And they said, There is an inheritance for the saved of the sons of Benjamin and a tribe must not fail from Israel.

18. Because we are not able to give wives unto them from our daughters, because we have sworn with the sons of Israel, saying, Accursed be the one who giveth a wife to Benjamin.

19. And they said, Io, forsooth there is a festival of the Lord in Seeloom from days unto days, and it is north of Baithel at the east by the highway that goeth up from Baithel to Sychem and from Lebonna at the south.

20. And they directed the sons of Benjamin, saying, Go your way and lie in ambush in the vineyards.

21. And ye will see, and lo, if the daughters of Seeloom come out to dance in choral processions, do ye also go out of the vineyards and seize of them each man a wife from the daughters of Seeloom, and go your way into the land of Benjamin.

22. And it will be whenever their fathers or their brethren come to judge in relation to you, ye shall also say unto them, show us mercy, because we have not received each man his wife in the arrangement made, because ye did not give unto them, as ye erred in the allotment.

23. And the sons of Benjamin did in this wise, and they took wives to the limit of their number from the choral dances whom they seized, and they went their way and returned into their inheritance, and built the cities and lived in them.

24. And the sons of Israel went about from there each man in that period to his own tribe and kindred, and each man went out from there into his own inheritance.

25. And in those days there was no king in Israel; each man did that which was right in his own sight.

End of the Judges

COMMENT.

We have illustrated here the working out of a retributive judgment upon obdurate sinners—a judgment of blood—rendered first against certain individuals of a tribe whose surrender to the demands of justice would have satisfied the judgment, but whose refusal to do justice involved not only this one tribe, but eleven more in fratricidal strife and internecine war with the direful results here depicted. If we accept the record we must believe that the original verdict rendered, the execution of which eventuated in this seemingly great calamity, was dictated by divine wisdom and the requirements of a divine sense of justice. What we do see clearly illustrated is the futility of resistance to a divine decree when we know it to be such. In the greater light of this nineteenth century gospel international warfare between Christian nations over matters which if only individuals were concerned could be and could have been any time within the last fifteen hundred years settled by the ordinary processes of judicial procedure, would seem like perpetuating the worst sort of barbarism and to be absolutely unworthy of the name of any sort of civilization. It is hard to conceive of any difference or disagreement arising between two Christian nations that could not be as easily settled in properly-constituted courts of justice, as between two Christian individuals.

If this old picture lesson painted again before the public eye in this period of agitation to promote international law and judicial procedure, shall have carried home to the heart and mind of the general public the divine lesson written upon this old palimpsest of the past, the purpose of the writer in restoring the record to the public view will have been accomplished. Moreover recall to mind Paul's startling statement and accompanying query of reproof.

"Know ye not that ye are destined to judge angels and can ye not judge in little matters between yourselves, etc.

The Gospel Recovered. No. 20.

DRAWBACKS AND HINDRANCES.

"That they all may be one ... that the world may believe that thou hast sent me."

The article No. 17 was occupied with the views of Dr. Thomas as to the terms of the preaching of John the Baptist, Jesus, and the eighty-two disciples, namely, "The kingdom of heaven is at hand." The Doctor held that it was the King and the kingdom that was "at hand" or "had approached." I mentioned that this view had been the occasion of controversy among the brethren in Britain. I observed also that this subject had been brought before the Doctor's notice as early as 1848, by a contributor to the "Gospel Banner." Nottingham, England. I have noticed since that a contributor to the Christian Messenger, for October, 1840, also an earlier organ of the Reformation in Nottingham, England, in "Remarks on Dr. Thomas' Address" to the Readers, has some pithy words on the subject. He says, "There is a kingdom upon earth which the God of heaven owns as his. It must be well known to all the readers of the evangelical history, that the announcement of the near approach of that kingdom form a chief article in the proclamation of John the harbinger. "Repent," said he, "for the kingdom of heaven is at hand." And it was the burthen of the proclamation of the apostles during the whole of Jesus our Lord on earth, as specially instructed by himself.....But after the ascension of Jesus to the right hand of power, we hear no more of the kingdom of heaven being at hand, because it was not set up; and on the Pentecost which followed was the door of the kingdom thrown open by Peter, who had the "keys," first to the Jews and afterward to the Gentiles, and so on. The Doctor's Address had been chiefly on the kingdom and throne of David, and it is rather singular that in his reply to this contributor, he confined himself to this, and took no notice of the kingdom of heaven being at hand or the argument founded on the proclamation.

Before touching on the discussion which this subject occasioned in Britain, it might be of interest to notice another question closely related to the one just referred to, especially as it became mixed up with that discussion. The Doctor published an interpretation which seemed to many of the brethren quite as extraordinary and inadmissible as that already under consideration. I refer to certain statements of our Lord in his prophecy on Mount Olivet, and to others by the Apostles in their letters, in which the terms "at hand" occur; for example, Phil. iv. 5, "The Lord is at hand;" 1 Pet. iv. 7, "The end of all things is at hand;" James v. 8, "The coming of the Lord draweth nigh." The editor of the "Herald's" explanation is that such statements being made in writings addressed to Jewish disciples and not Gentiles, the Lord came at the destruction of Jerusalem.

It is desirable that extracts be quoted at some length so as to do full justice to the arguments which the Doctor employed.

In a series of articles occupying 47 columns, entitled "The Last Days of Judah's Commonwealth" in "Herald of the Kingdom," Vol. IX., 1859, he says p. 147, "The Coming of the Little Horn of the Goat's army against Jerusalem to destroy it and the temple and so to take away the daily sacrifice, was the coming of the Anointed Prince Royal to take away the kingdom of God from the Chief Priests and Pharisees.....But upon what principle was the coming of the People of the Prince Royal against the city and temple the coming of the Prince Royal himself? Upon the universally established principle of law that qui facit per alium, facit per se; or, he who works through others, works by himself..... The Roman armies were the military embodiment of the power of Jesus of Nazareth, King of the Jews, for the destruction of the Mosaic Commonwealth, so that where the Roman Power was, there was the Anointed Prince Royal of Judah, whether he was visible to mortal eyes or not. He worked by the Roman army, and came in their coming."

Again, "The approaching of this nearness of the Son of Man was to be as the coming forth of the lightning from the East, and its shining unto the west.....Such was the army given to the Little Horn against the Daily when marching against Jerusalem the Son of Man, coming in the lightning to burn up the city of murderers of his servants."

"But lightning does not always shine out of the east.....But in the case before us, the sign was to come from that direction 'under the heaven' of the Fourth Beast dominion. The army with the lightning of the spear, and its soaring eagles was to come marching from the east. They who were mindful of the words spoken by Jesus looked for an invasion of Judea from that quarter, and not from Egypt on the south or Anatolia on the northwest. And from the east it came according to the sign for, as Gibbon testifies, 'Titus was adored by the Eastern Legions, which, under his command had recently achieved the conquest of Judea.'" v. p. 170, 171.

Again in Vol. X., 1860 p. p. 273, 274, article of 26 columns, "Prophecy of Mount Olivet," he says, "In the 23rd and 24th of Matthew, two comings are evidently brought to view; first, that mentioned in the 30th verse of the former, when Israel as a people shall look Jesus with acclamation as the manifestation of Jehovah; and second, the coming of the Son of Man, not 'in the clouds' of heaven with power and great glory,' but with the publicity of the coming to destroy Jerusalem by Titus and his Romans."

"The coming of the Son of Man ... the Apostles refer when they ... suffering persecution under the ... of their unbelieving ... men, 'Cast not away your confidence, which hath great recompense of reward. For ye have need of patience, after ye have done the will of God, ye might receive the promise. For yet a little while (seven years more), and he that shall come, will come, and will not tarry.' x. 36. There was consolation in this, for after the coming, the Jews would have no more power to persecute."

So the Apostle James when he writes to the Hebrews thus: "Be patient, therefore, brethren, unto the coming of 'the Lord' establish your hearts; for the coming of the 'Lord draweth nigh  Behold the Judge standeth before 'the door.' v. 7-11. This coming of the Lord was nigh some 1800 years ago. James wrote in A. D. 62, and the Lord came eight years afterwards, when his general Titus destroyed the city."

Having given these extracts, I submit that the reader will not be surprised to learn that many brethren were stumbled at the position taken up by Dr. Thomas on this subject. At the same time his views and arguments found supporters, and as liberty of thought and speech was highly prized, it was natural that discussion should be the result. How this came about, and the various ways in which the subject was viewed, must be left for another paper. Meantime I have to submit that the sort of contention manifested by the editor of the "Herald of the Kingdom" in putting forward views like the foregoing cannot be freed from the suspicion of Drawbacks and Hindrances of the Gospel.

J. CAMERON.

"Come to Christ! Come, take up your cross and follow him!" pleaded the preacher. A young man came forward and enlisted as a soldier of Jesus Christ. On the following night he was welcomed into the fellowship of the congregation. Then he went back and took his seat—that was all. Did he indeed heed the "Follow me!" of him who still calls? Ah! my brother, that was not following him; that was only beginning. Listen: "If any man will come after me let him deny himself and take up his cross—and go back and sit down? No. "Let him take up his cross daily and follow me."—Lookout.

Obituary.

We had hoped that Sister Wiree would be able to write a notice of Bro. J. P. Weethee, but caring for a sick sister occupies all her time now, and we are compelled to give in place the following history of his life, copied from the Athens County Gazette of Aug. 10, 1899.

"Dr. J. P. Weethee, one of the oldest and most widely known citizens of Athens County, passed away at his home at Mt Auburn near Millfield on last Tuesday. Death resulting from a stroke of paralysis which he suffered about three weeks ago.

Dr. Weethee is a character who will long remain in the minds of the people of this section of Ohio, his peculiar views on theological and philosophical subjects, and his energy in expounding them, have won for him a place of prominence among the writers on these subjects, in this country. Dr. Weethee's life was one of vast and varied experience, having been born in the wilderness of Dover Township, in 1812 of New England parentage.

His father and mother came from southern New Hampshire to Ohio in 1798. Born in the wilderness as he was, and removed hundreds of miles in distance and weeks in time from the refined centers of the East, the subject of this memoir was necessarily brought up under parental instruction. During the first fifteen years of his life his scholastic training, like that of hundreds of others, was limited to two or three months in the year. Though his rustic instructors were conscientious and sincere in their work, they were profoundly ignorant of the science and art of pedagogy, and were entire strangers to those branches with which the youths of a dozen years are conversant today.

In order to prepare the way for a higher education Prof. Weethee entered the academical department of the Ohio University in 1827. In 1832 he graduated from the institution, and a month after having the degree of A. B. conferred upon him, he began the study of medicine under the private instruction of Dr. A. V. Medbery, of Athens, Prof. Weethee remained with Dr. Medbery two years, and during that time he gave considerable attention to Sunday schools, religious meetings and Scripture investigations. In 1837 he went to Pittsburgh, Penn., and placed himself under the care of the Pennsylvania Presbytery of the Cumberland Presbyterian church and began at once the study of the ministry.

Later on at Uniontown, Pa., Madison college, a sectarian institution, was forced to suspend, and Prof. Weethee by the trustees was invited to open a school in the college building. The school grew in popularity and frequently a hundred pupils attended each session. His mental labor here was stupendous. He began teaching at sunrise and heard from fifteen to twenty classes a day. On Saturdays he rode eighteen miles to a church, preached in the evening and on Sunday morning, and riding home in the afternoon was ready to commence college work Monday morning.

In 1842, Prof. Weethee was elected president of Beverly college, Washington County. This institution was under the care of the Pennsylvania synod of the Cumberland Presbyterian church. In 1844, by invitation, he visited Cincinnati, and in the following year he removed to the Queen City and took charge of the Second Advent congregation. Remaining there until 1848, he removed to Boston, Mass., and took charge of the Chardon Street church, where he remained until 1851. While residing in Boston he held protracted meetings in New York, Philadelphia, Lancaster, Baltimore, Brooklyn, Providence, Bangor, Me., Woodstock, New Brunswick and Halifax, and Nova Scotia. In the fall of 1851, Prof. Weethee again returned to Ohio, and taking charge of the Amesville academy, and continued in that institution two years, teaching and preaching. In 1855, he accepted the presidency of the college at Waynesburg, Pa., and remaining there years he again came to Ohio, and began teaching at his residence on Mount Auburn, which afterward grew into the incorporated Weethee college. Though the institution has been closed many years, and though, owing to the location, but a few students attended at one time, the college won educational popularity, and many prosperous men and women proudly refer to it as their alma mater.

Prof. Weethee has given much time to geological researches to ascertain the mineral resources of the Sunday Creek valley. He was without doubt more thoroughly conversant with the mineral deposits of the valley than any other man, and by his numerous writings on the subject has aided materially in their development. He was a profound thinker and spent considerable time in writing on the prophetic Scriptures. He is author of three large volumes, "Armageddon." "The Coming Age," "The Eastern Question." These are replete with euridite expositions and philosophic thought.

At the close of the session of the Ohio University two years ago, Prof. Weethee had the honor of doctor's degree bestowed upon him by the trustees for his ability and zeal in the cause of learning.

At the age of twenty-four years he was married to Miss Anna C. Kreppe, of Philadelphia, with whom he dwelt in domestic happiness for over half a century. Many years ago she was called from this veil of tears, and in December, 1886, Prof. Weethee was again married to Miss Ella Barber, of Salem, who survives him.

The funeral services will be held this morning, at the family residence, at 10 o'clock. Interment will take place at the Nye cemetery, near Chauncy.

Died Aug. 13th, at the home of Leroy Law, five miles west of Anthony, Harper County, Kan., where she was visiting and being cared for by loving hearts and willing hands for a few days, Mrs. Annie Berry, aged 36 years, 7 months and 17 days, was the widow of Wm. A. Berry, who died from an accident happening from moving an engine two years ago. The shock caused by her husband's death she never recovered from, and from that time disease set in and all that tender hearts and willing hands could do, could not rescue her from the enemy of all mankind, which is death.

Our sister and mother leaves to mourn her loss a brother and three children and a large circle of friends. She and her twin and only brother, L. C. Peterson, were born in Pike Co., Ill., and when infants their father died, and when they were at the age of 13 the best and only protection the mother, was called to lay down her burden, which left the two orphans to fight the battle of life alone in a cold and heartless world.

At the home of L. Law the funeral services were held and words of comfort were spoken by S. P. Oliver, from Job xiv. 14, and proved by the inspired Word of God that the sister and mother would live again, and on the renewed earth would meet the bereaved friends, where there will be no farewell word spoken for the inhabitants shall no more say, "I am sick," and may that time come quickly is my prayer. By one who was at the service.

D. B. CLEVELAND.

The worst enemies the Lord Jesus Christ had were not heathen or irreligious men, who rejected the Scriptures, and refused to go to the place of worship. They were men who loved to pray, and to offer long prayers. They were men who fasted twice a week; men of whom the Lord Jesus said, "They sit in Moses' seat, and whatsoever they bid you, these observe and do:" they who built the sepulchres of the prophets and garnished the tombs of the righteous, and said, "If we had been in the days of our fathers, we should not have been partakers with them in the blood of the prophets." Yet, those very men slew the Son of God. The strongest words the Master used against any men were used against men of this class, who were rigid in adherence to rite, and ceremony, and ritual. Of them he said, "Ye offspring of vipers: how shall ye escape the judgment of hell?"

The Restitution.

THE RESTITUTION advocates the final "restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this and the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint-heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ, and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for remission of sins, pre-requisites of the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

In the Master's Service.

Self is not master with us, but Christ; and our own pleasures and tastes must always be subordinated to his work and his life. And our one object, our whole purpose in life should be, nay, must be the formation and development within us of the Christ-life. One remarkable feature of that life is persistency and constancy in the work of God, so that we take his own watch-word, "I must work the work of God," while it is day, because of the coming night when I cannot work. Hence, though there are periods in all lives, when, like Jeremiah, they would sit in silence, the burning heat within becomes so intense, that the soul is compelled to utter in some way the stilled message with which it has been entrusted. They would like to have rest, but as they have respect to the recompense of reward through the approval of the blessed Lord, they dare not long sit in silence, but as they have opportunity, by God's favor they are compelled to make known his gracious overtures to man now, and his purpose of universal good in the imminent future.

Beloved in the Lord, we can scarcely conceive how we can fully enter, or rather enter fully into [illegible] to our Lord unless we have done something toward the satisfaction he will realize from the travail of his soul. If we think over our many short-comings, and mistakes and forgetfulness, and lukewarmnesses which have marked our journey Zionward, what insignificant offerings our ourselves will be compared to what he gave for us!

If we do not labor together with him, there is little prospect of suffering for him; and this, be it remembered, is the condition of reigning with him. When we occasionally succeed in winning a soul, it gives us greater joy that anything else under heaven; and it has sunniness settled down upon us that it is akin to, or a foretaste of the joy we shall experience when such crowns of rejoicing are received in the day of the Lord.

The long dark night of sin and suffering and death is, we verily believe, far spent, and the day is at hand. The Sun of righteousness will ere long arise with healing in his wings, for those who are looking for him, that is waiting for him, expecting him; all of which may imply readiness, or preparedness for his coming, and an intense eagerness for the fulfilment of some great promise.

Again, beloved, let me remind you that such an expectant attitude can only grow out of an assurance that in obedience to the Lord's command they are occupying till he come. For such a rest remaineth. And the weary only can fully enjoy rest. May reader and writer enter into that rest. Amen.

A Note of Warning.

On Aug. 24 some people came to the brethren in this city who have charge of our church building, and representing that on account of a division in a church with which they had been connected, they having become tired of the doctrine held by their Church, and a minister of their kind wishing to come and preach for them a few times, asked the use of our house. Everything seeming fair and honorable, the brethren consented to them having it for five discourses, and they promptly paid the cost in advance.

A man, "Elder Haight," and wife came and commenced meeting Saturday evening Aug. 26, ending on Thursday evening, Aug. 29. They soon exhibited the nature of the meetings, by developing into an agency of "Dr." John Alexander Dowie's "Zion," headquarters at Chicago, Ill. From an exchange printed in California we learn that similar tactics were resorted to in Seattle Wash., with an Advent Church. They securing the use of the building for five discourses, under the impression that they were engaged in other Christian work, and then could not be put out till their contract was fulfilled, notwithstanding the insulting language used. A member of the abused Church says of their experience, "As to their work here, it was a repetition of Bishop Jones' experience in Chicago so far as their vile and filthy talk was concerned, denouncing everybody and everything that differs with them. If the devil has any more such playmates out on the road, let all Christian people give them a wide berth."

This man Jones is a "Bishop" of the Free Methodist Church, and his experience as given by himself is in substance this: He had been asked frequently as he traveled about, concerning the work of Dowie, and being in Chicago thought to better inform himself by attending a service at "Zion." He describes the choir of 120 men, women and children coming in with black skirts, and white capes over their shoulders. Then Mrs. Dowie coming on the platform adorned in rich attire, with much jewelry sparkling on her person, followed by Mr. Dowie, clad in a long purple robe with streamers suspended from each arm. His discourse was a review of an article in the Interior, a Presbyterian paper printed in Chicago, and edited by Mr. Gray, and in which one Mr. Simpson was mentioned. Dowie took some time to denounce these men and at last asked all who believed Mr. Simpson to be a "liar, hypocrit, and servant of the devil" to say yes. Then the trained "seventies" cried out "yes." The call for negative brought from this Bishop Jones a "no," and immediately all began to denounce him, calling him a coward and many base and insulting names. Dowie warmed up to his work, took off his robe, etc., even to collar and neck tie, posed as a pugilist, and with doubled up fists cried, "I am John Alexander Dowie, I am a heavy-weight; come on, Dr. Gray, we will fight this thing out." He then went on for two hours, calling Mr. Gray many names, and using language that Mr. Jones says is "unfit to be repeated in a respectable paper." This ended in a vote again being taken when Mr. Gray who [illegible] crit, liar, etc and Mr. Jones and wife not standing up to this call they were denounced again as "liars and cowards" and being the "devil's fools," not only by Dowie himself, but the service being closed, a howling mob surrounded them and heaped insult and abuse on them.

The man Haight who was in Plymouth took occasion to abuse and insult every one of any and every church and society who did not believe in Dowie and his methods. He used vile and foul language, and a fight was very near at hand on the last night. The Church here feels keenly the disgraceful outrage on Christianity occurring in our house, and in the local papers the officers have published to our townsmen a statement that we deplore the matter as much as any one can.

We are not going to discuss the so-called "Divine Healing" business. We wish simply to warn our readers against the most stupendous and outrageous deception of the time we are living in, and name as such "Dr." John Alexander Dowie, and his scheme of a "Zion" and the "Christian Catholic Church" he is working to build up. We are not egotistical enough to think that our statement that he is a fraud makes it so. Not by any means. But we have watched this man's career with much interest, and have held aloof from publishing anything regarding his work, but when such deceptive means are used to get in, and then such villainous language and actions are indulged in, it seems to us that we should be criminal to withhold a warning cry to others.

In closing his article Bishop Jones says, "Whatever the provocation, no Christian minister could ever make use of such abusive, indecent language as I heard from the platform of Zion Tabernacle. How an intelligent person with the faintest ray of gospel light on his conscience can sit from week to week and feed on such disgusting denunciations of everything and everybody that is not in perfect harmony with 'Zion's' movements is a mystery I cannot solve. Of one thing I am sure, God works no miracles of healing through a man who is destitute of the Christ like spirit." To which we say Amen.

When Jesus was here he said to his followers "Let no man deceive you," and now down in the closing year of this far off century, we simply call attention to this warning given so long ago, but fuller of meaning now than when first uttered. Brethren, beware. You will not be deceived by the atheist, the infidel, or the blatant blasphemer. You will be able to tell at once his character. The "deceiver" comes to you in "sheep's clothing."

"If any man have not the spirit of Christ, he is none of his." Rom. viii 9. "Beloved, believe not every spirit, but prove the spirits whether they are of God, (why) because many FALSE prophets are gone out into the world." 1 John iv. 1.

Trust.

"Put not your trust in princes, nor in the son of man, in whom there is no help. Psa. cxlvi. 3.

I recently called on an eminent minister of the Methodist church, hoping to obtain a little human sympathy in some matters that bore rather heavily upon me. It did not take me long to see that the dear man needed himself, just what I was seeking.

Thirty years had come and gone since I had visited mine. Then his home was like any other well-appointed home—his children and their mother sitting around and asking all kinds of questions, the good natured husband and father answering kindly and patiently. What a change 30 years has wrought in this family. When I entered his house the other day I was about to ask, where is your family; but he stopped me by saying, "I am the last rose of summer," not blooming alone, but suffering alone. Wife and children all dead. My grandson and myself live here by ourselves, yes, we have a house-keeper."

I saw at a glance, that the dear man needed sympathy himself, he was apparently in greater trouble than I have yet experienced. So I left with my story untold. Yes, I will tell it to Jesus. We have no other such a friend and brother. "Happy is he that hath the God of Jacob for his help." I think the greatest drawback to Christian progress is the habit of looking for supplies from our fellow creature, instead of looking to God for every thing. A soldier is supposed to go to the commissary every day for his rations. The Christian soldier should do likewise. "Give us of your oil for [illegible]" was the foolish request made by the foolish virgins, and it is just as foolish to be for ever on the hunt for some fellow mortal to steady and comfort us lest we fall, better go to Headquarters. How very assuring the invitation "Ho, every one that thirsteth come; And he that hath no money come; come unto me all ye that are weary and I will give thee rest."

I have a very dear friend in Ireland (a Roman Catholic), who complains of her priest being so very cold hearted. His words have no comfort for her, being cold, lifeless. How much better it would be if she would turn away from the son of man, in whom there is no help, and deal direct with the risen Savior for herself. There is considerable crying to man for other things in this life besides spiritual things. The crying spirit causes men to stoop to all kinds of meanness, lest they offend those who are clothed in a little brief authority.

Send Tracts.

Tonight finds me far away from home and the friends of my boyhood, strange scenes and strange faces greet me on every hand, unknown voices fall upon my ear. I am truly a stranger in a strange land, seeking a city whose builder and maker is God, and as I sit alone to night, old and familiar faces peer out of the well remembered past, each speaking tales of joy, sorrow, sickness and death: low and lonely mounds are studded with flowers of sacred remembrance, but there is an ever watchful eye that never grows weary, that seeth the lone pilgrims on their homeward way, that heareth every prayer. Surely he that marketh the sparrow's fall will care for the one who is thinking and longing for his return. And as I stop to think of the many and precious truths of the Bible lore, I ask myself the question, "What would Jesus have me do?" And the answer came Bible lore, "Go sow by all waters," and this morning found me wending my way among the poor districts of the wicked city of Pueblo, with tracts and papers, and as I went from door to door I saw misery and poverty, as only one can see and I would often ask the Master, "O Lord, how long will thou delay thy coming?" And as I often pressed a tract in some poor ragged waif's hand, telling him to bear the message to his home, swift little feet would soon carry him from sight with God's love to fallen man, or as I would cast one inside the cottage of penury and want, I left the rest with our heavenly parent, who says his Word shall not return unto him void, but shall accomplish that where unto it is sent.

Ah, if you dear ones could only have seen how some received the Word, you could never allow a paper or tract to lay idle, the true literature belongs to the Lord and must be in service. Go scatter the precious seed, 'tis glorious work, one poor old soul called me "her boy." The dusk dusky faces would light up with a smile and the faltering lips would utter words of "thank you."

To you who have homes of plenty and some to spare, send the tidings to some one. The silent little tracts will oft times do more than a pulpit discourse. Yes, I believe this is the greatest way to scatter the news of Jesus' coming. How much I wish I had enough tracts and papers to flood this wicked city with. I will only be here a short time, and will visit a few days at my home near Oxford, Kan., as I go on my way to Ind., and if any one wishing to have tracts and papers scattered I will gladly do it, and they will reach me at the above address. Nothing has given me so much real joy in the work as to go out into the slums of sin and folly, and cast the bread upon the troubled waters, and I pray that the seed that has been sown here will bring forth many folds. Brother, Sister, what are we doing for the Master? We must work for him, we are not our own. "Whatsoever ye do, do all to the glory of God." Do you and I? All means our every word and action. Where is your conversation to night; where has it been in the past? Is it on things above? No half way service in this. Parents, what is your example to your children and your neighbor's children? Young brothers and sisters, what is your example, your influence? Do you do all to the glory of God? No time to delay, we are almost home, no time for worldliness, no time for wealth or gain. "Seek first the kingdom." Are you and I? What would Jesus have me do? is the question for each of us. Go seek his work, and there learn what is your duty. Bid the world and its follies adieu. Go scatter precious seed among the highways of sin and great will be your reward in heaven.

Dear ones of like faith:

We are still striving to be found among the overcomers when the Noblemen comes from the far country. We meet every first day for worship. We were cheered and comforted by a visit from Brother and Sister Neil of Cleveland, Ohio. Their earnest words to the class at Salem, Ohio, encouraged us, and it is with pleasure that we remember their visit. We have Bible study and some one appointed to have a lesson on any subject they may choose. I will send last Sabbath's lesson and perhaps some, who, like us, are few in number, and without a speaker may gather together and have Bible study and lessons, though few in number. The Bible says, "Forsake not the assembling of yourselves together."

Your Sister, in hope.

THY KINGDOM COME.

The prayer Christ taught his disciples should be the prayer of every follower of Christ. "Thy kingdom come, thy will be done on earth," can only be fulfilled when the King comes to reign over the kingdom that has been promised, ever since the calling of Israel as a nation, promised to them if they would obey God. The promise in Exodus xix. 5, "Now, therefore if ye will obey my voice indeed, and keep my covenant. Then shall ye be a peculiar treasure unto me, and ye shall be unto me a kingdom of priests, and a holy nation. And all the people answered together these things will we do." This was God's people, God's kingdom, with God as their King, if they obeyed his voice.

But how soon they forgot their promise, how soon we hear them calling for an earthly king. "Give us a king like unto other nations; And the Lord said unto Samuel, hearken unto the people, for they have not rejected thee. But they have rejected me." And Israel had kings ruling over them as other nations. But still it is God's kingdom, for it is said of King Solomon, he reigned as king on the throne of God's kingdom, "Blessed be the Lord thy God, which delighteth in thee to set thee on his throne, to be king for the Lord thy God. Because thy God loved Israel to establish them forever. And many kings ruled over Israel, and did evil in the sight of God. Therefore was the kingdom overthrown. Thus saith, the Lord God, Remove the diadem, take off the crown." Earthly kings are no more to rule over the Kingdom of God. They have been tried and found wanting. "Therefore, I will overturn, overturn, overturn it until he comes whose right it is to reign, and behold the days come, saith the Lord, that I will perform that good thing, which I have promised unto the house of Israel and Judah. I will cause a branch of Righteousness to grow up unto David, and he shall execute judgment and righteousness in the land."

In the New Testament we find the fulfillment of the promise of a righteous Ruler and King, in the birth of Jesus, the Son of God; born to be a King, as was promised unto David. The angel's words to Mary, "Thou shall call his name Jesus, and he shall be great, and he shall be called the Son of the Highest, and the Lord God shall give unto him the throne of his father David, and he shall reign over the house of David forever. Thus is the promise to David fulfilled, that one should grow up and execute righteousness in the land, though the kingdom was overturned under the rule of earthly kings. Yet we see that God has not forgotten his promise to his people, and he has come whose right it is to rule. And is the kingdom set up at this time; do the people accept their King, he who came so humble preaching the glad tidings of the kingdom, and teaching eternal life and a home in his kingdom? No, for we find him after teaching and healing and doing the work of his Father, teaching his disciples this prayer, "Thy kingdom come, thy will be done," shows that it is still in the future something that they must pray and watch for, and we today must look to the fulfilment of the promise, for it will be fulfilled, for God hath promised it, and all through the blessed Word we find the theme of his servants, the Prophets, and the promise that the whole earth shall be filled with his glory. Though the King was slain he arose victorious over death and the grave, for his voice is speaking through the ages. "Behold, I am he that liveth and was dead and am alive forever more." He is now at the right hand of the Father, until all things are fulfilled spoken of by the holy prophets. Then he will come again with glory and power to reign over the nations; then will the earth be filled with the glory of the Lord, and his kingdom be one of righteousness and the redeemed of the Lord shall rule as priests and kings, on the earth and God's kingdom shall be all in all, so let us ever pray, "Thy kingdom come, thy will be done on earth as it is in heaven."

The Transvaal Question.

Joseph Chamberlain talked to his fellow-townsmen of Birmingham on Saturday about the Transvaal question. He told them that the crisis is not passed—Kruger, who "dribbles each reply like water from a squeezed sponge," has coupled his concessions with impossible demands—and that "the situation is too fraught with danger, it is too straining for indefinite postponement." Then Mr. Chamberlain repeated the threat of Lord Salisbury that if President Kruger does not come to terms speedily "we shall not hold ourselves limited by what we have already offered, but having taken this matter in hand, we will not let go until we have secured conditions which once for all will establish us as the paramount power in South Africa." Mr. Chamberlain said in conclusion that "if the rupture we have done everything in our power to avoid is forced upon us, we shall have the support not only of the vast majority of Britons but of the whole empire."

The question of more immediate importance is whether in the event of a rupture the British government will have the support of a majority of the fighting men in South Africa. If not, then the Boer nut will be a hard one to crack. While Mr. Chamberlain was talking at Birmingham, Commandant General Joubert was talking to the Boers at Johannesburg. He told them that their government would never cease to strive for peace, but that the Transvaal, if forced to take up arms to maintain its independence, "would fight to the death." The Boers may be obstinate enough to do that. Obstinacy is in their blood. And if the Boers can manage to make the English strike the first blow, they will have the sympathy and may have the armed aid of their kinsfolk in the Orange Free State and elsewhere in South Africa. Then the difficulties attending the carrying on of a successful campaign against the Boers would be multiplied. Then there would be need of armies instead of regiments. To make Great Britain the "paramount power" in south Africa would require the expenditure of much blood and treasure.

So while Mr. Chamberlain says "the knot must be loosened or else we shall have to find other ways of untying it" he will hesitate before he draws the sword to cut the knot. The Boers may well hesitate also before they pursue a course which makes an appeal to arms necessary. Defeat would deprive them of everything they hold dear. Therefore each side may talk sternly and determinedly for some time to come until President Kruger concedes a little more and Mr. Chamberlain can say he is satisfied.—Tribune.

Russia in Alaska Dispute.

London, Aug. 26.—Upon authority of undoubted reliability it has been ascertained that into the Alaska dispute there has crept the craftiness of Russian diplomacy. Russia, it can be stated, will do everything, with every possible energy, to prevent the practical cohesion of the two great English-speaking nations. In all her embassies instructions have been received to thwart the Anglo-American understanding.

A prominent diplomat, who is intimately acquainted with the details of the negotiations of the last few years, says:

"In any arrangement looking to a working agreement between England and the United States Russia sees the defeat of her dearest projects. I believe her intense activity in China is to no small extent due to her fear that Anglo-Saxon power, once centralized, will sweep everything before it in the far East.

Brooding the rapid realization of this nightmare she is making hay while the sun shines in the meanwhile intriguing to the utmost to tie the hands of those who are working to materialize Anglo-American sentiment. The latest evidence of this is in the Alaskan affair, though, strictly speaking, it is a matter of internal politics and would have been settled long ago if left solely to Great Britain and the United States.

Russia has managed to suggest motives never dreamed of by America by distorting facts. It is impossible for me to divulge exactly how or to what extent Russia got her paws into the dispute, but the attitude of her press, officinl to the core, is quite sufficient to show her motives."—Tribune.

Serious Clash in China.

Shanghai, China, Aug. 27.—British blue jackets and Russian Cossacks are face to face at Hankow, and a warship is on its way to uphold British rights in a controversy that may assume international proportions.

As the outcome of a dispute regarding some lands at Hankow, on the Yang-tse-Kiang, about 700 miles from the sea, which were purchased in 1863 by the concern of Jardine, Matheson & Co., but were subsequently included in the new concessions to Russia, the owners under the advice and protection of Mr. Hurst, the British Consul, sent workmen to fence in the tract.

After the work was begun a dozen Cossacks from the Russian consulate appeared on the scene and forcibly ejected the workmen.

The Captain of the British second-class gunboat Woodlark, specially designed for river service, after consulting with Mr. Hurst, landed a party of blue jackets and moved the Woodlark within firing distance of the Russian consulate. For a time a fight seemed imminent, but nothing further occurred. The blue jackets are now guarding the property.

The British third-class gunboat Esk has been dispatched to Hankow from this port. Great Britain evidently is determined to uphold British rights.

A clear-headed Christian writer draws the following picture of selfishness: "Selfishness is the most utter destitution of a human being. It can bring nothing to his relief: it adds soreness to his sorrows; it sharpens his pains; it aggravates all the losses he is liable to endure; and when goaded to extremes, it often turns destroyer and strikes its last blows on himself." The selfish man is always his own worst enemy. He is sure to cheat himself when intending to serve himself.

Those who know most are generally the best listeners and the most anxious to know more.

For Our Children.

I Used to Kill Birds.

I used to kill birds in my boyhood,
Bluebirds and robins and wrens,
I hunted them up in the mountains,
I hunted them down in the glens,
I never thought it was sinful—
I did it only for fun—
And I had rare sport in the forest
With the poor little birds and my gun.

But one beautiful day in the spring-time
I spied a brown bird in a tree,
Merrily swinging and chirping,
As happy as a bird could be,
And raising my gun in a twinkling,
I fired, and my aim was too true;
For a moment the little thing fluttered,
Then off to the bushes it flew.

I followed it quickly and coolly,
And there to my sorrow I found,
Right close to its nest full of young ones,
The little bird dead on the ground.
Poor birdies! For they were calling
But they could never be fed,
For the kind mother bird who had loved them
Was lying there bleeding and dead.

I picked up the bird in my anguish,
I stroked the wee motherly thing
That could never more feed its dear young ones,
Nor dart through the air on swift wing.
And I made a firm vow in that moment,
When my heart with such sorrow was stirred,
That never again in my lifetime
Would I shoot a poor innocent bird.

A Hebrew Lad's Conversion.

"One Sunday morning, a young lady on her way to school, met a party of boys going to the skating pond. She gave them a bright 'good morning' and added with the pleasant smile that was so winning to her own class, 'Come with me boys. I am going to Sunday school, won't you come with me?'

They stopped and gazed at her in surprise, one boldly asked, 'Why, what do you do there?'

'Many nice things,' she said. 'We sing together, read the Bible, talk about it, and have a good time.'

'I am going,' returned he, the boys tried to stop him, but in vain.

On entering the school the young lady took him to a class of lads taught by no intelligent man, who the lady thought, would know how to suit his teaching to the newcomer, plainly a Jew, of some education.

He took a vacant seat, and examined with curiosity the New Testament handed him, in which was the day's lesson about Jesus, the Christ. He soon began to ask questions that encouraged and at the same time, puzzled his teacher. He had never had this kind of a scholar before, who, while instructed and trained in the Jewish religion, had been made to believe that the New Testament was not true, and that the Messiah was yet to come.

It needed all the wisdom of the teacher to answer the Jew, on this Sunday and the following ones. But in time the boy became less talkative and lively. He finally explained to his teacher that his father was displeased, and had forbidden his coming to school. He had at first taken no notice of the matter, thinking his son would soon get tired and quit of his own accord, so he waited.

But one day when the boy was singing the hymn:

"I think when I read that sweet story of old,
When Jesus was here among men," his father sternly addressed him, saying he had heard enough of such nonsense and that he must stop going to that Gentile Sunday school.

But, he continued coming and matters at home became worse. Finally he was told he must give up the school, or lose his home and his place in the business house forever, still he kept on, but became each Sunday more quiet and reserved. His teacher could see that he was near the turning point in his life.

On the Sunday school anniversary there was a large crowd of people and. They had expected to hear several fine speakers, but none of them came. The poor superintendent did not know what to do. It was like to be a dull meeting. He had the children sing, and then asked them to repeat texts and hymns. A few did so but most of them were too timid too speak before such a crowd.

Then the Hebrew lad arose in the midst of deep silence and repeated the hymn,

"Jesus! I my cross have taken,
All to leave, and follow thee;
Naked, poor, despised, forsaken,
Thou from hence my all shalt be," in a voice so thrilling as to move the whole audience.

Many an eye was wet with tears, tears, when the young Jew sat down, for the people knew his story and the words of the hymn and the tone in which they were repeated, told them something of what he felt, and what he had given up to "follow Christ."

You can guess what a meeting followed. It was dry and dull no more, but was inspired and quickened into new life, from the love of Jesus, that had spoken through the lips of the little Jewish lad.

When the meeting closed he found the language of the Savior, "Whosoever forsaketh father, or mother, or brother or sister, or houses or lands, for my sake and the gospel's, shall receive a hundred fold more in this life," etc., was to be literally fulfilled in his case, for friends crowded around him, and business men united in securing him a situation where he could earn his living."

How do you like the story? Could you, my dear young friends, give up everything, as this Jewish boy did, for Jesus and his truth?—Selected by Omar Culver.

The Dangerous Door.

"O, Cousin Will, do tell us a story: there's just time before the school bell rings;" and Harry, Kate, Bob and little "Peace" crowded about their older cousin until he declared himself ready to do anything they wished.

"Well, what shall it be, little Peace?" said he, taking the hand of his favorite, Lucy, who was always called "Peace" because of her gentle and loving ways.

"Something true, this time," said Peace, "for I'm tired of fairies."

"Very well," said Cousin Will, "I will tell you about some very dangerous doors I have seen."

"Oh, that's good!" exclaimed Bob, "Were they all iron and heavy bars, and if one passed in did they shut and keep him there forever?"

"No; the doors I mean are pink or scarlet, and when they open you can see a row of little servants standing all in white, and behind them is a little lady dressed in crimson."

"Why, that's splendid!" cried Kate; "I should like to go in myself."

"Ah, it is what comes out of those doors that makes them so dangerous. They need a strong guard on each side or else there is great trouble."

"Why, what comes out?" said little Peace, with wondering eyes.

"When the guards were away," said Cousin Will, "I have known some things to come out sharper than arrows, and they make terrible wounds. Quite lately I saw two pretty little doors and one opened and the little lady began to talk very fast like this: 'What a stuck-up thing Lucy Waters is! and did you see that horrid dress made out of her sister's old one?' 'Oh, yes,' said the other little crimson lady from the other door, 'and what a turn-up nose she has!' Then poor Lucy, who was around the corner, ran home and cried all the evening."

"I know what you mean," cried Kate coloring; "were you listening?"

"Oh, you mean our mouths are doors," exclaimed Harry, "and the crimson lady is Miss Tongue; but who are the guards, and where do they come from?"

"You may ask the great King; this is what you must say: 'Set a watch, O Lord, upon my lips, keep the door of my mouth.' Then he will send Patience to stand on one side and Love on the other, and no unkind word will dare to come out."—Christian Observer.

Calling for the Lost One.

The sun had set in the western horizon, when, at the mountain side of Bethel, my tent was pitched for a night's rest. Jerusalem was behind us, and a journey towards the north of Palestine was before us. The landscape became more and more entrancing as the moon made her appearance in all her brilliancy. For some time we gazed and wondered! Was it not some such a sight that Jacob beheld when a refugee from home as he fled from Esau? The more we gazed into the glorious sky, which no painter could possibly depict, the more we felt intoxicated by this seeming vision. We read the story of Jacob and his dream, but never before had realized what a charm there is in this record.

Having feasted the eyes and imagination upon the charms of the marvellous Landscape, we retired into the tent, and were soon lost in sleep and slumber. Sleep was most refreshing, but some events took place which disturbed our slumber. As we lay on our beds we heard a noise, as if a troubled wanderer was calling out. We listened attentively, and the echo became more and more distinct. We heard a voice calling for some one. We rose from our beds and stood at the door of the tent watching. Presently we beheld the form of a man approaching. He carried a rod and staff. We knew by these that he was a shepherd. We inquired, "Shepherd, what are you about?" His reply was, "I am looking for a lost one." He told us that during the day he had led his flock over the fields of that neighborhood. He took them to the fold, and having counted them, he discovered that a sheep was missing! He therefore left his flock in the fold, and wandered back over the hills, calling for the lost one, with the hope that if the wandering sheep heard his voice it would respond, and he could then help to take the lost one back to the fold. We wished him well as he passed on, and sincerely hoped his efforts would be successful. After an hour or more we again heard the shepherd's voice, but by its tones we could tell he was evidently full of joy. It was a noise of song. We watched and waited for his approach, and presently we beheld the good shepherd with the lost one found. Unutterable was the joy of the shepherd. And again and again he exclaimed, "Hamdolelah, praise be to the Lord! I have found the sheep I had lost."

What a striking illustration of the gospel story, the shepherd leaving the ninety and nine and going after the one lost!

Dear young friends, have you heard the voice of the Good Shepherd? Have you followed him? Have you been with his flock in pastures green, but, alas! have you wandered away from the flock? You have backslidden. Behold, the Good Shepherd! His heart is full of compassion. He tenderly calls for you. Wherever you are, roaming among the mountains of the world, your soul cannot find peace. No, it never will. Your place is in the fold. Your companionship, with the flock. Your shepherd, Jesus, Jesus only. Listen to his voice. It speaks pardon and peace.

Look unto him. Follow him, and you shall rejoice abundantly.

"Jesus is our Shepherd;
Will we know his voice,
How its gentlest whisper
Makes our hearts rejoice,
Even when he chideth,
Tender is his tone:
None but he shall guide us,
We are his alone."

—Isaac Levinsohn.

A Touching Incident.

I was standing before the window of an art store where a picture of the crucifixion of our Lord was on exhibition: as I gazed I was conscious of the approach of another, and turning, beheld a little lad gazing intently at the picture also. Noticing that this mite of humanity was a sort of street Arab, I thought I would speak to him: so I asked, pointing to the picture: "Do you know who it is?"

"Yes, came the quick response, "that's our Savior," with a mingled look of pity and surprise that I should not know. With an evident desire to enlighten me further, he continued after a pause "Them's the soldiers, the Roman soldiers, and," with a long-drawn sigh, "that woman crying there is his mother."

He waited, apparently, for me to question him further, then thrust his hands into his pockets, and with a reverent and subdued voice, added, "They killed him. Mister. Yes sir, they killed him!" I looked at the little, dirty, ragged fellow, and asked, "Where did you learn this?" He replied, "At the Mission Sunday school."

Full of thought regarding the benefits of Mission Sunday schools, I turned away and resumed my walk, leaving the little lad looking at the picture. I had not walked a block when I heard his childish treble calling: "Mister? Say, Mister!" I turned. He was running toward me, but paused: then up went his little hand, and with a triumphant sound in his voice he said: "I wanted to tell you he rose again' Yes, Mister, he rose again."

His message delivered, he smiled, waved his hand, turned and went his way, feeling, I presume, that as he had been enlightened, he had done his duty in enlightening another.—T. B. Teske in Domestic Journal.

Teaching Children Courage.

Courage is a vital element of Christian chivalry. Without it, indeed, neither truth nor fidelity to promise can be hoped for. The coward is sure to lie when the truth means punishment, and sure to retreat from his engagements when they involve peril. We need valiant souls that have learned to endure and scorn pain, and to face danger fearlessly and promptly when duty requires. Some parents evade this vital part of training by glosses and deception. A mother who has taken her boy to the dentist's to have a tooth out, will often say, "Sit still, my boy; it won't hurt you." Now she knows it will hurt him, but if she can only get him, by this device, to sit still and let the dentist get hold of the tooth, then his discovery of the pain will not hinder its extraction.

This is a double mistake. It destroys her boy's confidence in her, for he detects her in a lie. And though it gets the boy, this time, to sit still, it is under the delusion that there is to be no more pain, whereas he should be taught to face the pain and scorn it. This makes the difference between cowards and heroes. A regiment of poltroons could march up to a battery as cheerfully as a regiment of heroes, if they thought there were no enemies at the guns. The difference is that heroes know the danger, and meet it valiantly.—The Household.

Well Said.

A little girl in Aberdeen brought a basket of strawberries to the minister very early on Monday. "Thank you, my little girl," he said, "they are very beautiful. But I hope you didn't gather them yesterday, which was the Sabbath day." "No, sir," replied the child, "I pulled them this morning, but they were growin' all day yesterday."

Editor Restitution.

Perhaps some of the brothers and sisters would like to hear from me, and what we are doing. On the 17th day of Aug., 1899, I began a meeting at Bush, Mo., according to appointment in The Restitution, and it may be that some are anxious to hear how the people, or especially the brethren are prospering at Bush. As to this world's goods they are all poor, not one rich man among them, and as far as the country is concerned it is rough, stony and by no means a model of the Garden of Eden, or Paradise. The curse is not yet lifted from off the land, but they all seem to be rich in faith and heirs of the kingdom of God. Bro. P. L. Graham and Bro. Cooper met me at the train at Fredericktown, and conveyed me to Bro. Graham's house, and there I met Sister Graham and their pleasant family, with a good supper to sit down to, and I was ready for the task after a shaking up over 6 or 7 miles of rock, and I also believe I did that subject justice. Then for church. There I met over one hundred from the [illegible] of 6 months to 70 years, [illegible] men walking from one [illegible] one-half miles to hear the message of Jesus and [illegible] body played Sunday from first to last, all work came to a standstill till after they said, "you are gone," and on Sunday the 30th, we went to the river to break bread and to baptize one sister that came out from the Baptists. You know Paul said, "Come out from among them and be ye separate." Our congregation on Sunday was estimated between three and four hundred, and I told them I could not see where all the people came from, but when nine o'clock came you could see them come in every direction, until we were told there were persons there that came ten miles and over, and one about thirty-five miles. We gave to them sixteen discourses in all, baptized two, both from the Baptist church. So that you can see that they are not all of them heathens, but as soon as they learn the ways of life they will come out. I never closed up a more interesting meeting than we had at Bush. Many were almost persuaded to become Christians, just as fine a lot of young people as you find in the older and more fully settled countries, and oh what good singing they gave, all helped, but alas, we had to close our meeting with only two additions. The seed is sown and if in good ground, it will grow. Nothing would do but I must leave an appointment in the light of the moon, for Aug., 1900. The appointment is made if I am alive, if not some one of the Restitution brethren will please fill the appointment, but you need not go there with the expectation of getting $2.00 a day and expenses paid besides, as they are of the class that James speaks of, "The poor of this world," and if they pay your expenses and a small margin, is all that you ought to expect. They will do all they are able to do. If the brethren at Bush had as much money as they have religion or zeal, they could get the gospel preached to them. There is an elder sister from New York saw our meeting advertised. Shesent $1.00 to Bro. Graham to help to sound out the Word of the Lord. This is as it should be. Well, we administered the broken body and shed blood to those two sisters, bid them farewell, with the promise of meeting them again in Aug., 1900, if not then, in the kingdom of God. And again Bros. Grahams and Cooper accompanied me to the train, and I bade them farewell, and got on board the cars, and away we sped for De Soto, Mo. Here at this place I met Bro. J. H. Morse, and we expect to hold a meeting at what is called Morse's Mill, the 28th of Aug., to continue one week, then back to De Soto. And when I get home I will report again.

Truly as ever, yours in hope of life when Jesus comes.

Geo. Fogel.

Dear Restitution:

I would like to state that Bro. Zilner left here the 21st inst. for Toronto, Ont., after preaching for us five times. The attendance was as good as we could expect for this small village, as there are three other meetings and two of them held on Sunday at the same time as ours. We had quite a large audience on Sunday evening, the last meeting. We were sorry to see [illegible] in his not staying with us longer. We also enjoyed the visit of his dear wife and children. I hope she also received it. I would also mention the visit we enjoyed from Sister Lott, of Niagara Falls, N. Y., Sister [illegible] Johnson and Bro. Norman, of Toronto and Bro. Robinson, of Hamilton. [illegible] on Saturday evening and remained the next two with us then [illegible] on Sunday. Yes, and I must not forget Lee Stanton's visit on Sunday from Bro. Lee and Bro. Lent of Niagara Falls, who with us enjoyed the meeting very much. The truth as it is in Jesus always causes the saints to rejoice, because they know in whom they have believed and they know their labor will not be in vain in the Lord, because as he lives in whom they trust, they also will live with him when he comes to be glorified in his saints, and to be marvelled in all them that believe in that day. Brethren, remember the words of Jesus when he said, "Watch and pray always, lest your hearts be overcome with surfeiting and drunkenness and the cares of this life, and so that day come upon you unawares, for as a snare shall it come on all them that dwell on the face of the whole earth." O what a solemn exhortation, may we all heed it.

Yours for the truth as it is in Jesus,

P. H. Burk.

Editor Restitution:

I was thinking about an article that appeared in The Restitution of Aug. 2nd, headed, "Are we as a People Narrow-Minded? [illegible] we not be" Are [illegible] not commanded to keep the narrow way? "For narrow is the way that leads to life, and few there be that find it." Then should we not be on our guard and not try to walk with too many? If we do, some of them may get us on the broad way. I think we should be broad in our love, extend it to all, but know no other faith but the one true faith. I do not see how we can have faith in the gospel without an understanding of it, as faith comes by hearing, and hearing by the Word of God. I had no faith in the promises made to the fathers until I found out what they were. I had no faith in the second personal coming of Christ until I read my Bible and learned it, nor the setting up of his kingdom, nor the reign on the earth, but now I have a knowledge of them, so I have faith in them which I could not have had before. O let us stand firm and keep in the narrow way, and show our faith by our works. Of course we all have our sorrow as well as our joy, but let us cultivate love, love one another with a pure love, love our enemies, bless and curse not. As we read in James iii. 17, 18, "But the wisdom that is from above is first pure, then peaceable, gentle and easy to be entreated, full of mercy and good fruits, without partiality and without hypocrisy, and the fruit of righteousness is sown in peace of them that make peace." David says, "Teach me thy way, O Lord, and lead me in a plain path because of mine enemies." Psa. xxvii. 11. O let us cry unto the Lord and ask him to keep us in the narrow path, for the enemy is on all sides ready to draw us in his net. As the signs of the times bespeak the coming of Christ near, let us keep our lamps trimmed and bright, for we read in Rev. xxii. 14, "Blessed are they that do (not partly do) his commandments that they may have right to the tree of life, and may enter in through the gates into the city," so let us all continue in well doing that we may have right to the tree of life and enter into the city.

Yours in Christ,

Jesse Harold.

Dear Restitution:

There is a friend of the truth living at Colorado Springs, Colorado, who writes inquiring if there are any of the Abrahamic faith near that place. Any brother or sister will confer a favor if they know of any there. Address O. F. Bowles, Minocqua, Wis.

Dear Restitution:

I cannot preach the gospel, but God in his goodness has given me means whereby I may be able to give a little mite to those who are able to preach the gospel or send out The Restitution, or tracts, or to some one in need, for which I am very thankful to him who causeth us to prosper. So as today is the time to be doing we send in ten dollars to be used as you think best. So with asking his loving hand to guide we will send this on its mission.

Your brother and sister in the one faith.——

[This brother and sister requested that their names be withheld. God knows them and in due time will reward all such that freely and cheerfully aid in his cause.—Ed]

Conference Notice.

The Quarterly Conference of the Church of God, in McAlpin, will convene (D. V.) at Williamsburg, Mecosta Co., Michigan, on Friday, Oct. 6th, 1899, and continue over the following Sunday. All of like precious faith are cordially invited to attend. Brothers and sisters, we once more appeal to you to come and enjoy a short season with us talking over the things concerning Jesus and the resurrection, and the kingdom of God. Come with your hearts full of love and self-sacrifice, and we are sure you will not come in vain. Those coming by railroad from the north stop at Millbrook; from the south, at Blanchard, changing cars at Edmore for Blanchard. Those coming from south of Grand Rapids, change at Grand Rapids, take the Detroit Grand Rapids and Western train at 7.00 A. M., no other train connects at Elmore, only have to wait there about ten or fifteen minutes. Blanchard is about two miles from the place of meeting, at the Decker school house. Ade speakers are expected to be present.

Yours for the truth.

Learn How to Forgive.

Do not carry an unforgiving spirit with you through your life: it will hurt you more than anything else. It will destroy the happiness of many around you, yet its chief feeding ground will be found in your own heart. You hate your neighbor. Yonder [illegible] ing a few rods away. Suppose as you pass you pluck a half-consumed brand from it, fanning and gleaming, and thrusting it under your garment to hide it, you start for your neighbor's dwelling to burn it. Who gets the worst of it? You will get your garments on fire and yourself burned before you can harm your neighbor. So is he who carries an unforgiving spirit in his bosom. It stings the soul like an adder shut up there. I know of some who call themselves Christians who are miserable because of their own revengefulness. Forgive your enemies and get down on your knees and pray for them, and salvation will come into your soul like a flood. "Father, forgive them." Sweet prayer and blessed example.

Active Goodness.

True kindness of heart necessarily results in active goodness. It is not real kindness to regret pity which stops at the vague, unexpressed feeling, and does not do something to show that the sentiment is a real one. Fear, laziness, caution, and a variety of kindred unworthy feelings often prevent the outcome of an emotion we cherish, and are rather proud to think we possess.

So to feel kindly toward a person, or even to think kindly thoughts about him, is not enough. We must let these thoughts and feelings have expression in doing something kind for him. We are sorry for a sick child or a grown person who is in pain, mental or physical, yet our sympathy is worth little if it is not strong enough to impel us to some sort of active expression. Our attempt to do something to relieve the pain we pity may be slight or awkward; but the flower, the book, the loving word, or the kindly hand-pressure does good, perhaps more than we are aware of, if offered in the spirit of love.

By the Hebrew chronology the year 5660 after creation began last evening at six o'clock.

There are Slaves Yet.

A story was told of a young man who a few years ago in the vicinity of Boston, reaching out eagerly for a useful career of his own, was deeply touched by the later glories, still visible, of that apostle of emancipation, Wendell Phillips. He hung about his home and watched him. They found a way into it, and breathed the atmosphere of that great life. He eagerly clutched at opportunities for some humble ministry for him. "Why," said he afterward, "I blacked that man's shoes for two years." It was great work, done for such a man.

But naturally he associated the greatness he saw and felt with past days and won a conflict. It was as the champion of the slave he revered him. If he might but have lived then, and helped on the cause of freedom by the side of this man!

One evening, standing in the doorway, as he took his leave, he ventured to say something of this to the great departing hero. "If I had only lived then and could have been by you, I believe I could have been brave, too, and made my life count for something. But those battles are all over now." "Such battles," answered the great patriot, "are never over, my friend," pointing his finger in the dark across the vacant square to where the lights in the store fronts gleamed, he added: "See the saloons!" To him this was the same kind of work he had done in another line. People who wished to emulate him had daily opportunity for it. There was still plenty of slavery to fight for any one who loved liberty sincerely.—Volunteer Gazette.

A ship approached a beautiful island and the captain said all the passengers who chose might land; but they must return when the ship's bell rung at sunset, for then he must weigh the anchor and proceed on his voyage. The people divided themselves into five parties. The first party stayed on board; they were afraid lest they might get lost on the island. I do not admire these timid people. The second party roamed in the woods, enjoyed the scent of the flowers, ate of the sweet fruit, and felt all the while the vessel happy and refreshed. They had the noble temper which knew when to stop. The third party wandered a long way, and came back to shore just as the crew were raising the anchor, and were in terror lest they should be too late. The fourth party loitered and loitered, and heard the bell ring; and even then they said: "Oh, there is no need to hurry, the captain will not go without us." But the ship was beginning to move, and the foolish people waded through the water, and fought with each other as they scrambled over the ship's side. The fifth party ate and feasted and drank again, and knew not when to stop. They fell asleep—they heard not the sound of the bell, and they knew not that the vessel had sailed; and then they awoke in the darkness of the night.

A nobleman showed a friend a collection of precious stones whose value he could scarcely compute. "And yet," he remarked, "they would yield me no income." His friend replied that he had purchased two stones that had cost him about five pounds each, yet they had yielded him a very considerable income every year. Escorting him down to the mill, he pointed him to the upper and nether millstones. Ah! these toilers. These grinders! These lives that do the lifting, while others do the planning and bossing! Who shall say that they are not useful to the world—even indispensable to the world's progress and man's happiness?—The Commonwealth.

Idle words, gossip, tale bearing, slander, flattery, untruthfulness, useless words, thrown out to while away the time in a spare five minutes, words that are not consecrated by any seriousness of purpose whatever—these are the idle words of which our blessed Lord says an account must be given at the day of judgment.

Conference Notice.

The Kansas and Missouri Conference of the Church of God will meet for their annual Conference meeting in Sabetha, Kan., at 9 A. M. Sept. 7, 1899. A general meeting will be held in connection with this Conference, commencing on the 2nd. A programme will be arranged consisting of discourses, essays and song service. This will be our second annual meeting and we desire to make it the best. So let all come who can, and where there are a number of brethren let them send a delegate, so that the representation may be as good as possible. Sabetha is at the crossing of the Grand Island and Rock Island railroad, sixty miles west of St. Joseph, Mo. A committee will meet all parties at the trains. Let all who come bring bedding; living rates will be furnished at a low rate, also meals after the order of the Omaha meeting.

For the committee,
A. W. DARBY, Sec.

The annual conference of the Church of God in Nebraska will be held at Blair, beginning on Friday, Sept. 8, 1899, and will continue for ten days.

We are anxious to make this the best meeting we have ever had. To do this we need your presence, your sympathy and your prayers.

Come and spend ten days with those of the like precious faith in the service of the blessed Master.

Before the meeting we should like to hear from each church belonging to the conference in regard to the officers they want for the coming year. Send your votes to the secretary at Arapahoe, Neb., by Sept. 3.

Once more asking your presence, your help and your prayers for the success of the meeting, I am
Your sister in the hope of eternal life.
RENA GORDON,
Secretary.

The next annual Conference of the Churches of God in Christ Jesus will convene at Oregon, Ill. Friday, Sept. 22, and continue over Sunday. This will be our second annual conference. We are arranging for a profitable meeting. Brothers Eychaner, Conner, and Hadley have signified their intention to be present, while other evangelists have been invited. The programme will be published later. It is hoped sharing good will be present from each of the churches of Illinois, prepared to take an active part in the meeting, so an invitation is extended to the brethren throughout the State who are connected with any church society or otherwise, to be with us, also to brethren outside the State.

It is particularly requested that all who design to be present shall notify Brother J. A. Lindsay, Oregon, Ill. as soon as possible, who is preparing to make provision to entertain all who come from a distance free, and in order that this may be properly done he would like to know as early as possible in advance how many purpose coming.

Oregon is on the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy R. R.

Letters from isolated members who cannot be present will be received and read with pleasure. Either come or send a few words of comfort and good cheer.

JAS. W. WILSON, Pres.
LYDIAN BOOTH, Secy.

Our Helping Fund.

We whose names are given herewith, believing that it is our duty to provide a fund to be used in sending THE RESTITUTION to those too poor to pay for it themselves, do cheerfully give the amount set opposite our names for the purpose of aiding the managers of the paper to supply the needy ones. This fund to be applied as the donors request, (or when left to the publisher to decide) only for those who themselves state their circumstances and need, or whose case is presented by some one known to be trustworthy.

Works of Bro. Wiley Jones.

TWELVE WORDS, or the true meaning of Hell, Soul, Spirit, Ghost, Paradise, Incorruption, Incorruptible, Immortal, Immortality, Forever, Everlasting, Eternal, and their originals as learned by their uses in the Bible. A tract of 40 pages, sold formerly at 10 cents a copy.

THE GOSPEL OF THE KINGDOM, an 8 page, double column tract, sold formerly at 10 cents a dozen.

EARLY LESSONS, suitable for old and young, 30 pages, sold formerly for 10 cents a copy.

These works are excellent for use by those who wish to do missionary labor, and we offer them at such a low price that they should be out in a short time. Bro. Jones had large editions of these tracts printed, and by dying suddenly, and his Widow being in feeble health, we have undertaken the task of selling them. Her income is quite limited, and all that can be gotten out of the sale goes to her after expenses are paid. When you buy these tracts you get several times the worth of your money and also aid a worthy Sister, who will thank you for it.

Assorted package 30 cents per pound. Gospel of the kingdom, alone at 25 cents per pound.

The Gospel of the Kingdom.

Advocated in a series of Ten Discourses. A Volume of 283 pages, cloth 25 cents, leather bound, embossed, and gilt edges, $1.00. By Wiley Jones. This book is so well known that it is only necessary to announce that it is for sale, to insure a market for it. We have undertaken to dispose of these books for the Widow of our lamented Brother Jones, and while getting them at this low price, you at the same time will help Sister Jones to much-needed money.

Consider.

Do we ever stop to consider,
How little a kind word may cost,
And if once the hasty word's spoken,
One chance in our life we have lost?

Do we ever stop to consider
All the sorrow one little word
May bring to the heart that is wearing
For the tones of love seldom heard?

Do we ever stop to consider
How much sunshine is thrown away,
When we close fast the door where kindness
Knocks anew to come in each day?

Do we ever stop to consider
When everything seems to go wrong
That the fault we think is another's
Has been our own all the day long?

Now a simpler rule to consider
And one I am sure we will find,
Is to see what is the motive
For saying a word that's unkind.

And if we take time to consider,
The motive, perchance, will grow small;
And I think in the end we may find
That there is no motive at all.

"And Jesus said, "Let her alone, Why trouble ye her? She hath wrought a good work on me."

"For ye have the poor with you always, and whensoever ye will ye may do them good: but me ye have not always."

"She hath done what she could. She is come aforehand to anoint my body to the burying."

Dear Christian Friends:

You will find these words in Mark xiv. 6, 7, 8. Now, before we proceed let us wander back to the town of Bethany, the home of Mary, Martha and their brother Lazarus. It is nigh unto Jerusalem, about fifteen furlongs off, situated on the east of the Mount of Olives, on the road to Jericho. The situation is very pleasant and somewhat romantic, sheltered by the Mount of Olives on the north, abounding with trees and long grass. No village in the world outside of Bethlehem, where our Savior was born, is more attractive than the village of Bethany. Here, Jesus came to rest after the toil and conflicts of the day in Jerusalem. Here, he found friends, who understood him and sympathized with him in his hour of trouble. Here it was, a woman came with a box of ointment of spikenard, very precious. See, see, she pours it on the head of Jesus until the house is filled with the odor of the ointment. We then see some that murmur against her, but Jesus says, "Let her alone, why trouble ye her? She hath wrought a good work on me. For ye have the poor with you always and whensoever ye will ye may do them good, but me ye have not always. She hath done what she could. She is come aforehand to anoint my body to the burying." Perhaps she had saved the money a long time, penny after penny had been laid away until the amount had been saved by those loving hands who no doubt had deprived themselves of the necessaries of life. Today how many of us would go forth as Mary did? Is there one?

Again we find on one occasion that Christ was invited to eat at a Pharisee's house, and he went in at the Pharisee's house and sat down to meat, and behold a woman in the city which was a sinner when she knew that Jesus sat at meat in the Pharisee's house, brought an alabaster box of ointment, and stood at his feet behind him weeping and began to wash his feet with tears and did wipe them with the hairs of her head, and kissed his feet and anointed them with the ointment. Now, when the Pharisee which had bidden him saw it, he spake within himself saying, "This man, if he were a prophet would have known who and what manner of woman this is that toucheth him; for she is a sinner," and Jesus answering said unto him, "Simon, I have somewhat to say unto thee," and he saith "Master, say on." "There was a certain creditor which had two debtors, the one owed him five hundred pence, and the other fifty, and when they had nothing to pay he frankly forgave them both. Tell me, therefore, which will love him best?" Simon answered and said, "I suppose that he to whom he forgave most," and he said, "Thou hast rightly judged." And he turned to the woman, and said unto Simon, "Seest thou this woman? I entered into thine house, thou gavest me no water for my feet; but she hath washed my feet with tears and wiped them with the hairs of her head. Thou gavest me no kiss; but this woman sins the time I came in hath not ceased to kiss my feet, my head with oil thou didst not anoint; but this woman hath anointed my feet with ointment. Wherefore, I say unto thee, her sins which are many, are forgiven; for she loveth much, but to whom little is forgiven, the same loveth little."

This same Mary who anointed the feet of Jesus, and did wipe his feet with her hair, whose brother Lazarus had sickened and died, when she was come where Jesus was and saw him, fell down at his feet, saying unto him, "Lord, if thou hadst been here my brother had not died." What great confidence Mary must have had in her Savior, the only one to look to in time of trouble. The only consolation she had was the words of the Master, "Thy brother shall rise again." We see her weeping from the loss of an only brother, we see them as they walk towards the tomb. But Jesus also weeps, then said the Jews, "Behold how he loved him." Jesus therefore again groaning in himself cometh to the grave. It was a cave and a stone lay upon it. Jesus said, "Take ye away the stone," Martha saith unto him, "Lord, by this time he stinketh: for he hath been dead four days." Jesus saith unto her, "Said I not unto thee, that if thou wouldst believe thou shouldst see the glory of God," and they took away the stone from the place where the dead was laid, and Jesus lifts up his eyes and says, "Father I thank thee, that thou hast heard me and I knew that thou hearest me always; but because of the people which stand by, I said it that they may believe that thou hast sent me," and when he had thus spoken he cried with a loud voice "Lazarus, come forth," and he that was dead came forth bound hand and foot with grave clothes, and a napkin bound about his face, Jesus said, "Loose him and let him go." What a happy meeting that must have been between brother and sisters, they two embrace the one who a short time before had gone down under the power and dominion of that dread enemy, death, but now that Jesus had raised him, there was a stir among the Jews how they might put him to death, for we find for thirty pieces of silver Christ was delivered over into the hands of sinful men.

Let us look through our encumberances into Pilate's judgment hall, and view the scene of action there. See the suffering of our dear Redeemer. How shamefully he is treated. The whole band of soldiers are gathered together to abuse him as much as possible. Some are bending their knees before him in mockery, others are spitting in his face, while others are plaiting a crown of thorns and pressing it on his sacred head. "He was oppressed, he was afflicted, yet he opened not his mouth. He is brought as a lamb to the slaughter, and as a sheep before her shearer is dumb so he opened not his mouth." See, see, he bears all his sufferings in silence. "But this is their hour and the power of darkness," and when they have done their shameful part, and their wicked hearts are in a manner relieved, they lead him out to crucify him. Who can look on the scene without shedding tears? even Pilate was astonished at the sight and said "Behold the man." See him going out to the place of crucifixion, bearing his own cross until he sinks beneath it and another is called to bear it in his stead.

"Nearer my God to thee, Nearer to thee,
E'en though it be a cross that raiseth me."

On, on he goes until he reaches the foot of the cross. Has his friends all forsaken him? No, no, there we see his mother with other holy women standing there and weeping, and lamenting, not having the liberty to minister unto him as usual. Hear him saying to his mother, "Woman, behold thy Son," and then committing her into the hands of another. Well might she weep. Look at the soldiers driving the nails through his hands and his feet. See the blood running down over his sacred body. Some are wagging their heads and calling to him in derision, "If thou be the Son of God, come down from the cross." Hear him calling on God, "My God, my God, why hast thou forsaken me?" What a sad, sad sight. Mothers, who among us could stand by and see such cruelty inflicted on one of our children? Mary, no doubt was pondering over the things she had kept in her heart, else she could not possibly have been able to bear all this. After this, Jesus knowing that all things were now accomplished, that the Scriptures might be fulfilled, saith, "I thirst," and they filled a sponge with vinegar and put it upon a hyssop and put it to his mouth. When Jesus therefore had received the vinegar, he said, "It is finished," and he bowed his head and gave up the ghost. The sacrifice for sin had been found and offered, and naught remained to do but to die—to surrender his life into the hands of God who gave it and not live for the short period of three days. All the blessed deeds and words and memories of the past thirty-three years, and all the griefs, and trials, and sorrows, and temptations were in the past and forever left behind. Henceforth there was before him, after three days of death, power and joy, and glory unlimited and inconceivable by human heart. Earth life and earth's work was all done, and well done forever. What deep joy, what triumph, what supreme satisfaction, what comfort of soul must have inspired those significant words, "It is finished." How relieved they must have felt when they seen him taken down from the cross, his body wrapped in linen clothes and laid in the tomb away from his enemies. Now he must die that he might give life to countless myriads who trust in him, but he must rise to fulfill his promise to them. Did he rise? He did. Let no vandal hand inscribe upon his sepulchre, "Death is an eternal sleep," for we read the first day of the week, very early in the morning, Mary Magdalene and other women came to the sepulchre with sweet spices, that they might anoint him, and they said among themselves, Who shall roll us away the stone from the door? and they looked and behold the stone was rolled away, for it was very great, and entering in they saw a young man sitting on the right clothed in long white garments, and they were affrighted, but he says unto them "Be not affrighted. Ye seek Jesus of Nazareth, which was crucified, he is risen, he is not here, behold the place where they laid him, but go your way and tell his disciples and Peter that he goeth before you into Galilee." Now, Mary stood without the door weeping and turning herself back she sees Jesus but knew not that it was Jesus. He saith unto her, "Woman, why weepest thou? whom seekest thou?" She supposing him to be the gardener saith unto him, "Sir if thou hast borne him hence, tell me where thou hast laid him, and I will take him away." Jesus saith unto her, "Mary." She turneth unto him and saith unto him, "Master." He tells her not to touch him, but go and tell his disciples that he is risen from the dead. The same day when evening was come being the first day of the week, when the doors were shut where the disciples were assembled for fear of the Jews came Jesus, and stood in the midst and saith unto them "Peace be unto you." Forty days was Christ among his disciples commissioning them to go into all the world and preach the gospel, and being assembled together with them commanded them that they should not depart from Jerusalem but wait for the promise from the Father, which, saith he, ye have heard of me, and he tells them that they shall receive power after that the Holy Ghost is come upon them, and they should be witnesses in all Judea and in Samaria and unto the uttermost parts of the earth, and when he had spoken these things, while they beheld, he was taken up and a cloud received him out of sight, and while they looked steadfastly toward heaven as he went up, behold two men stood by them in white apparel, which also said, "Ye men of Galilee, why stand ye gazing up into heaven? This same Jesus which is taken up from you into heaven, shall so come in like manner as ye have seen him go into heaven." What a glorious sight that will be to all those that love his appearing. Are we looking longing, for that glorious day? Are we doing what we can for the Master? We can not all be Marys, there must be some Marthas, but let us all so live, and let our light so shine before the world that it can be said, "She hath done what she could," for we are near the day of the coming of our Master, and then will the fiat be proclaimed, "It is done."

GERTRUDE OSBORN.

"He who would have immortality must make himself worthy of immortality."

I think it is Emerson who expresses himself in this way, or in words very similar. They are grand words, and ought to be permanently in the ear of all who hear them. The gift of eternal life is not for triflers. Its crown will never sparkle on the brow of man or woman, who starts for Canaan, to murmur the whole length of the road. It will never come into the possession of those who make no effort to overcome; who weep over their sins, and yet live today just as they did yesterday and the day before; who resolve to give and work for God, and yet do nothing, give nothing, make no plans to bless poor humanity, throw out no life-saving lines.

"Leaves thy flight from star to star,
From world to luminous world, as far
As the universe spreads its flaming car,
Take all the pleasures of all the spheres,
And multiply each for endless years,
One minute of heaven out-weighs them all."

—sings the poet in a rather extravagant way, and yet, though we may never have "One minute" of the heaven of which he dreams, I imagine that one moment, and that the first of rapturous enjoyment in God's everlasting kingdom, knowing that it is ours to hold forever, will be more than "all the pleasures of the spheres," viewed with our poor mortal eyes and palsying memories.

"The gift of God is eternal life"—have you ever thought what that means? Have you sat down with God's book upon your knee and read the words over; and read them over again, and prayerfully sought to stretch out the measuring line of eternity upon such a life? Have you tried to measure its days on the Dial of the Coming Ages.

You have all enjoyed looking at the seven stars on a calm winter's night, but to your dim vision they were only the seven stars, and nothing more. Yet, in that group of shining points, is one brighter than the rest,—named perhaps by God himself, Alcyone,—or the center. That star is the Sun of the seven stars. All the stars that we can see with our eyes, and all that can be called with the greatest telescopes on earth, seem to be moving around that beautiful Pleiadic group.

The name of the seven stars is the Pleiades, and Pleiades, in the Hebrew language, is Cymar, or the axle. You know what the axle is to the wheel; that it is the turning point. So God meant us to understand when he named these stars, that they were the center and the turning point of this celestial universe, to which our Earth, and Saturn, and Jupiter, etc., belong.

It takes 25,827 years, or "3655 times the life of man, three score and ten," to move our universe once around that central Sun! So man's poor 70 years of mortal life, is but one day of that great Annus Magnus, or Pleadic year! And greater years than this there be; for our universe with its central Sun and other universes with their central suns, are moving around still another center, in a period of which the Alcyonic cycle is but a day.

The happy denizens of the new earth will write the history of their past, measured off in these great years, and this will be eternal life;—one of its little days,—25,827 years long!

Are you worthy of it? "The gift of God is eternal life." Its days of wondrous length, are to go on and on, in the light of flashing suns and brilliant suns, and resplendent glory, without an end. Without an end!

"Eye hath not seen nor ear hath not heard, neither hath it entered into the heart of man to conceive of the joy laid up for them that love God," but eternal life holds it all, and the "gift of God, is eternal life!"

"He who would have immortality must make himself worthy of immortality." He must believe that God is, and believing that he is, must believe that he has in the Bible made a revelation of himself, and of his will toward man. That revelation must be accepted, it must become the law-book of the inner life; it must govern the thoughts, the motives, the acts, it must make the man the hero.

The love of God must constrain, it must change. But how find the love of God? How make sure that it is for you? Secure the authentication of the Bible, the first thing. "God, has so abundantly authenticated his own word, to men that they need make no mistake in identifying it out of all the strife of tongues, and relying upon every jot and tittle of it with a faith that nothing can shake."

"Faith in the Bible is not the result of unthinking subscription," there must be no mental laziness in a matter of such momentous importance.

"The gift of God is eternal life," but to receive that gift, there must be faith, built upon substance, and substance is promise. God has promised—that is reason enough for faith, it gives hope something to lay hold of though unseen. Faith cannot be founded upon nothing, it cannot be built upon we know not what, and be acceptable to God. It must grow out of what we learn by faithful study of the Book. Oh, that there were more faithful study, then would there be more believing hearts—more faithful lives!

"Worthy of immortality!" Having believed, then must there be obedience, for unless there be obedience we have not "believed to the saving of the soul."

We must give the oars of life into God's hands, and let him row into the harbor.

Were you fretting the other day? And you—what words were those you were saying? Did not God hear?

In the footsteps of Jesus.—that is where we must walk,—would he buy that useless toy, those pretty nothings that we so often waste money upon, and let his own brethren die for "want of knowledge?"

It is a privilege beyond our power to estimate, to be permitted to become a fellow-worker with God, in bringing about that blessed restitution state that is so soon to dawn, and being workers with him, how worthily we ought to walk lest the work be hindered! He has thrown the robe of righteousness around us who have professed his name; we must keep it unsullied, by refraining from sin, then shall "immortality come to us, because we have made ourselves worthy of immortality."

S. ROXANA WINCE.

Many are the exceeding great and precious promises to him that overcometh, and maketh himself worthy of them. While on the other hand those that fail to fit themselves for the good things promised, will loose all that is worth living for. We should ask ourselves, what does the Lord want us to overcome? We answer, all that is wrong about us. In his Word he has pointed them out to us if we do not overlook them.

"Love not the world, nor the things that are in the world. For all that is in the word, the lust of the flesh, and the lust of the eyes, and the pride of life is not of the Father, but is of the world. And the world away, and the lust thereof: but he that doeth the will of God abideth forever." These are some of the wrong things that we must overcome, or we are lost.

The Restitution.

"The Restitution of all things Which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his Holy Prophets."

VOLUME XLVIII. PLYMOUTH, INDIANA, SEPTEMBER 13, 1899. NUMBER 34.

The Restitution.

THE RESTITUTION advocates the final "restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint-heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ, and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for remission of sins, pre-requisites of the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

Israel of old while on the way to the promised land, were constantly complaining and lusting after evil things, and in their hearts turned back into Egypt. Paul mentions these things as examples to us, if we will not heed the lesson we too will be destroyed. How is it with us today? Do we in our hearts first, and then in our deeds, turn back to the world, and join hand with them and conform ourselves to their evils? If so, we cannot be an overcomer. How is it, dear ones, are we striving hard to overcome evil with good? Let us not forget our lesson of old, and that the promises are only to the overcomer. If we have a desire to be uppermost, or to have our own way about everything, if the church doesn't do quite as we think best, do we show a Christian spirit and love to our brother? It is easy to be a Christian if everything goes to please us. But to be an overcomer sometimes means to keep in subjection an unruly, tongue and an hasty temper. "But he that overcometh, the same shall be clothed in white raiment; I will not blot out his name out of the book of life, but I will confess his name before my Father and before his angels." It doth not yet appear what we shall be, can it be that we shall be sons and daughters of the Lord Almighty? Yes, if we are overcomers, and that is not all, we shall have "eternal life," and a beautiful home, too grand for mortal man to realize. And that is not all, we will all have somebody over there we want to see, that is resting and waiting.

Brothers and sisters, let us try to be overcomers, and pray and hope for that glorious time to hasten on.

"To know, to esteem, to love, and then to part Makes up life's tale to many a feeling heart."

Intemperance is a great decayer of beauty.

He censures God who quarrels with the imperfections of man.

How few people experience the delight of loving their neighbor as they love themselves.

Whoever is a hypocrite in his religion mocks God, presenting to him the outside, and reserving the inward for his enemy.

We should be stepping-stones, not stumbling-blocks. Christ revealed himself as the Way; and we, as "members of Christ," are part of that Way."

Were you building a monument to stand for ages how majestic and substantial would be its construction! How much more august and solemn is life!

Let your religion be seen. Lamps do not talk, but they do shine. A light-house sounds no drum, it beats no gong, yet far over the waters its friendly light is seen by the mariner.

"When ministers resolve," says Zion's Herald, "to confine themselves to the preaching of the gospel of Christ, better days will come to the churches of all denominations. The minister is a specialist and his subject is given to him."

"If the evil in our neighborhood is an enemy to righteousness, so is the evil in ourselves. If we would not allow our own sins to stop us from working for Christ, neither should we obstruct others in their working, simply because their sins happen to be a kind particularly offensive to us. All kinds are offensive to God."

Our Helping Fund.

We whose names are given herewith, believing that it is our duty to provide a fund to be used in sending THE RESTITUTION to those too poor to pay for it themselves, do cheerfully give the amount set opposite our names for the purpose of aiding the managers of the paper to supply the needy ones. This fund to be applied as the donors request, (or when left to the publisher to decide) only for those who themselves state their circumstances and need, or whose case is presented by some one known to be trustworthy.

Are You One of Them?

By examining our list we find there are between 500 or 1 000 people whose time has expired. Some only a few months and others some years. If each one of you who are thus owing us would go to the office right now and send the money due us, we would have over a thousand dollars with which to push forward our work.

Brothers and Sisters, we need this money very much. We have earned it—it is ours—and if you do not send it to us, but use it on self, you are simply spending our money. It is not yours—it is ours. Were we in position to do so we would gladly lend you the amount, but the fact is we have bills to pay and cannot lend it to you longer. We ask you kindly and in the spirit of love and justice, to at once send us what you owe us. If you cannot spare it all now, then send part of it, and the balance after awhile. Please do not neglect this, but get a dollar and send to us right away today. We thank you in advance for the favor, and assure you we appreciate it very much.

Faith is best realized in sacrifice.

J. A.—As to that we think contempt for nations are often justifiable.—but contempt for men, never.

Reader, we are glad for your sake that by God's favor there is immeasurable distance between late and too late.

There is a lesson for every one in the fact that in a healthy state of the organism, all wounds have a tendency to heal.

When a man revolts against the gospel, he takes another Master,—himself; one who renders all inferior masters possible."

To do nothing is not always to lose one's time, but to do what we do carelessly, is to lose it inevitably. It is weariness without profit.

Let us not fail to scatter along our pathway the seeds of kindness and sympathy. Some of them will doubtless perish; but if one only lives, it will perfume our steps and rejoice our eyes.

"What we comprehend of God is, not what he is in himself, but what he wills that we should comprehend. The treasury of divine knowledge is twofold; the full, entire, and final verity, which is God himself; and those minor verities—which he enjoins, that is to say imposes on the children of men."

If we speak the truth with moderation,—separating its substance from all alloy of human passion, we are not to blame for the wrathful opposition it may encounter. But if we strain it, or wrest it, or do not maintain it with absolute sincerity,—we are responsible for the consequences that may ensue.

Madame Swetchine asks why the invincible Armada perished, despite the beauty of its vessels, and the long-tried experience of its mariners? And then answers her own question, as follows: "Probably the very fact that it called itself invincible had some share in its defeat. God allows us the epithet only after the fact."

"A canon, finished scandal, fully armed and equipped, such as circulates in the world, is rarely the production of a single individual, or even of a single coterie. It sees the light in one; it is rocked and nurtured in another: it is petted, developed, in a third, and its finishing touches are received by passing through a multitude of hands. It is a child that has a host of fathers,—all ready to disown it."

We in America are apt to suppose that because the volume of our foreign trade has increased so largely of late years, especially this year, that necessarily we are taking some away from England. On the contrary it appears from the trade reports that England's exports for August 1899 are $10,000,000 more than for August 1898 and the imports for a like time are $18,000,000 more.

This miserable farce of a trial by court-martial at Rennes is at an end, and Captain Alfred Dreyfus is, as was expected, again condemned to ten years imprisonment, being pronounced guilty of treason. The only difference in his sentence is that in place of his prison being a tropical island, it is to be a fortress on continental territory of the republic. His past four years of imprisonment it is said will not count to shorten this sentence. Many predict disaster to France for this injustice to a man that is almost universally believed is being made a scape goat of, and because he is a Jew. We shall watch the outcome with interest.

For T. A.—Your question as to whether there is any truth in the report that Calvin caused a man to be roasted alive?" Will have to be answered by what has often been published by responsible publishers as reliable history. In Cossat's Miniature Encyclopedia, p 631 we read as follows:—"Miguel Servetus, a Spanish medical and theological writer, born 1509 at Villanueva, went to Paris 1533, was burnt for heresy at Calvin's instigation, 27 October, 1553, at Geneva."

The Encyclopedia Londinensis, Vol 3, p. 636, says his [Calvin's] memory can never be purified from the stain of burning Servetus; it ill became a reformer to adopt the most odious practice of the very church he was so earnestly crying down."

"The World's Religions" p. 870 says Servetus was a brilliant young physician who published a book in 1533 entitled "Christianismi Restitutio;" he regarded the doctrine of the Trinity as involving tri-theism, and leading to Atheism, but was passionately devoted to Christ. Calvin approved of his being condemned to death, though he did not wish him to be burnt. But his death by fire took place, to the great discredit of Calvin and Geneva, on October 27th, 1553.

In addition to the above we find in Prof. Kurtz's "Church History" published by the Funk & Wagnall's publishing House, 30 Lafayette Place New York, Vol. II., p. 304, that between the years 1542 and 1546 there were in Geneva, with a population of only 20,000, no less than fifty-seven death sentences carried out with Calvin's approval, and sixty-six sentences of banishment, and that the magistrates faithfully supported him in all his measures."

This is more than was asked for, but it leaves no room to doubt what was previously quoted.

"If There be No Resurrection."

Some time ago a popular preacher said:—"If in the dust our bodies should perish and lie there for ever, and there should be no resurrection, still the soul has enough features to make us distinguishable."

Did that preacher ever read the 15th chapter of 1 Corinthians? Let him, (or any other like him), read verses 16, 17 and 18, and then we will ask:—

What will be the result to the dead in Christ, if Christ does not obtain their release from the grave?

When the Spirit has answered this question, how dare one to make a different answer? This is the Spirit's answer:—

"For, if the dead rise not, then they also which are fallen asleep in Christ are perished," (ceased to be). If they had gone to heaven or hell at death, could they have perished because of no resurrection of the dead? Every earnest searcher for God's truth will study this question thoroughly. It will be a vital point to him. And he will not leave it till he has found an answer in harmony with the nature of the man God made of dust, and afterward sentenced back to dust again.

When, according to Christ's own promise, will he take his followers unto himself? The answer is found in John xiv. 3, "And if I go and prepare a place for you, I will come again and receive you unto myself, that where I am there ye may be also."

Where are Christ's brethren when he comes to receive them unto himself? The answer is found in John v. 28, as follows:—"Marvel not at this, for the hour is coming, in the which all that are in their graves (the all asleep in Jesus—my sheep) that are in their graves shall hear his voice and shall come forth." This clearly sets forth the locality of those who have fallen asleep in Christ. They are in their graves. That is where they are when awakened by the voice of the Son of Man. To say that it is the bodies of those who fall asleep in Jesus that hear his voice and come forth, falsifies the words of Jesus. The 29th verse proves that that which hears the voice is the responsible person, who does good or evil, and is therefore accordingly rewarded or punished. Most supremely ridiculous and wicked would it be to say, he raises the irresponsible body and punish it for what the real person did. Would a just God punish the innocent part instead of the wicked?

After what pattern will the awakened and raised ones be fashioned? The answer is given in Phil. iii. 21, for it says, "We look for the Savior, the Lord Jesus Christ, who shall change our vile body that it may be fashioned like unto his glorious body."

The reader must not be guessing or supposing this, that or the other about this wonderful change, because we have a sample copy to refer to Christ died, was buried, and was raised again bearing the marks of the wounds which caused his death; and was just as real and tangible as before, although now living by God instead of a blood-life. He is the first fruits of them that slept. Those who sleep in him will be fashioned like unto him. The change of the living ones is an instant, will be a complete change throughout. We read [illegible] the old left off material. The mortal, earthly body, becomes a spiritual body. And the statement that "the soul has enough features to make us distinguishable," is a gratuitous statement, and in view of Paul's statements in 1 Thes. iv. 15-17, and Phil. iii. 21, and our Lord's statement previously referred to, is as ridiculous as gratuitous.

When raised, changed as above described, how long will they live? Answer, "Neither can they die any more, for they are equal unto the angels, and are the children of God, being the children of the resurrection." Luke xx. 36. "And hast made us unto our God kings and priests, and we shall reign on the earth." Rev. v. 10. "The kingdoms of this world are become the kingdoms of our Lord and his Christ, and we shall reign for ever and ever." Rev. xi. 15-18; Psa. cxxxii. 10-18; Dan. vii. 21-28.

Indiana Conference Report.

As per announcement the Annual Conference of the Church of God of the Abrahamic faith convened at Argos, Sept. 1 to 3, 1899. The business was called on Saturday, P. M. The minutes of the preceding meeting, the secretary's financial report for the year and the treasurer's report were read and accepted.

The secretary's yearly report is as follows: Whole amount subscribed $225.50; whole amount paid, $219.00; due on subscription, $6.50; due on subscription the year before, $16.50; due on subscription to tent fund which was transferred to evangelist fund, $15.50; making a total of $68.50 due to evangelist fund.

Amount received on tent fund $75.-05; collections $42.18, received on last year's subscription $15.50; amount on hand from last year $67.-58, making a total of $117.31. Amount paid out, $102.67; amount in treasury $14.67.

The treasurer reported the two years together which showed thousand result.

A report from the different churches was heard; also each minister present gave a brief report of their year's labor; although nothing flattering, yet they showed the work was slowly progressing, adding here a little and there a little. There is nothing discouraging for we do not expect any great results; but believe if we do our duty the Lord will prosper the work as he sees fit.

Bro. Zilmer gave a report of his evangelistic labor as follows. Places visited during the year: Indiana: Rolf, Bracken, Rensselaer, Plymouth, Argos, North Salem, Burr Oak, Warren Co., Ollo, Inwood. Michigan: Brady. Pennsylvania: Randolph. New York: Niagara Falls. Ontario: Fonthill, Saline, Hatchley. Kansas: Gaudo, Crescent, Oxford. Oklahoma Territory: Blackwell, Pleasant Valley, Banner school house.

Traveled 7205 miles; preached 286 discourses; baptized 14; in Indiana 6; funerals 6. Received $709.43; traveling expenses $109.43.

The church at Inwood, which was organized by Bro. Smith, asked to be admitted into the Conference; upon motion the request was freely granted.

The election of officers for the following year resulted as follows: Pres. F. L. Austin, Rensselaer; First Vice Pres. D. C. Vanvactor, Argos; Second Vice Pres. J. L. Wince, Pierceton; Secretary, A. C. Roberts, Plymouth; Treasurer, T. O. Taber, Argos.

It was moved and carried that we continue the evangelistic work: also that we favor Bro. Zilmer as evangelist.

It was also ordered that each church organization choose one of their number whose duty it will be to ascertain how much the members of their respective organizations will contribute for evangelical work and report the same to the secretary not later than September 16.

It was moved and carried that the Executive Board be empowered to disburse the money as they in their judgment deem best, first favoring Bro. Zilmer as evangelist.

Bro. Wagoner not being a member of any organization it was moved and carried that the Conference grant him a ministerial certificate.

Ministerial Certificates were granted to

J. F. Wagoner, Rochester, Ind.
J. L. Wince, Pierceton, Ind.
F. L. Austin, Rensselaer, Ind.
A. H. Zilmer, Plymouth, Ind.
G. W. Smith, Culver, Ind.
J. S. Hatch, Scircleville, Ind.
R. C. Railsback, Argos, Ind.
R. F. Cordill, Plymouth, Ind.
D. C. Vanvactor, Argos, Ind.
Chas. Fish, Argos, Ind.

The churches represented were:—Plymouth, Burr Oak, Bracken, Argos, Rensselaer, Antioch, Pleasant View, and Inwood.

The program was followed as nearly as possible; several who had parts assigned were unable to attend, but their places were filled by others. The meeting went off without a jar and all pronounced it one of the best meetings we ever had. Several were there from abroad and we had a good representation of churches. All seemed filled with a zeal to press on in the good work with renewed energy. May we press on realizing that the day is far spent and the night cometh when no man can work. A number of excellent papers were read during the meeting which will be presented to the readers of The Restitution.

The committee on Program for the November meeting consists of R. F. Cordill, Plymouth, L. B. Boggs, Argos, and Flora Harris, Rensselaer.

Iowa Conference Report.

The twelfth Annual Conference of the Church of God in the State of Iowa was held at Waterloo, Iowa, Aug. 19-20. We had a glorious meeting. The weather was perfect and camping out was both healthful and pleasant.

There were held besides the business sessions of the Conference, nine devotional meetings, five children's meetings, two Sunday schools, ten social and prayer meetings, twenty-four sermons and one entire day given to the Young People's Society—"the Bereans" and also one day to the temperance workers, making in all over fifty meetings.

We felt sorry to remember that so many of our dear ones could not be present. What a whole lot of good things you have missed.

Bro. W. L. Crowe will be our evangelist for the coming year. The officers elected are A. J. Eychaner Pres.; Mrs. Sadie Clark, Sec.; Mrs. Hester V. Berry, Cor. Sec.; J. W. Appleyard, of Odebolt, Treas.; and Mrs. Lilly Rockwell, State Sunday school Supt.

Ten letters from brothers and sisters, who could not be present were read, and they were full of prayers and good wishes and good words and money to help the cause of the dear Lord.

The Conference recommended that our ministers in all the States wherever they find two or more believers organize them for work and Bible study, and that they take into their number all who are favorable to the great truths of the kingdom and life through the Christ.

A move was made for the purchase of a permanent campground, and $170.00 was paid in and we yet lack only twelve men and women at $10 each to complete the purchase and dig a well. Who will help us?

The following ministerial certificates were issued: H. T. Hansen, John Garton, A. D. Allen, W. L. Crowe, Mrs. Libbie Palmer, J. M. Priminar, P. B. Stouffer, J. B. Craton, A. J. Eychaner, Mrs. Lillie Rockwell, J. B. Adams, O. J. Allard, D. M. Hudler, C. S. Brown, C. F. Kennedy and John T. Prime.

The next Annual Conference, the Lord willing, will be held about Aug. 25, 1900, on our new campground at Cedar River Park, near Waterloo, Ia.

Temperence Day was set for Tuesday of the Conference, and Berean's or Young People's day for Wednesday of the Conference week.

The meeting was characterized with harmony and earnestness, while the preaching was of a high, Biblical order, and showed an earnest desire to learn the will of God and our duty. While the sermons were all good there are some which deserve especial mention, one on "The Kingdom," Elder John Garton; one on "The Signs of the Times," by Lillie Rockwell; and the closing sermon by Elder Geo. Moyer, and one on the "Forces in Man," by J. W. Vandewalker.

Another year of labor for the Master is before us. Who will come up to the help of the Lord with labor and with money. Brothers and sisters of Iowa, let us not weary in well doing. Let us each one fill the place assigned you and the work will go nobly forward. During the year some have put on Christ by baptism, and they are now a part of the family and they should not be forgotten in prayer and in labor. You have done well during the past year, yet we believe we can do more in the year to come. And now brethren we commend you to God and to the Word of his grace, which is able to build you up, and to give you an inheritance among all them that are sanctified.

The reception committee reported 124 present.

Report of Meetings.

After my return from my Western trip, in May and June, I spent a few days at home. On June 24th I left home again for Ohio, from whence I had received an invitation to deliver a number of discourses. I spoke at the little church 5 times and 3 times at the city of Nobleville, at the residence of Bro. M. Bennett. I then boarded the train for Roll, in Blackford Co., where I remained over Sunday, July 2nd. On the 4th I started on an Eastern tour from which I returned Aug. 30th. I visited the following places: Niagara Falls, N. Y.; Solina, Hatchley and Fonthill, Ontario, and Salem, Ohio. Number of discourses at Niagara Falls 15; at Solina, Ont, 5; at Hatchley, 7; at Fonthill, 5, and at Salem, Ohio, 2. At several of these places there have not any of the preaching brethren for some time, and they expressed their satisfaction at having preaching once again after a long time; and at each place they have said, "come again."

It is the writer's conviction that if some one could visit some of the above named places occasionally, with others in the vicinity, no little good might be done in the interests of the truth. He has matured the conclusion that without preaching—in the commonly accepted sense of the term—the interest in the truth soon abates and in time dies out entirely. "It pleased God through the foolishness of preaching, to save them that believe." "How shall they hear without one preaching?" As one scans the great field the exclamation escapes one's lips: "The harvest how great; the laborers, how few!" And the time, how short. I would say to the brethren one and all, be true to your calling, and our Christ, who as a Son is faithful in all his house, whose house are we, if we hold the confidence and rejoicing of our hope firm unto the end. Let your light shine, be blameless and harmless and the sons of God in the midst of a crooked and perverted nation, among whom shine ye as lights in the world. Don't grow weary in well doing, for in due season we shall reap if we faint not. What a comfort to think that the time will come when the saints shall possess the kingdom. May we be worthy of this distinction.

Many thanks to the brethren for all their kindness. Yours in the gospel,

A. H. Zilmer.

The Coming of Jesus.

This event of prophecy and promise is abundantly and plainly set before us in the Sacred Word. It is constantly held before our gaze—not as a cold fact—but as a warm and living truth that touches the heart. It is styled "that blessed hope." Titus ii. 13, and the believer is represented as looking for it, well may our faith lay hold of it and our deepest affections find in it a support around which we cling. It stirs the noblest emotions of our being and awakens songs of joy from every believing heart. In the early church, not to sigh for the return of the Lord was regarded as a sure sign of apostasy. Gibbon, the skeptical historian, who wrote the "Decline and Fall of Rome," bore honorable testimony to the purity of the Apostolic church and that of the succeeding century, basing it upon the fact that the Christians of that early day lived in constant expectation of the Lord's coming. I think it was the late A. J. Gordon, who said that no sermon was complete if it contained no reference to God's grand event. John the beloved Apostle said of his appearing and our being with him, that "every man that hath this hope in him, purifieth himself even as he is pure." What a power there is in it when viewed in near prospect, in making and keeping us pure. We feel like frowning away every evil thought, every impure imagination, and of having our hearts imbued with the spirit of kindness, of love and of mercy; desiring continually to be in a heavenly frame of mind.

"Come Lord Jesus, let this be
The herald note of jubilee;
And when we meet and when we part,
The salutation from the heart.

He is coming! Catch the strain,
Old John welcome back again,
Not in lowly state, as when
He an offering died for men.

But as King, God's mighty Son,
Rightful heir to David's throne;
To rule the tribes of Israel,
And the world at large as well—

Break in twain the battle bow,
Lay on this proud oppressor low;
Quench the lust of human greed,
Satisfy the poor man's need.

Bid the storms of passion cease,
Wake the blessed songs of peace;
Still creation's weariest groan,
Spread o'er earth from zone to zone;
Underneath our feet as skies,
Lovely fruits of Paradise.

He is coming. This must be personal and literal and pre-millennial to meet the requirements of New Testament language, and all the conditions of the great plan of human redemption; and nothing short of this will satisfy the language of every true believer's heart. Do we realize the full import of the event? What does it mean to us who profess to love him and have prayed so often, "Thy kingdom come." It is no ordinary event capable of awakening only a passing interest; for on it hang eternal issues—my salvation and yours. It means to us the working of a mighty but instantaneous change in our being—a change in every part of these "bodies of our humiliation." The pains, the aches, the sense of weariness and weakness of body and mind, which burden us in our mortal state, will vanish at his coming. If faithful, we are destined to experience this marvelous transformation when the power of the Holy Spirit thrills through these poor nerves, so long the common track of pain, and we feel ourselves unburdened of the old creation and clothed upon with the new. Is this our pending, happy lot? The thought thrills my inmost being. Language is too poor to express it.

John L. Wince.

Editor Restitution:

Brother D. M. Hudler has been with us since August 10th. He preached 19 discourses. He is an able man, a workman that needeth not to be ashamed, rightly dividing the Word of truth. I am glad to say that four were added to the church, and four were re-immersed. He preached his farewell discourse on Sunday. We had a photograph taken of the place or grounds where the meetings were held. He has returned to Southern Ill. He left a good impression and many friends. We hope he will be spared to return and preach for us again. We know several more that are almost persuaded to obey the truth, and hope that they will not delay too long; for by-and-by the Master is coming and those that are ready will enter in through the gates into the city. May we all meet in the kingdom of God, where there is to be no more sorrow, sickness and death, nor crying, for God will wipe away all tears from off all faces. "Even so, come Lord Jesus and come quickly," is the prayer of your Brother in Christ.

Z. E. Brant.

Dear Restitution:

I love to read the letters from the dear brothers and sisters. It makes my heart thrill. I feel that I am one of God's children and I love my dear Master with all my heart, and I think I am on the straight and narrow way that leads to everlasting life, when the Son of Man shall come in his glory, and all the holy angels with him, then shall he sit upon the throne of his glory, and before him shall be gathered all nations and he shall separate them one from another as a shepherd divideth his sheep from the goats, and he shall set the sheep on his right hand, but the goats on the left, then shall the King say unto them on his right hand, Come ye blessed of my Father, inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world.

Dear brothers and sisters, I want to be one of those that will be set on the right hand. I want you all to pray for me that I may hold out faithful.

J. M. Howard.

Poetry.

Have You Done This?

Have you felt for the heart that is broken,
For him who has lost in life's race,
For the one whom the world in its rudeness
Has pushed clear out of his place?

Have you cared for the sick one whose anguish
Fills each day with the language of pain,
From whose cheeks bright roses have vanished—
Will heaven thank you, my friend, again?

Have you comforted [illegible] of the erring feet,
And helped him, by steps [illegible]
And again [illegible]
To look [illegible]

Have you tried to lift up [illegible]
To cure or the poor and [illegible],
With acts of compassion and kindness
That send up [illegible]

Have you pointed to the [illegible]
Who has wandered in [illegible]
Who is almost outside of God's mercy,
But is seeking, God's never [illegible]

Have you wept for your folly and failure,
And turned clear away from all sin
Then resolved to serve God and be happy,
Seek rest and enter therein?

Then come to God's temple of mercy,
Where Jesus with tenderest care
Will open his storehouse of blessing
And give to the keeping a share.

He will tell thee—already hath said it—
"The merciful man shall be blest."
And he that loves God and his neighbor
Shall dwell in his mansions of rest.

Who Shall Enter Into the City?

Let me, my dear brothers and sisters, start my paper by telling a little incident that happened this spring while I was visiting in and near Goldendale, Wash.

I attended Sunday school one Sunday. The classes were divided up according to the age of the children as usual. A class of small boys were just in front of me, and was taught by a young lady, who was trying to impress upon their minds the necessity of being good at all times, always trying to do right, etc. Finally she said, "What shall we do when the time comes to reward the good, if after all we have failed to come up to the standard required, failed to do as we should, that the good will enter into that beautiful city, the door will be shut and we are not allowed to enter in, What will we do then?"

After a moment one little boy said, "I know, we will have to camp out." Of course we could but smile at his quaint answer, but how true it is, for did not John say by the Spirit of God, "Blessed are they that do his will (or his commandments) that they may have a right to the tree of life, and may enter in through the gates into the city. For without are dogs, sorcerers, fornicators, murderers, idolators and whosoever loveth and maketh a lie." This is what I thought of, so the little boy's answer was not out of the way after all.

Now, let us notice some of the characteristics of the kind of people that are prohibited from entering into the city. For without are dogs. Why called dogs? I judge it is because of their violent temper and irritable disposition.

Richard Watson says in his Biblical and theological dictionary, "By the law of Moses the dog was declared unclean, and was held with great contempt among the Jews. Yet they had them in considerable numbers in their cities. They were not however shut up in their courts or houses, but were forced to seek their food where they could find it."

David in the 59th Psalm when praying to be delivered from his enemies, compared them to dogs who go about the city at night, prowl about for food, and growl and are clamorous if they are not satisfied.

Our Savior was led to adopt the same comparison. We find that he and all the early writers, made it a custom of comparing certain classes of men with animals supposed to resemble them in character. He said, "Give not that which is holy unto the dogs, lest they turn again and rend you."

I think Paul had the same idea when he wrote to the Galatians, when he said, "But if ye bite and devour one another, take heed that ye be not consumed one of another." And for this reason this kind of people cannot enter into the city.

The next in the catalogue are sorcerers and fornicators. We know their character, they too are among those that cannot enter in. Idolators come next. We all understand that we can be an idolater if we do not bow down to wood and stone. We can idolize many many things. We can idolize our own good name. Paul in his letter to the Romans was afraid of this, where he said, "For I say through the grace given unto me, to every man that is among you, not to think of himself more highly than he ought. But to think soberly according as God has dealt to every man the measure of faith."

Again, we can make idols of our children, our friends, our world's goods. This is too often the case. Our Savior said, "Ye cannot serve God and mammon." We can make an idol of our particular church. I have observed often, people that seemed to worship their church that their fathers and their grand fathers have worshiped in, more than the Lord that bought them.

The beloved disciple when he was very old, in writing to the church, said "Little children, keep yourselves from idols." Let us take this advice given so long ago, that we may be found worthy to enter through the gates into the city.

And murderers. Now, John says, "Whosoever hateth his brother is a murderer. And ye know that no murderer hath eternal life abiding in him." Well he says, "Ye know." How did they know. Christ taught it on the Mount. Paul taught it. John and all of the apostles taught it and I might well say, "Ye know." And so do we know just as well as they, yet how many show by their conduct that they do hate their brother, and try to make those texts mean some one else. John seemed to think that these two little words, love and hate, meant a great deal. Let us be careful to take the word love for our motto, and love our fellowmen as our Savior has taught us, that we may not be of those that have to camp outside the gates.

The last of the catalogue, "And whosoever loveth and maketh a lie." This is all very plain, we know what a lie is. We know whether we love them or make them. The prophet has plainly told us that they that do these things cannot enter into the city. But we started out to find who is to enter into that beautiful city of our God.

We will read from Rev. xxi. commencing at the 23rd verse, "And the city had no need of the sun, neither of the moon to shine in it, for the glory of God did lighten it, and the Lamb is the light thereof. And the nations of them that are saved shall walk in the light of it. And the kings of the earth do bring their glory and honor into it, and the gates of it shall not be shut at all by day, for there shall be no night there. And they shall bring the glory and honor of the nations into it. And there shall in no wise enter into it anything that defileth, neither whatsoever worketh abomination or maketh a lie. But they which are written in the Lamb's book of life." It seems to me, that we who have the Bible and profess to believe it, ought not to be mistaken in this matter, for the Word tells us plainly who shall enter in and who shall not.

Now, who are those that have their names written in the book of life. Jesus has told us, that those that keep his commandments and those that believe on his name and love one another as he gave them commandment, are entitled to the inheritance. And now in conclusion let me say, if we have forgotten in any way to do right, let us begin again. If we have done things that we know and feel that are wrong, let us make it right, not only to our brethren, but to any members who may not be Christians. They may be watching us to see where we make failures. If we would be living epistles, known and read of all men, let it be a clean page that is read. If our first love, let us return.

The Savior will receive us as the shepherd will his lost sheep. Has he not said that he is the good shepherd? He may chide, but will not forsake us. He can and will wipe out every stain, when we show by word and deed that we have mended our ways. But let us not be selfish, and be satisfied with our own salvation. But try and help each other over slippery places, where our own feet had well nigh slipped.

If we have forgotten to be good,
And taken up with sinning,
Begin again, begin again;
All life is but beginning.
The singer tries his part,
Before the anthem's swelling;
The child must spell his lessons o'er,
And stumble in the spelling.
And every scholar ere he's learned
His prizes or his passes,
Has had some task to him returned;
Or lost his place in classes.
The difference between good and bad,
Lies in their way of taking,
When falls and blunders they have had,
And steps and slips mistaking.
Our Savior walks on life's hillside;
And if he hears our sighing,
He'll look us out and he may chide,
But will not leave us crying.
And when he's wiped our tearful eyes,
With love as like a mother's,
We've got to mend our slippery ways
With stepping stones for others.
So when we hear life's evening bell,
Sin soft yet so surprising,
It's chimes shall tell [illegible]
Yet he was always rising.

A Prophetic Curiosity—Ezekiel's Woe on France.

The following is clipped from the Chicago Sunday Tribune:

"Every body in France seems to be having a grand or a bad grand indifferent time, according as the Dreyfus trial goes. There is always trouble in that peculiar country, for if the nobility be on top then the common people suffer; if the common people are in power then the nobles bide; if the army rules, then its mailed hand pinches all classes, the mailed somewhat harder than the titled. It is the army which seems supreme as against church and state and poor Dreyfus—Dreyfus the Jew, Dreyfus the accused, the convicted, the partly punished son of Israel. The lovers of fair play all round the world are watching this contest of a man fighting for his liberty—fighting the French army. It is not concealed that the animus of this struggle is hatred of the Jews—and the public sentiment of the people is well defined by Semitic and anti-Semitic societies. This race hostility by France puts pertinent the contents of a rare pamphlet on this same subject printed 150 years ago.

Ezekiel began these denunciations in the thirty-fifth chapter of his book with:

'Moreover, the Word of the Lord came unto me, saying, Son of Man, set thy face against Mount Seir and prophesy against it.'

The prophet continues:

Verse 3. O Mount Sier, I am against thee and I will stretch out my hand against thee.

4. I will lay thy cities waste.

5. Because thou hast had a perpetual hatred and hast shed the blood of the children of Israel.

6. I will prepare thee unto blood and blood shall pursue thee.

7. Thus will I make Mount Seir most desolate, and cut off from it him that passeth out and him that returneth.

10. Because thou hast said these two nations and these two countries shall be mine and we shall possess it.

13. Thus with your mouth you have boasted against me and have multiplied your words against me.

14. When the whole earth rejoiceth I will make thee desolate.

15. As thou didst rejoice at the inheritance of the house of Israel because it was desolate so will I do unto thee; thou shalt be desolate, O Mount Sier.

These are the writer's texts, and he tackles them with much enthusiasm and not a little erudition. Yet the pamphlet reads in the light of today as if the man were either mad or one of the funny men of his time, where it takes a century and a half to appreciate. A summary of his arguments is given, so that each one can decide for himself, always keeping in mind the object of the work—the destruction of the French because of their persecution of the sons of Israel.

'It hath frequently been objected by cavillers,' the author begins immediately after his quotations, 'that some interpretations of Scripture prophecies do not give full satisfaction, and that so many critical inquiries are necessary in order to make them tally with the events supposed to be foretold that they are more calculated for the amusements of the learned than for the edification of the simple. But if this hath been objected to in other cases it cannot be in the present, for I am confident that I need only read the words of the prophet Ezekiel, without making the least comment upon them, to convince the most ignorant, the most simple and most illiterate of our countrymen that the above quoted chapter foretelleth the destruction of our natural and heriditary enemy, the Frenchman.'

He takes the oddest ways to identify his subject. Stop the first liveried servant on the street, he says, and to your question as to who is this Mountsiers will answer that 'London swarms with mountsiers,' and that 'the poor Englishman's bread is taken out of his mouth by beggarly Frenchmen? 'Any private gentleman of his majesty's foot guards will swear vengeance on him for his masked batteries at Fontenoy; the sailors will call him a cowardly rogue, drubbed by Admiral Hawke with others waiting to make him feel the weight of English metal.' In a word, there is not a shoeboy at Spring-Garden or a linkboy at either playhouse, a porter at the custom-house or a chairman at Whites who hath not learnt sooner than he learneth the Lord's prayer or his catechism that one Englishman is a match for at least ten mountsiers.'

This was his recommendation for a way of getting at the sense of the common people as to the meaning of the word mountsier—not by critical research, but by an 'appeal to the natural sentiments of the illiterate,' who decided without knowing it that 'mountseir' and Frenchman (mountsier, or as they called it in those days, mounseer) were one and the same thing—certainly an easy if not a convincing way of settling a doubt.

He starts out as if it were a self-evident matter that the English are the children of Israel, against whom mountseir 'beareth a perpetual hatred, shedding their blood whenever he had a chance, regarding such attempts at butchery as one verification of the prophet's prediction. He appears so tickled with his idea as to advocate the reading of this most remarkable chapter in every parish church throughout the kingdom for three months to come,' and he expresses confidence that there would no longer be occasion to continue 'the proclamation that offereth those ample premiums which the lurking sailors at present doth not think it prudent to accept,' and so tender themselves as volunteers to assist 'in laying mountseir's cities desolate.

The author admits that while he was quite sure as to the party meant by Ezekiel he strengthened his interpretation by referring the passages to learned men, whose opinions he attached. One 'W. R.' concludes that 'mountseir' means a great nation, for it could not be Mount Seir, for it would be absurd to talk of a mountain 'having cities' and 'a perpetual hatred against the children of Israel' and of 'shedding their blood.' There was no great nation of mountseirs save that of France. That settled that part of the prophecy in the mind of 'W. R.'

Another referee, 'W.,' regards Israel as a type of England (verse 5) because the latter seems the home of God's favored people, owing to its learning and its religious liberty. But 'W. R.' who has passed already upon another doubt, reasons out that England is well typified under the name of Israel 'because modern England impiously and in opposition to all Scripture prophecies, took the Israelites or Jews into its bosom, naturalizing and making them Englishmen.'

The thirteenth verse provokes the ire of 'W. L.' into this caustic declaration:

'Can there be drawn a more lively and natural picture than this is of the French, the nation of Mountseirs? For the French are noted above all nations for their boasting. Un dieu, un Paris (one God; one Paris) is a proverb always in a Frenchman's mouth and a proverb which seemeth to border nearly upon the blasphemy charged upon them by the Prophet. And that they are above all men, famous for multiplying their words; that they are eternal talkers, full of noise, but void of sense; this is a complete character of the whole nation.'

This long ago forgotten scribbler hated the monsieurs to such an extent as to assume that his own nation was Jewish in order to interpret Ezekiel. But with these verses as texts why not apply their threats to the French of the present day instead of ignoring the material they offer? The old prophet's words are as vengeful now as ever and it does not require rubber arguments to make a case against the 'mountsier' of 1899. Dreyfus the Jew is, according to developments, the butt of vicarious sacrifice. France is incensed against the Jew and this hatred infuriates the army and divides the people into the Semites and the anti-Semites—a nation against such a race as the world never had beside, a race predestined against extinction, surviving 2,000 years of pitiless persecution and thriving under oppression. France is no lover of the Jew, though it uses his wisdom and his money and worships the Savior and the Savior's mother, who came from his common people. It has had 'perpetual hatred and hath shed the blood of the children of Israel.'

'I will prepare thee unto blood and blood shall pursue thee' is a threat fulfilled again and again by the revolutions that have made France the slaughter pen of Europe. If it is to be made 'most desolate,' and if there is to be 'cut off from it him that passeth out and him that returneth' it would need only another revolution to create a fulfilment, a revolution this time that would be a war of religions affecting the civilized world.

"These two nations and these two countries shall be mine' might mean Germany and England. France is athelstical and the thirteenth verse is easily understood. The whole earth is rejoicing under the blessings of peace. It is then, saith the prophet, 'I will make thee desolate.' Because the inheritance of the house of Israel has been desolation, from the first capture of Jerusalem, and France has rejoiced at it, torturing the miserable Dreyfus as a son of that house, as a type of that race, because it was desolate, so will I do unto thee; thou shalt be desolate, O Mount Seir.'

The enigma reader of 1748, whose interpretations we have followed, was not half so good a seer as the man who, in his chair at his breakfast table in America, from his morning paper reads the cable reports of the court at Rennes and between the lines sees that Dreyfus is being tried not so much for treason, which is unproven, as for being a Jew, which is proven.

Perhaps Ezekiel really meant France and Dreyfus when he hurled his anathemas against Mount Seir."

It was long ago decreed by the Eternal, that he who cursed Abraham should be cursed, and also that he who blessed Abraham, should be blessed.

This has been literally carried out with regard to the descendants of Abraham. Within our own day, every Latin nation who have persecuted Israel, have met with a terrible retribution, the last being Spain, God using the United States as his scourge.

In France, we have the spectacle of one man—a Jew—attracting the attention and interest of all nations. This means something far beyond the man being tried: what the outcome will be, is at present difficult to tell. The pretext of the trial is treason, but the fact is: HE IS A JEW. We are passing through strange happenings. Watch!

Our Neglected Yesterdays.

To do the duty, the nearest duty, simple and natural as it may seem, is really the most difficult thing in life. To see it even is difficult. I do not know what it is in man that makes him enamoured of the distant thing. It is always tomorrow, and tomorrow. Today we will dream and plan and postpone; tomorrow we will act; and so life gets to be a snarl of neglected yesterdays, a deceiving show of promised tomorrows, nothing really accomplished.—J. R. W. Ware, in Sabbath Reading.

Poetry.

The Golden Now.

The earth is load with discontentments muttered,
By foolish mouths—the selfish and the vain;
And yet the world of agony unuttered
Lies behind lips that never tell their pain.

The voiceless dark is loaded with repentance,
In solemn courts of midnight, where o'ercast
With sorrow, conscience looks its silent sentence
Against the culprit actions of the past.

And countless eyes, aghast with blank reflections,
Stare down the highway which their feet have known,
Where stand afar the ghastly recollections,
Like frowning statues, not to be o'erthrown.

While fancy sees them rise in retributions,
A spector file along the future way,
To blight the hopes and chill the resolutions,
Which right should marshal for the coming day.

Oh ye who cower in trouble at the errors
Belaking memory conjures where you wait,
Rise, and against the past with all its errors,
With hand indignant, swing the iron gate!

Rise in the Golden Now, and ope its portal,
That door-way which tomorrow never opens—
Worthy your manhood and your God immortal,
Go forward to the harvest of your hopes.

Nor the future mantle of December
Become a coward's sackcloth, ashen gray,
To doom your aged anguish to remember
The precious chances you refuse today.

What's done is done—let errors past recalling,
In gulfy waters of oblivion drown:
The fret of retrospection, hot and galling,
Wilts to the rust the flower of courage down.

Until despair half makes the soul contented,
To sit reluctant at the yet untried:
Perpetual brooding over what's repented,
Is but the drug of constant suicide.

Such arrow is a winter owl, foreboding
For future wilderments nights of cure,
While cheerful thoughts are happy song birds, loading
With May time music all the summer air.

The vain regrets we nurture in our bosoms
Are deadly nightshades, which we feed with tears;
But all the heart becomes a bed of blossoms,
When hope is found and contentment cheers.

Shake from your feet the dust with wholesome scorning;
Against the ugly, never to be undone
From out the cloudy darkness, like the morning,
With glowing brow, go forth into the sun.

And to the duty nearest, most defiant,
With steadfast courage, lay your shouldered strength,
And conquering more than cities, like a giant,
Arise the master of yourself at length.

Prophetic hope shall lead you to new pleasures,
Along the yielding pathway of the plow,
To yellow harvests and to orchard treasures,
The fruit of action is the Golden Now.

And when the tranquil evening crowns your labor
With sheaves and fruits and welcome home hold songs,
At peace with heaven, your conscience, and your neighbor,
Resign your prayerful heart where it belongs.

Selected.

Heb. ix. 39, 40.

The Apostle has completed his enumeration of long line of worthies who were well spoken of on account of their faith. It was their faith that marked them out before man and God. Much good could not be affirmed of them in many respects,—but this could be said, "they believed." They were formed out of no better clay than others. They possessed natures not less defiled. But still "they believed." It was their believing that brought them continually nigh. It was simply as believers that God recognized them; and it was simply as believers that they walked with God. This was a believing life from first to last. And such is the life of every saint. Such is to be the Church's life until the Lord come. She has everything in promise, nothing in possession. She has a kingdom in reVision, but not an inch of ground in actual enjoyment now. Nor is one age or section of the Church better than another in this respect: all are the same; all have the same hope,—but not one has received the inheritance. That inheritance is equally a future thing to all; all are to receive it together; not one before the other. This is, in substance, the Apostle's statement in the passage before us, which has been so often discussed, but little understood:—

"All these (ancient believers), though they received a good report on account of their faith, yet were not put in possession of the thing promised." They neither received the inheritance at the time they were here, nor have they received it since. It is still one of the "good things to come."

Then follows a clause which ought either to be read as a parenthesis, or placed at the end of the verse. Let us treat it as a parenthesis, and omit as till we have connected the last clause of the verse with the 39th. The whole would run thus:—"These all, though they received a good report on account of their faith, yet did not receive the thing promised, in order that they, without us, should not be perfected." That is to say, the actual possession of the inheritance (or thing promised) has not been given; it has been deferred (till the Lord come), in order that no age or section of the Church should be perfectly blest and glorified without all the rest; for all must be raised together; all must be caught up together; all must be crowned together.

What, then, is the meaning of the parenthesis? Its meaning is as follows:—The Apostle had spoken of the promise, or thing promised; and having mentioned this, he adds parenthetically, by way of explanation, "For God has indeed some better thing in view for us, no less than for them." That is to say, "The inheritance is for us, as well as for them; the promise was indeed made to them, but it indures us also." The "better thing" is not to be taken as meaning some better thing for us than what they possessed. No. But as referring to something better than any had received; something which eye had not seen, nor ear heard; something more glorious than had ever been enjoyed by any saint, or any portion of the Church, from the beginning.

That "better thing" is the inheritance—the kingdom. This inheritance belongs to us who live in these latter days, no less than to those in the earlier times. It is an inheritance which God himself has prepared. It is an inheritance which becomes ours, in title and right, the moment that we believe.—but which shall be enjoyed by none until the Lord come.

Hence it is to the day of the Lord that we look as to the day of our common re-entrance into Eden—the day when, as one vast multitude out of every nation, we shall together enter in through the gates into the city—the day of our common crowning, our common triumph; for it is to be one crowning triumph, one entrance for the whole Church from the beginning: they are not crowned alone, or in fragments, or in sections,—but in one glorious hour they receive their everlasting crowns, and take their seats in simultaneous gladness upon the long-expected throne.

Conference Notice.

The Quarterly Conference of the Church of God, in Michigan, will convene (D. V.) at Millbrook, Mecosta Co., Michigan, on Friday, Oct. 6th, 1899, and continue over the following Sunday. All of like precious faith are cordially invited to attend. Brothers and sisters, we once more appeal to you to come and enjoy a short season with us talking over the things concerning Jesus and the resurrection, and the kingdom of God. Come with your hearts full of love and self-sacrifice, and we are sure you will not come in vain. Those coming by railroad from the north stop at Millbrook; from the south, at Blanchard, changing cars at Edmore for Blanchard. Those coming from south of Grand Rapids, change at Grand Rapids, take the Detroit Grand Rapids and Western train at 7.09 A. M., no other train connects at Edmore, only have to wait there about ten or fifteen minutes. Blanchard is about two miles from the place of meeting, at the Decker school house. Able speakers are expected to be present.

Yours for the truth,
EMMA JACKMAN, Sec.

The next annual Conference of the Churches of God in Christ Jesus will convene at Oregon, Ill. Friday, Sept. 22, and continue over Sunday. This will be our second annual conference. We are arranging for a profitable meeting. Brothers Eychauer, Conner, and Hudler have signified their intention to be present, while other evangelists have been invited. The programme will be published later. It is hoped that a good delegation will be present from each of the churches of Illinois, prepared to take an active part in the meeting, so an invitation is extended to the brethren throughout the State who are connected with any church society or otherwise, to be with us, also to brethren outside the State.

It is particularly requested that all who design to be present shall notify Brother J. A. Lindsay, Oregon, Ill. as soon as possible, who is preparing to make provision to entertain all who come from a distance free, and in order that this may be properly done he would like to know as early as possible in advance how many purpose coming.

Oregon is on the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy R. R.

Letters from isolated members who cannot be present will be received and read with pleasure. Either come or send a few words of comfort and good cheer.

Works of Bro. Wiley Jones.

TWELVE WORDS, or the true meaning of Hell, Soul, Spirit, Ghost, Paradise, Incorruption, Incorruptible, Immortal, Immortality, Forever, Everlasting, Eternal, and their originals as learned by their uses in the Bible. A tract of 40 pages, sold formerly at 10 cents a copy.

THE GOSPEL OF THE KINGDOM, an 8 page, double column tract, sold formerly at 10 cents a dozen.

EARLY LESSONS, suitable for old and young, 30 pages, sold formerly for 10 cents a copy.

These works are excellent for use by those who wish to do missionary labor, and we offer them at such a low price that they should be out in a short time. Bro. Jones has published editions of these tracts printed, and by dying suddenly, and his Widow being in feeble health, we have undertaken the task of selling them. Her income is quite limited, and all that can be gotten out of the sales goes to her after expenses are paid. When you buy these tracts you get several times the worth of your money, and also aid a worthy Sister, who will thank you for it.

Assorted package 30 cents per pound. Gospel of the Kingdom, alone at 25 cents per pound.

The Gospel of the Kingdom.

Advocated in a series of Ten Discourses. A Volume of 288 pages, cloth 25 cents, leather bound, embossed, and gilt edges, $1.00. By Wiley Jones. This book is so well known that it is only necessary to announce that it is for sale, to insure a market for it. We have undertaken to dispose of these books for the Widow of our lamented Brother Jones, and while getting them at this low price, you at the same time will help Sister Jones to much-needed money.

Poetry.

A Song of Israel.

O Jer.. ?' wonderer through the weary years,
Of wild unrest—
A world wide pilgrimage of hopes and fears—
Sometimes in joy, but oft'ner far in tears,
As God knows best.

Since Jacob laid him down that night to sleep,
On Bethel's stone,
And saw the angel legions downward sweep;
Their watch around the earth to keep,
Never alone.

Beside the mystic Nile, on Egypt's sand,
He pitched his tent:
Then on the desert as the night-cloud fared,
In cloud and fire still pointing to the land
Of rest content.

Beside Euphrates, where old Babylon's wall,
So proudly stood,
He saw the giant empires rise and fall
A captive exile, yet unharmed through all,
Beside that flood.

And when in wrath the Roman eagles came,
To Zion's hill,
And drove him in thousands out in flame,
A stranger in the earth—Jehovah's name
Upheld him still.

See yonder on the snow-clad Russian plain,
His children driven—
Beset and hunted by the imperial train,
Like sheep by wolves—but surely not in vain,
They cry to heaven.

For brighter than the northern lights that gleam
Upon the air,
The signals of the great Shekinah stream,
And like the memories of a blessed dream,
Bid him—good cheer!

Good cheer, O Jacob! though a wanderer still,
In all the earth;
Thy foes will but the promises fulfill,
And drive the exile home to Zion's hill,
That gave him birth.

God speed the day when Jew and Gentile all,
Shall meet as one
At the glad welcome of their Father's call,
In that dear home where shadows never fall,
Their warfare done.

What would Jesus do? No. 9

PINE WOODS BIBLE CLASS.

Teacher. We still continue to suspend our own investigations, while we listen gladly to the recitals which have come before us for the last few weeks. This week we have the continuance of the topic, The baptism of the Holy Spirit, etc.

Mr. Williams. Since our last conversation on the Baptism of the Holy Spirit, my mind has dwelt upon the matter considerably. Since I saw you last, I have made a flying trip to Chicago, and on Thursday noon, I attended the Willard Hall prayer meeting. A lady from Australia addressed the meeting. Before the address a Mrs. Hitchcock was asked to lead in prayer. She prayed for a Baptism of the Holy Spirit, that it might come down upon that meeting the same as it did upon the disciples on the day of Pentecost, and also that the speaker might be filled with the Holy Ghost. It made me think of our last conversation, and I thought I would watch the effect, and see what kind of demonstration we should have. I knew very well, that if that prayer was answered, there would be an unusual commotion in Willard Hall, because on the occasion above referred to, "There suddenly came a sound from heaven, as of a RUSHING MIGHTY WIND (a terrific gale) and it filled all the house where they were sitting. And there appeared unto them CLOVEN TONGUES, like as of FIRE (a fearful sight) and sat upon each of them: and they were all filled with the Holy Ghost, and began to speak with other tongues as the Spirit gave them utterance." (Something never seen in modern baptisms.) "Now when this was noised abroad, (if this should happen at Willard Hall, it would be telegraphed to the remotest corners of the earth) the multitude came together and were CONFOUNDED, because that every man heard them speak in his own language. And they were all AMAZED, and marvelled, saying, one to another, Behold, are not all these which speak Galileans? And how we hear every man in our own tongue wherein we were born." Acts ii. 1-8. I never heard of anything like this in modern baptisms. Have you, Miss Gordon?

Miss Gordon. I never have. I have heard many a prayer for "Pentecostal showers," but never saw a "shower." I have seen people wrought into religious frenzy by a natural means, which is well known to revivalists, and always practiced by them. I have heard them yell, shout and scream in an unearthly manner (there was neither sense, order, or decency in it) and hammer their seats, jump up into the air, whirl around, and fall down in a fit, (a natural result following that kind of excitement) and that they called "getting the power," being "filled with the Holy Spirit." What a contrast when compared with a genuine Baptism of the Holy Spirit, like that on the day of Pentecost.

You said you was going to watch the result of the prayer made at Willard Hall, for a Pentecostal Baptism. Tell me the result, did the baptism come?

Mr. Williams. Well, I watched the one who made the prayer, and the audience who said, "Amen," but no one seemed to me to really expect it. If they did in fact expect such a baptism as was poured out on Pentecost, there would have been an anxious air of expectancy manifested; but it seemed to me that the prayer was ALL FORGOTTEN, after the petitioner took her seat. No one appeared to realize what was prayed for.

She also prayed that the speaker also might be filled with the Holy Ghost. I listened to her speech to see if I could detect a trace of Divine inspiration in her language.

She made an interesting address bearing upon woman's rights and temperance, spiced with some funny stories as illustrations, which were aptly fitted in. To me it seemed quite human, it did not sound like the Holy Spirit through her.

Miss Gordon. Can you relate some of the stories she gave?

Mr. Williams. Yes, here is one of her woman's rights illustrations.

The scene was in a meeting. The theme under discussion interested a lady in the audience, (whose sentiment was opposed to a woman speaking in public) and without invitation she mounted the platform and began addressing the audience. The leader says to her, madam, you must sit down, it is out of place for you to speak here. She paid no attention, but went on. Again he says, my dear woman, you must stop. She did not heed him, but went right on. Again, he interrupted, if you do not desist I shall have you put out. At that four strong men came upon the platform, and placed her in a chair to carry her out. As she was being carried out she remarked: "Well, I am better off than my Master, he had only ONE ASS to carry him, but I have got FOUR."

That was a woman's rights joke all right, but what kind of a spirit inspired it?

The next story was upon the line of temperance. It was a dream. A man had a dream which troubled him, which is as follows:

He was sitting in his room, the door was open, and in came a fat rat, next following this was a blind rat, and the next was a starved rat, and then followed a mouse. He was troubled about it, and told it to his family, and said he could not tell what it meant. His little boy says, "Papa, I can tell you what it means." "Well, my little boy," says he, "what is it?" "Well, Papa, the fat rat is the saloon keeper, the blind rat is yourself, the starved rat is mamma, and the little mouse is me."

A good illustration, but does it have the ring of language usually attributed to Holy men of God, who spake as moved by the Holy Spirit?

We often hear prayers for speakers after this manner: "Fill him with the Holy Spirit, give him words to speak, may he not speak his own words, give him a message for us." There is a not intentional, I grant, but yet such is the case.

SPICE OF INFIDELITY ABOUT SUCH PRAYERS,

Compare it with the following: "And that from a child thou hast known the Holy Scriptures, which are able to make thee wise unto salvation through faith which is in Christ Jesus. All Scripture is given by inspiration of God, and is profitable for doctrine, for reproof, for correction, for instruction in righteousness; that a man of God may be perfect, thoroughly furnished unto all good works." 2 Tim. iii. 15-17.

The above is given as a thorough means, even all that is necessary, all the way from conversion to the final victory. Now, to pray for some other way than the above is to [illegible] as a guide, and instructor, is in effect to say, we do not believe the above is sufficient, to make the child of God "perfect."

Miss Gordon. Yes, so it seems to me, I have often heard such prayers—that "words be given the speaker," and is also continually repeated for others; and these men, who are supposed to have Divine words given them by inspiration of the Holy Spirit; flatly contradict each others teaching. That surely is sufficient ground to doubt the inspiration of the speaker. If they want inspired words to speak, the Holy Scripture is the treasury to draw them from, and not a new inspiration.

There are other people who before taking some important step, wait for the

HOLY SPIRIT TO TELL THEM

what to do. This is also doubting the sufficiency of Scripture as a guide. They sometimes get an impression and at once jump to the conclusion that that is a leading of the Holy Spirit either to do, or not to do what they were contemplating. How do they know it to be so? For all we know, it may be a mere surmise, a thinking of the flesh. Why not adopt something sure as a guide, even that which is sufficient "for reproof, for correction, for instruction in righteousness; that a man of God, may thoroughly furnished unto all good works." This we have in God's Holy Word. Why not be loyal to God, and the Guide he has given?

Mr. Williams. Yes, Miss Gordon, but a passage of Scripture about the Holy Spirit's teaching, has just come to my mind, which I would like to have you comment upon: it reads as follows: "But the Comforter, which is the Holy Ghost, whom the Father will send in my name, he shall teach you (not everybody) all things, and BRING TO YOUR REMEMBRANCE whatsoever I have said unto you." John xiv. 26.

Miss Gordon. The construction of the above language shows that it belongs only to the parties addressed, and to no one else.

During his sojourn among them he said so many things to them which their finite minds would forget, and so needed something to quicken their memories.

Mr. Williams. Why then, more than others?

Miss Gordon. Because many things said to them, was not for their benefit alone, but was intended to be recorded upon the Page of Inspiration, for the guidance of others. See Heb. ii. 3, 4: "How shall we escape, if we neglect so great salvation; which at the FIRST began to be spoken by the Lord, and was confirmed unto us

BY THEM THAT HEARD HIM;

(what they heard was brought to their remembrance by) God also bearing witness, both with signs and wonders, and with divers miracles, and gifts of the Holy Ghost, according to his will."

The phrase, "Bring to your remembrance whatsoever I have said unto you," locates it upon those addressed. The Holy Spirit came according to promise, and brought to memory Jesus' precious sayings to them, which they recorded in holy Writ for the guidance and instruction of all who should come after them. Jesus is not speaking to us now, only through his written Word, which is the finished and complete revelation of God, through holy men of old as they were moved by the Holy Spirit. In point of fact we are better off than they were who lived before the completion of the sure Guide given us, which is now sufficient for every occurrence and detail of life. This any one can find out to be so absolute assurance, if they would only become familiar with the Guide, and hide it in the heart, they would find just the right passage coming unbidden to memory at just the right time, for either comfort or instruction. Try it. You will find it far more satisfactory than some imaginary outside influence which you only surmise is the Holy Spirit, [illegible] you don't know it.

By fol[illegible] sort of a guide, [illegible] of scattering dictory notions, surmises and extravagances. It would take a volume to record the fanatical actions of such people, who often are so sure about such leadings, that the actions they commit are attributed to a disordered brain, and are in consequence confined in insane asylums; same on every other subject, save that which they suppose the Holy Spirit has led them, upon that they cannot reason.

Not so with the Guide God has given us, for through that, "a man of God may be PERFECT, thoroughly furnished unto all good works." 2 Tim. iii. 15-17.

Mr. Williams. That is so, Miss Gordon, I have very often seen people who are said to be taught and led by Holy Spirit, independent of the Bible, do and teach such contradictory things, that I used to wonder why it was so? I once heard a teacher who was leading an adult Bible class, say, that he believed that ministers of all denominations were given a greater measure of the Holy Spirit than the Church members, for the purpose of leading them (the members) into all truth. I asked him if that was the case, how it was that such spirit-taught ministers were doctrinally teaching different things, and opposed and contradicted each other? No answer was forthcoming. The teachings of the Holy Spirit are always in harmony.

Miss Gordon. I venture the assertion that if these ministers would conscientiously study God's Word perfectly independent of outside influences, and opinions, they would all come to believe the same things. Take for example the subject, will earth or heaven be the future home of the redeemed? Let each one take a sheet of paper, and make two columns, write at the head of one, EARTH: and at the head of the other, HEAVEN: then put every passage in the Bible, promising the earth, under that head, and the opposite under the head heaven, and afterward come together, and compare their work, would they not all have the same thing?

Take the immortality of the soul the same way, and what difference could there be. A doctor once told me that he could prove the two opposite sides on any question from the Bible, and challenged me to try him. I told him to try his hand on the immortality of the soul, and you can insure his boasting was quickly silenced.

Let the spirit guided ministers test the question of baptism as between immersion and sprinkling, by the Bible, and a union must result. But not so with the imaginary Holy Spirit instruction. They have no reliable standard to come to, by which to regulate their vagaries and contradictions. You may be sure it is, as the good Old Book says, "If they speak not according to this Word, it is because there is no light in them."

I believe Jesus would stand by the Holy Book, if he were in our place.

W. H. WILSON.

What is Meant by Redemption?

Christ said as is recorded in Matt. xviii. 11; Luke xix. 10; and John xii. 47, that he "came to seek and to save that which was lost." In order to understand the mission of Christ we must first know what was lost, and we have no other way of finding out only by the record given in the Old Testament. I am aware that there are good, honest truth-seeking people, who are opposed to resorting to the Old Testament, they appear to think because the Mosaic law was fulfilled and a new order of worship instituted by Christ and the Apostles, that we have no use for the Old Testament, and there is nothing in it relating to our salvation; but we are commanded to search the Scriptures, John v. 39, that they were written for our admonition, I Cor. x 11, of course that means the Old Testament, for the New was not written at that time as recorded by Luke xxiv. 25.

We read that Christ said to two of his disciples after he rose from the dead, "O fools, and slow of heart to believe all that the prophets have spoken." Christ is the Redeemer. Webster's definition of the word redeem is, "to purchase back, to ransom or rescue from captivity, or from the bonds of sin and its penalties." Accepting Webster's definition, the question comes direct, what was lost, or in jeopardy to be rescued, restored, redeemed? In Gen. 1st and 2nd chapters, we learn that God created and made the heavens and earth, and fitted out the earth with all animal and vegetable life, with light, water and every necessary to man's comfort and pleasure, and pronounced it very good, and then made man, placed him on the earth, gave full dominion over its entire furniture, provided means whereby he could become immortal and live forever, on condition that he obeyed the law. The penalty for disobedience was death; he disobeyed, and incurred the penalty; and lest he should avail himself of the means to become an immortal sinner, and live forever, he was excluded from his Paradisical state, and the tree of life protected from his grasp. Gen. iii. 23, 24.

Man must die, no evading God's law, no suspending the penalty, so death past upon all, the innocent babe as well as the matured culprit, the earth cursed; in place of fruitful fields, thorns and thistles are its products, in place of pleasant pools, quagmires with all their evil fruits as the result. All is gloom, man doomed to die without God or hope in the world. No there is a gleam of hope. The Seed of the woman shall bruise the serpent's head. A glorious hope, the promise of a Redeemer, and when the fullness of time came God sent forth his Son, made of a woman, made under the law, to redeem them that were under the law, that we might receive the adoption of sons. Heb. iv. 4-5.

It is important that we always distinguish the difference between redemption and a gift. "God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth on him might not perish, but have everlasting life." John iii 16. The Son was a free gift, something never before belonging to the world, so he was no part of the lost to be redeemed, but the Redeemer. Man had no claim on the Son or his possession; the Son has a claim on the world and even by the right of purchase. He gave himself a sacrifice for man and the lost world, thereby obtaining to himself the inheritance lost by Adam, who was made a living soul only. Christ, the second Adam, who kept the law, was found perfect, was made a quickening Spirit. I Cor. xv. 45. Christ having become heir of all things, having all power given him, he can give eternal life to whom he will, can dictate the terms by which he will give the second life.

Adam was placed on probation, he proved unfaithful and was not granted spiritual or eternal life. Christ was put on probation, proved faithful, was regenerated, born of the Spirit. So we are put on probation, and if we are obedient to the law, comply with the terms, we will be reproduced, born of the Spirit, and receive the crown of life, Rev. ii. 10. And be permitted to enjoy the earth in its redeemed condition. 2 Peter iii. 6, 7, 13, 14. Then we will be granted to join in that new song, and they sung a new song, saying, "Thou art worthy to take the Book, and to open the seals thereof, for thou wast slain and hast redeemed us to God by thy blood out of every kindred and tongue and people and nation, and hast made us unto our God kings and priests, and we shall reign on the earth." Rev. v. 9, 10.

The terms by which we obtain our salvation are plainly laid down in the teachings of Christ and the Apostles. Paul tells us, Gal. iii. 26, 29, how to become Abraham's seed, which makes us an heir to the promises: after we have been adopted into the family we can retain our heirship by continuing through life as directed by Paul. Rom. xii.

C. P. GRAHAM.

Advice to Preachers.

1. Resolve to be brief, as this is an age of telegraphs and stenography.

2. Be pointed; never preach all around your text without hitting it.

3. State your proposition plainly, but do not stop to particularize.

4. Avoid long introductions; but plunge into your sermon like a swimmer into cold water.

5. Condense; make sure that you have an idea, and then speak it right out, in the plainest, shortest possible terms.

6. Avoid all high-flown language; quote no Hebrew nor Greek; aim to be simply a preacher.

7. Make no apologies. They do not edify, and hence a waste of time.

8. Desire no rapid growth. When the clock has struck twelve it does not strike thirteen next. The full moon grows no larger.

9. Be not over hasty to combat public opinion without pressing reason. He that spits against the wind, spits in his own face.

10. Never scare off a fly with a club when a feather will do as well; and remember you can take more flies with a gill of molasses than with a gallon of vinegar.

11. Never forget that a minister's work is to break hard hearts, and to mend broken bones.

12. Avoid extremes in gesture. Do not be too stiff on the one hand, nor like a limber jack on the other; and remember that gestures are to be seen, not heard.

13. Do not try to tell all you know in one sermon. The art of condensing costs study, but when once attained its value is priceless.

14. Never talk merely to hear yourself: if you do, you weary the hearers.

15. Avoid levity. Jesus was never known to laugh, but often to weep.

16. Be natural. Do not try to ape the tone or gesture of some great man. Be great by being yourself. Guard against what is termed "heavenly tones," a tremulous voice, and "ministerial twang."

17. Be in earnest. Let your hearers see that you believe what you are preaching. How can any preacher go with God's awful message to dying men and women with feelings of indifference?

18. Articulate plainly. Let every word be heard, from the number of the first hymn to the benediction.

19. Consider well the best manner as well as the matter in your preaching.

20. Realize that unless the attention of your hearers is fully arrested and vigorously maintained, the most excellent discourses will be without effect.

21. Unless there be deep feeling, the object of preaching will be defeated. After the understanding is informed and the judgment convinced, the heart and soul must be moved, or no lasting effect is produced.

22. A minister must talk every word from his very heart, and pour out the riches of his own knowledge upon the people around him, by the help of the Spirit and the power of God. Then every word and gesture will be free and natural, and full of life and spirit, and a deep and lasting impression will be made upon the hearts of the hearers.

Important Distinction.

A friend remarked that a member of his church, with an air of pride, came to him and said, "I have been through the Bible five times this year." His pastor looked at him a little while, and then queried: "How often has the Bible been through you?"

He reads and hears God's Word well who seeks to realize it in his life. More knowledge of God's Word will be gained by a single effort to live one of its commands than by a year of reading with no effort to keep the Word of God. Trusting a promise will enable one to know its sweetness far better than to commit it to memory

The Restitution.

"The Restitution of all things Which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his Holy Prophets."

VOLUME XLVIII. PLYMOUTH, INDIANA, SEPTEMBER 20, 1899. NUMBER 35.

The Restitution.

THE RESTITUTION advocates the final "restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint-heirs with him in the government of the nations: the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked: eternal life only through Christ, and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for remission of sins, pre-requisites of the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

Are You One of Them?

By examining our list we find there are between 500 and 600 people whose time has expired. Some only a few months and others some years. If each one of you who are thus owing us would go to the office right now and send the money due us, we would have over a thousand dollars with which to push forward our work.

Brothers and Sisters, we need this money very much. We have earned it—it is ours—and if you do not send it to us, but use it on self, you are simply spending our money. It is not yours—it is ours. Were we in position to do so we would gladly lend you the amount, but the fact is we have bills to pay and cannot lend it to you longer. We ask you kindly and in the spirit of love and justice, to at once send us what you owe us. If you cannot spare it all now, then send part of it, and the balance after awhile. Please do not neglect this, but get a dollar and send to us right away today. We thank you in advance for the favor, and assure you we appreciate it very much.

"Aversion to reproof is not wise, but is the mark of a little mind. A truly great man can bear reproof for the benefit thereby gained. The little fellow is afraid of being snuffed out."

The Christian Advocate says, "Apathy is the disease which has gotten hold of church life. Unless we bestir ourselves we will perish. When war and greed, frolic and fun, fraternity and secularism become of more consequence in popular thought than redemption, salvation, peace and God, it is time for the very stones to cry out the warnings of danger."

A paragraph in Woman's Voice says a preacher who was a great smoker, closed an eloquent address on Christian Activity by exclaiming:—"Brethren, there is no sleeping apartment on the train to glory." An old lady in the front seat who knew the smoking habit of the minister responded, "No brother, nor smoking compartment either."

Brethren, if you love God and truly desire to please him, you will show your love in the way he has himself indicated. Jesus said, "If ye love me, ye will keep my commandments." John xiv. 15. Both by example and precept he has taught this. You need not imagine that you can adopt your own methods to please where he has clearly defined them. If you do you will fail every time. You cannot improve on his rules.

An item in a contemporary says that reports from Southern Russia are to the effect that a current belief on the approaching end of the world is causing a panic among the uneducated classes. At Kharkovu, the capital of the government of that name, workmen are leaving in large numbers, wishing to spend what they consider their last days at their village homes. The factory owners have asked the police to stop this emigration in order to prevent the ruination of business."

"Mortality is a congeries of flesh, blood, bones and viscra, doomed to death and dissolution, and, when alive, possesses cerebral organs, or functions, termed mind,—utterly erring and fallible in their nature."

"*Im*mortality is a congeries of organized entity in literal and absolute contradistinction to mortality, and is obtained, not on the principle of procreation, but by Spirit bestowal, or transformation, by the Spirit power, as the gift of God, "Aionion life; Indeed to those who, by perseverance in good works, are seeking for glory, and honor, and incorruptibility." Rom. ii. 7. Din. "Glory," we understand as "Spirit," "Honor" as status in the kingdom. Incorruptibility as void of organic dissolution, and all animated by "Aionion," or unending life.

This then, is essential immortality. Spirit implies power and mental perfection in "the kingdom of God and of Christ."

A young man once remarked to a pilot, "I suppose you know where all the rocks are in this river?" "No," he replied, "but I know where the deep water is." That is what the believer should know,—the safe path.

Nothing has developed in the Dreyfus case, more than the general comments of people. All outside of France condemn the verdict as unjust, and the French are indignant that the world turns against her for something that is her own concern.

Last week the British government sent a communication, which is described as a demand on the Boers. It was expected that a definite answer would be made, and the question of war or no war settled, but it turns out that President Kruger is almost as expert in such matters as the Sultan, for his answer is evasive, and more diplomacy will be in demand.

Selected.

Narrow and Broad Views.

A great want of the religious world in the present day is a correct knowledge of the terms of salvation as prescribed by the great Teacher himself. It is admitted on all hands (with the exception perhaps of the Universalist) that there are terms of salvation—that God has been pleased in his wisdom and goodness to save such members of the human family as comply with certain conditions. What these conditions are is matter for fair inquiry. As very different views are entertained on the subject every contribution towards a Scriptural answer—whether broad or narrow socalled, should be welcomed by every one who is desirous to know the truth in the matter.

In such an inquiry it should be laid down as a first principle that while every one must judge for himself what are the terms which God has revealed, we are not the judges of whether certain terms are narrow or broad. It is the just dimension of God's rule that must determine the truth in such a question apart from the fallible judgment of man.

It is worthy of notice also as a general factor in the outset of this inquiry that our Lord himself has authorized the application of the terms "narrow" and "broad" in this connection in a sense the farthest removed from the Universalist extreme—"Enter ye in at the strait gate; for wide is the gate and broad is the way that leadeth to destruction, and many there be who go in thereat; because strait is the gate and narrow is the way which leadeth unto life, and few there be that find it."

In the Rainbow for August last, page 318, there is an article by T. W., entitled "Narrow Views" on the words of the Apostle Peter uttered in the house of Cornelius—"Of a truth I perceive that God is no respecter of persons; but in every nation he that feareth him and worketh righteousness is accepted with him." T. W. says, "Let us then be extremely careful how we interpret the seemingly narrow texts of the Bible, where such exist; for we shall find that every apparently narrow text has at least another quite as broad, which, taken as literally, would seem opposed to it." Suppose I take the liberty to reverse T. W.'s method in this way:—"Let us then be extremely careful how we interpret the seemingly broad texts of the Bible, where such exist: for we shall find that every apparently broad text has at least another quite as narrow, which, taken as literally, would seem opposed to it."

Without attempting to give any definition of the terms of salvation, I shall confine myself in what follows to a few remarks on the words founded on by T. W., for the purpose of showing their bearing on breadth or narrowness as to the terms of salvation.

There can hardly be a doubt that the admission of sinners, irrespective of nationality, to the blessings of salvation is the principal thing affirmed by Peter in the words quoted. And as this is not questioned by any, the simple question is as to the terms upon which Jews and Gentiles alike may obtain salvation, so far as these terms are affected by the words "he that feareth God and worketh righteousness is accepted with him."

These words are only the introduction to an address occupying ten verses, and it is therefore necessary to ascertain their connection with what immediately follows. They were addressed by Peter to Cornelius and his kinsmen and friends, in the presence of six brethren of the circumcision who had accompanied Peter from Joppa to the house of Cornelius at Cæsarea.

It is worthy of especial notice that the idea that men are accepted merely on account of certain features of character is opposed to the main design of those peculiar circumstances under which the conversion of Cornelius took place. That design was the manifestation of God's purpose to "visit the Gentiles to take out of them a people for his name." This was described by them of the circumcision who had contended against Peter at Jerusalem, but who became convinced that it was of God—"Then hath God also to the Gentiles granted repentance unto life." Since, therefore, this was the first occasion on which God visited the Gentiles for this purpose, it follows that prior to this, their position in relation to God and salvation was that of being, in the language of Paul, to the Gentile disciples at Ephesus, "without Christ, being aliens from the commonwealth of Israel, and strangers from the covenants of promise." Notwithstanding the excellent character ascribed to Cornelius there is no evidence that he was even a Jewish proselyte; and although there were, this would not have placed him in a better position than that of unbelieving Jews themselves.

But the words of the angel to Cornelius himself are sufficient to show us his true position at the time Peter used the words referred to. The angel had directed Cornelius to send men to Joppa and call for Peter, and added, "he shall tell thee WHAT THOU OUGHTEST TO DO." This statement of the angel is even more fully expressed by Peter in his rehearsal of the matter to those of the circumcision at Jerusalem, in which he gives the intimation of the angel in the following terms:—"Send men to Joppa, and call for Simon whose surname is Peter, who shall tell thee words WHEREBY THOU AND ALL THY HOUSE SHALL BE SAVED."

It is here the question arises,—Why did Peter, in telling Cornelius words whereby he should be saved, introduce those words by a statement which seems to imply that Cornelius was already saved, or accepted with God, being a fearer of God and a worker of righteousness?

In answering this question it will be necessary to look somewhat closely into the connection in which the words stand. It may be remarked that the comparatively modern method of pointing, and division into verses, has materially contributed to render this passage unintelligible. There can be no doubt that the introductory sentences of verses 34 and 35 are much more closely connected with those immediately following than is indicated by the pointing of the common version. The passage according to this version is as follows:—"Then Peter opened his mouth, and said, Of a truth I perceive that God is no respecter of persons: but in every nation he that feareth him, and worketh righteousness, is accepted with him. The word which God sent unto the children of Israel, preaching peace by Jesus Christ (he is Lord of all:) that word I say, ye know, which was published throughout all Judea, and began from Galilee, after the baptism which John preached; how God anointed Jesus of Nazareth with the Holy Ghost, and with power," &c. Nothing is more evident to me than this, that the words "accepted with him" should not be separated from those that follow by more than a comma. I am led to this conclusion by the fact that the translators in order to make what is really one sentence into two have been obliged to re-express in verse 36 the antecedent noun God, although there is no corresponding word in the original; but where the sense would be continued with perfect clearness by the use of the pronoun he understood in the third person singular of the verb to send.

There is another point requiring notice, which serves still farther to show the close connection between the two verses referred to. This is the circumstance that the Greek term logon, rendered "word" at the beginning of verse 36, is in the accusative case (logon). This accusative not being governed by any verb in the sentence, must necessarily be governed by a preposition understood. Indeed this is indicated by a direction of the Greek New Testament to supply the preposition kata, signifying "according to."

Before presenting the passage thus corrected, however, there is a point requiring notice in verse 37, in which the translators, by supplying the words "I say," which have no representative in the Greek, make it appear as if Peter repeated the word logon for the sake of clearness, and that consequently the first logon, as well as the second, is governed by the word "know," thus dispensing with the understood preposition kata. Peter, however, does not use a second logos, but another term, and that evidently to express a different idea. The word employed is rema, from a verb signifying "to flow," and, in a secondary sense, "to speak;" hence rema is defined as signifying "what has been said," and might be appropriately rendered a current report. That it is employed in this sense in the passage in hand may be inferred from the fact that the word "published," which appears in connection with it in the common version, has no corresponding word in the Greek: showing that Peter was not, in this verse, directly referring to the apostolic proclamation of "the Word of the Kingdom," but rather to that common report which had spread far and wide concerning it, and also concerning certain things relating to Jesus of Nazareth. This is borne out by Dr. Doddridge's translation, which is as follows: "Ye know the report there was through all Judea," &c.

The whole passage rendered with these emendations on the common version becomes at once intelligible, and in harmony not only with the narrative of which it forms part, but also with the general teaching of Scripture. It would then read thus: "Of a truth I perceive that God is no respecter of persons; but in every nation he that feareth him and worketh righteousness is accepted with him in conformity with the word which he sent unto the children of Israel preaching peace by Jesus Christ (he is Lord of all.) Ye know the report there was through all Judea, which began from Galilee, after the baptism which John preached; how God anointed Jesus of Nazareth with the Holy Spirit," &c.

It will be seen from this construction that Peter does not say that he that feareth God and worketh righteousness is on this account alone accepted with him; but the men of this character are accepted with God according to a certain word which he sent to the children of Israel by Jesus Christ. The terms of this preaching expressly required faith in the word conveyed in the message. There were fearers of God and workers of righteousness among the Jews to whom Jesus preached this word, but these were on that account exempted from compliance with the terms imposed. True, the honest-hearted among Israel gladly received "the Word of the Kingdom," because it spoke to them of the object of their national hope: but it was none the less imperative in its claims on their belief. This imperative character of the preaching of the kingdom is seen in the manner in which our Lord spoke of his mission as a preacher. He said on one occasion—"I MUST preach the Kingdom of God to other cities also; FOR THEREFORE AM I SENT." He also said, "He that rejecteth me and receiveth not my words hath one that judgeth him; the Word that I have spoken the same shall judge him in the last day." And again—"Whoever shall not receive the Kingdom of God as a little child, he shall not enter therein." "As Moses lifted up the serpent in the wilderness, even so must the Son of Man be lifted up: that whosoever believeth in him might not perish but have everlasting life."

That this was the very "word" of which Peter says the common report "began from Galilee after the baptism which John preached," may be seen by a reference to the gospel by Mark concerning "the beginning of the gospel of Jesus Christ." After describing the mission of John, Mark says, "Now after that John was put in prison, Jesus came into Galilee, preaching the gospel of the Kingdom of God, and saying, The time is fulfilled, and the Kingdom of God is at hand; repent ye and believe the gospel." This shows the starting point of the preaching, and Matthew gives us an outline of the extent to which the report reached. He says: "Jesus went about all Galilee teaching in their synagogues and preaching the gospel of the kingdom, and healing all manner of diseases among the people. And his fame went through all Syria .....And there followed him great multitudes of people from Galilee and from Decapolis, and from Jerusalem and from Judea, and from beyond Jordan." We are also informed that at a later period in his ministry he visited the coasts of Tyre and Sidon on the west, and the towns of Cæsarea-Philippi on the northeast. Although Samaria was purposely avoided as a mission-field, and Cæsarea, where Cornelius lived, was a seaport near its northern boundary, yet being in the vicinity of Galilee the report of the preaching of Jesus and his apostles must have been well known in an important seaport town like Cæsarea.

Faith in the gospel, then, was required on the part of Israel—those "to whom pertained the adoption and the glory and the covenants, and promises," in order to their acceptance with God, or in other words, to their being saved. If such was the case, is it in the least likely that the Gentiles who were aliens from all the privileges should be admitted to heirship of the kingdom of God on terms less exclusive? By no means. The same conditions were required. The words of our Lord to his disciples are quite clear upon this point. "Thus it is written, and thus it behooved Christ to suffer and to rise from the dead the third day: and that repentance and remission of sins should be preached in his name AMONG ALL NATIONS, beginning at Jerusalem." "This gospel of the kingdom shall be preached in all the world for a witness unto all nations." And so it was; and the conversion of Cornelius was the initiation of this work. The conversion and apostleship of Saul of Tarsus put the matter into a practical shape. Paul's account of the object of his mission to the Gentiles is in these term: "To open their eyes, and to turn them from darkness to light and from the power of Satan unto God, that they may receive forgiveness of sins, and inheritance among them which are sanctified THROUGH FAITH that is in me." What he preached is well described by Luke—"Paul dwelt two whole years (at Rome) in his own hired house, and received all that came in unto him, preaching the kingdom of God, and teaching those things which concern the Lord Jesus Christ."

There is no evidence that this gospel rule was suspended in the case of Cornelius and his friends. It would appear that Peter viewed them in the light of the teaching of Jesus in the parable of the sower, as already hinted. "The Word of the Kingdom" is likened to good seed sown in various kinds of soil, of which but one kind is represented as bringing forth fruit to perfection. "That on the good ground are they which, in an honest and good heart, having heard the Word, keep it, and bring forth fruit with patience." Such a character was Cornelius. He was like good soil prepared for the good seed, come when it might. What ever seeming success may follow the sowing of good seed on the hard beaten wayside, on stony ground, or among thorns, let it ever be remembered that, as a general rule, it is only in appearance. Certain qualities of native character in combination with the influence of the truth are necessary to that "patient continuance in well-doing" which is indispensable in all who aspire to the "glory and honor and immortality," awaiting the "heirs of the kingdom which God hath prepared for them that love him."—J. Cameron, in Rainbow of March, 1877.

Every-Day Things.

The commonest duties of life are the most difficult. Not one of them is likely to be well performed without careful training. Yet because they are so common, and we have been performing them all our lives, after a fashion (or at least, think that we have), we are all apt to imagine that we know how to perform them by intuition, and do not need to make a business of learning to do them. That is a mistake which leads to the adoption of many hurtful habits and erroneous ideas.

We need to learn to breathe, to eat, to sit, to walk.

We need to learn to think, to converse, and to live with other people.

We need to learn to love, to obey, and to govern ourselves.

How many persons there are, for instance, who habitually use only a small portion of their lungs in breathing, and who are consequently more narrow-chested, and more liable to be overcome by diseases of the breathing apparatus, than they should be.

How many persons there are who have contracted the habit of breathing partly through the mouth while walking, or when engaged in active exercise of any kind. This is a very dangerous habit. The nasal passage to the lungs is fitted out with germ-killers, designed to protect a healthy person against the noxious microbes that are constantly floating in the atmosphere; and much of this protection is lost by breathing through the mouth.

Then, take eating. Nine persons out of ten do not chew their food sufficiently. This practice throws too much work on the stomach, which is likely to rebel against it in the course of time. And then the man wonders why he is so troubled with biliousness, headache, and constipation.

We are all inclined to sit in a stooping or lounging position, and to waddle, or wear down our boot-heels, when walking. It seems easier to sit and walk lazily than to put forth the effort required to hold the shoulders up and the head straight when sitting, and to use the knees in walking. In reality, the wrong way is not only much less elegant, but also much more fatiguing, than the right way; and it is detrimental to health, instead of being a source of physical vigor.

So with our mental powers. Just as we have a natural tendency to breathe superficially, and to sit and walk carelessly and lopsidedly, so by nature are we inclined to think and converse superficially, lazily, inexactly. The thinking faculty is rarely well developed.

Men get into the habit of gulping their ideas as they gulp their food, swallowing them whole and escaping mental indigestion which would naturally follow only by reason of the fact that they do not try to digest their ideas after swallowing them. They give them out again, like manner, acting upon them or arguing upon them with all the more confidence because of the fact that they had allowed the discriminating faculty to lie dormant until it has become useless, and they are therefore unable to see the flaws in any argument which impresses them favorably.

And people who will not take the trouble to think carefully can not converse wisely. They may have, indeed they often do have, great facility of expression and plenty to say, such as it is. But their talk will not be apt to make their hearers either wiser or better.

Living with other people is the commonest of experiences; yet how few there are who know how to make the best of it! How common it is to meet persons who seem to find more irritation and discomfort than sympathetic companionship in contact with those with whom they live!

By instinct, man is a gregarious animal. God made him to be so. And, indeed, no one of the divine arrangements for man's welfare, with the single exception of God's personal contact with man, combines so many advantages as that which is expressed in the words, "God setteth the solitary in families."

Family life is God's recipe for the development of all the highest qualities of human nature,—love, patience, gentleness, forbearance, helpfulness, and loyal friendship. It was designed to foster among men that love for one another which is both the test of our love-loyalty to God and the only means by which it can be developed. But how sadly this prescription of the Great Physician is abused! How many there are whose family consists principally of a succession of jars and continual friction, because they have never learned to lubricate the machinery with the oil of sacrifice, which would soon make it run smoothly.

A habit of carefulness as to the way we do any particular thing helps us to be careful in doing all other things, and thus helps to develop the faculty of self-control. And self-control, exercised for right purposes, is the essence of manliness.—N. Y. Witness.

Seasons of Trial.

The excellence of our religion lies largely in its fitness for seasons of trial. When all the powers of body and mind are worn out and fainting,—as after Christ's forty days in the wilderness,—the hope that maketh not ashamed comes to the rescue with almighty reinforcements. Pain, sorrow, death can only get the upper hand only for a moment. Under oft repeated blows the soul of the Christian has an elasticity which refuses to be conquered. "Bring forth the ax," cries Philip the Second, "the sword and the fagot! We will test this constant fortitude!" In less than three months, eighteen hundred of the best and bravest men of the Netherlands pass from the blood-council to the Inquisition and thence to shameful death. Drunk with blood and weary with slaughter the barbarous Duke of Alva writes to the king, "Sire, it is in vain. These bigots are only strengthened by persecution. You may depopulate the land, but you cannot destroy its faith!" Virtue like this, laughing at the scourge and the anathema, is something more than human; it is Divine Power indwelling in the flesh.—D. J. Burrell in Christian Intelligencer.

When God hides from us so much that we would fain know, let us believe that the same love exceeds, as at other times reveals, and that shadow and sun are accomplishing our growth in grace and in the knowledge and love of God.—F. B. Meyer.

Life in Christ.

"Christ our life." Col. iii. 4.

We have no words, O glorious Lord,
Sufficient to convey
Our praise for thine amazing Word
Of "immortality."

But we adore thee for the light
Of wisdom, so profound,
That made it possible to write
"In Christ your life is found."

O thought sublime! the thinker God,
Almighty and All-wise,
That mortals from their clay abode
To endless life may rise!

For this good thought, redemption's gem,
The brilliant prize of heaven,
We celebrate the peerless name
In whom that prize is given.

The Lord "our life!" Transcendent grace!
What more can thought enshrine?
We shall behold our Father's face,
His sons, in life divine!

WHAT OUGHT THE INFLUENCE OF THE CHURCH ON A COMMUNITY BE, AND HOW CAN IT BE MADE SUCH?

This question admits of an easy answer: the influence of the church ought to be for good, morally, intellectually, religiously.

We are gregarious enough to live in organized communities, and the early church founders, made use of this principle when they laid down rules for the government of the church. (The word "church" in this connection is used to mean an organization of persons of similar belief, who have thus joined themselves together for mutual encouragement in their work, and that their means may be more effectually used for the accomplishment of the objects they have in view. And from the subject given by the committee the location of the "church" is taken to be in the rural districts or the smaller villages, for the influences of these churches differ from that of the wealthy city organizations.)

This ideal church, then, can be a power for good morally, because in many instances it furnishes the only meeting place for the neighborhood, and no one can attend the various services; the prayer meeting, Sunday school, the Christian Endeavor, the preaching service, without at least absorbing something that will make for better morals, a more charitable view of the rights of others, will unconsciously if not voluntarily imbibe many of the lessons taught by the Great Teacher, and their lives will be lifted to a higher and nobler plane.

Boast as we may about our independence of those around us, and however much we may brag of our ability to get along without them all of others, we are directly influenced by contact with the lives and habits of those with whom we associate, and in a very large measure our characters are the result of this contact. Hence the importance of the right kind of associates, and surely these can be found much easier at the various services of the church, than at places of questionable character. I am optimistic enough to believe that the young people of today are not much worse than they were a generation ago, but with the improved educational advantages they demand more of the church services than formerly.

And this brings us to the second division of the church's influence,—the intellectual side. In very many neighborhoods the church and the public school are the only places where any sort of educational advantages are enjoyed. In these localities there are no lecture courses, no lyceums, nothing but the hum-drum monotony of their lives of hard unremitting toil, and they gladly welcome any diversion, and it will be well if this diversion takes the direction of better things. How necessary then that strong men and women, those who are capable of leadership, stand in the doors of the church to welcome and guide the timid, feed the intellectually hungry or restrain the over-anxious. If this relaxation from every day life is not found in the sanctuary, it will be found in some other place,—horse racing and the thousand and one things the evil one can invent to lead young people astray. I firmly believe that the young people of today would find as much enjoyment in the house of God if the different services were interesting as they find in these various other amusements. But this cannot be done by sitting back, it will require hard work and much looking after details, much planning and arranging beforehand, but it will be worth the effort,—the good that may be done is beyond calculation.

Religiously the influence of the church is not to teach the particular tenets of that denomination, but the Bible as it is. "Search the Scriptures for in them ye think ye have eternal life." If this rule were followed out more closely much of the caviling would cease, harmony would take the place of contention. It is not the object of the church, or at least it had not ought to be the object, to teach anything that is not in harmony with the gospels, and so men and women are needed for teachers who understand the Scriptures and who can explain them clearly. But how often do we see in our various Sunday schools boys and girls perhaps not half way through their teens, who stand before a class of plastic children and endeavor to instruct these innocents in something about which they themselves are blissfully ignorant. It is certainly a state of affairs to make one tremble for the future. And in too many cases the instruction of these would-be teachers is as far from the truth as east from west, and too often their example away from their classes is such as to antagonize the effect of the teaching. To make a single illustration: what will be the effect of a teacher's talk against swearing when the children know that the teacher will use profane language outside the house of worship? It is this kind of double acting that gives skeptics and half-hearted people an opportunity to criticize the church.

So another influence of the church ought to be to keep all its members up to that high plane of living and thinking that there can be no ground for complaint. Then the expression, "I'd rather trade with an outsider than a church member" will lose its force, and this right living and acting will compel respect even from the enemies of the church. And it is not asking too much of the members of the church to live up to this high standard, if we are to be heirs of God and joint-heirs with Christ, we must maintain it or fail. The members of the church must show "by their daily walks and conversation" that they are different from the world or else where is the need of the organized church?

Men can follow their appetites and desires without banding themselves into a society, but if they follow the Master, they have much need of union to keep up their courage and put themselves in fighting trim.

So the influence of the church seems to be to create a better moral atmosphere, and this can be done by making the services attractive and interesting so that careless or indifferent people may be led there, and becoming interested will become anxious to know more. Not the least factor in making a service attractive is the music—so it should be the duty of some one to get these hungry ones to help in this part of the exercises at least, it will overcome the feeling of timidity and pave the way for other work.

Good teachers, those intellectually strong and capable of leadership, from the minister in the pulpit to the humblest teacher in the mission school, should be provided for these various services, so that those who have a craving knowledge may have that desire satisfied. Let the church service be an intellectual treat, so that there will be a wish to hear more, and especially should this be so in communities where the opportunities for hearing good things are few. I fear that it sometimes happens, both in Sunday school and in the pulpit, there is too much of "warming over" done and too little of preparing fresh material. And then if all this is done the influence of the church will not be the best unless its members "show themselves to be workmen not afraid, rightly dividing the Word of truth," holding themselves aloof from the questionable things, following in the way of him who has gone to prepare a place for us, and not only for us, but for all them that believe on him.

HARRY EVANS.

Dear ones of like faith:

A few thoughts of late have come to my mind regarding the subject, "Are we narrow in our belief?" I notice some of the brethren think we should widen out considerable. I see there is quite a difference of opinion amongst us as to the final consummation of the human family, which to my mind will not affect you nor I, if we live out the first principles of our faith. If we understand our position we as a people (claiming to be the light of the world) have a very narrow road to travel in this age of wickedness and folly. We are seeking for a crown or first prize in the plan of salvation. With no limit of knowledge of our glorious hope if we miss the first resurrection, eternal death will be our portion. Why, because "he that hath the Son hath life, he that hath not the Son shall not see life." This gospel of the kingdom of this age that was preached to Abraham four hundred thirty years before the law, and was accounted to him for righteousness, shall seal our destination. I pray that all who have obeyed the gospel as it is in Jesus, will live the faith whate'er the trials may be. Well, says some, How are we going to do much good if we do not mix with other denominations? This is all right to a limit, I don't care to have those worldly churches to control an hour or two of my time every week hearing lectures and no Bible. I am in great sympathy when we can use their edifices to herald the gospel among them, they are the ones that need wisdom. How many of our people that did see the true light and could not stand alone, have been lulled to sleep with clever congregations and sweet music. I am sorry to hear that a few of our older members that have been writing for our good paper and apparently sound in the faith for more than twenty-five years have exchanged it all for a few spiritualistic feelings. I know it is the duty of every member to use their own influence and speak a word for the truth whenever they can. Our talents will be inspected, and oh, how often have I thought of it, even in my own case. I have talked it in my weak way for over twenty-five years, when I could meet any one and opportunity would offer. It has paid me a thousand fold because I know I have been instrumental in bringing one soul to the light of the gospel and obeyed. That looks like a small work, brethren, and I know that I should have done better, but do not be surprised about what I am going to say, from the heart I would not exchange that work or prospect for any orthodox preacher's labor in the same time, and I have been laboring in a hot bakery most of that time, where the preacher has been jostled around to his own liking. It seems as though we get to worrying about judgment apart from this age. I know there is apparently many a good honest soul passes away from amongst us that we don't know how to adjust their case in the future. I think if we understand the different dispensations and judgment, we would not have much trouble leaving all to our merciful Creator. He will judge the world in righteousness, the millions of heathen that are sleeping, so will he remember the Jews, his own elect, also if there is a company, when the Book is opened, Rev. xx. Justice will be meted out there. Dear brethren and sisters, may we be found without spot or wrinkle at the first resurrection, is my earnest prayer.

Report of Labor.

It was the pleasant duty of Elder B. W. Woodward on Sept. 3, to bury in baptism a sister of our beloved Bro. Wm. Moses, who had been brought into the faith by his efforts. Some time ago he sent her THE RESTITUTION, and as she read she became enough interested to begin a correspondence with him on the important and delightful subjects found therein, resulting in a visit from her last winter, then Bro. and Sister Moses and herself could talk, and every moment was used. She grew very happy in this new found and wonderful faith, and returned to her home in Hillsdale, only to desire more fully to know the way of life. The one hundred or more miles was again traveled for the sole purpose of being adopted into Christ's family, and Sister Alma Brockway returned to her home last week the happy "child of a King." So the number is being gathered out for his name, one here, and another there, while others who have vowed allegiance to our wonder working God, and could have the privileges of the gospel by walking a few rods to the house of worship are slighting the opportunities. God pity them when the book of life is opened and they find their names have been blotted out. May our new sister be true to the vow taken, and may God's love be the abiding presence of her life.

M. A. WOODWARD.

Self-government is the best government. Government from without is a mere crutch, or makeshift, to train us up to the power of self-control. God's method in nature, in providence, and in revelation, all point this way. The higher the form of life, the more inward and self-controlled are its centers of nervous and muscular activity. The higher any people in the scale of social existence, the less their dependence upon external restraints for the maintenance of order. And every act of self-control is an added help toward raising a man to the plane of his highest, best life.—Sunday School Times.

Selections.

The "Goodwill" of God to Man.

Like a bright and glorious river whose waters broaden and deepen as they roll, so the "goodwill" of God to man is revealed in the Scriptures.

Before Christ came this "goodwill" manifested itself; it was ever leaping beyond the chosen people, as if impatient for the time of fuller manifestation, ever giving sweet and precious reminders of its source and origin, mingled with promises which have yet to be realized.

"The Lord is good to all, and his tender mercies are over all his works." It is in this fact, that man is the work of God, or to use New Testament language, "his offspring," that we find the source of his "goodwill;" and on this ground the very beast of the field is the object of his care: "Should not I spare Nineveh, that great city, wherein are more than six score thousand persons that cannot discern between their right hand and their left hand, and also much cattle?"

From the beginning then has the goodwill of God flowed towards man, and of necessity so, inasmuch as man is the creature and God the Creator.

But when we see "the babe" born in Bethlehem this river widens and expands, so that it becomes marvellous in our eyes.

"And suddenly there was with the angel a multitude of the heavenly host, praising God and saying, Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace, goodwill toward men."

No new thing is revealed to us here; as we have already seen the "goodwill" of God must have flowed toward man from the hour of his creation. The fall hindered not this. The very ignorance and wretchedness that man was plunged into was but a greater claim on the divine compassion.

What then may we understand from the angels' song?

Simply this—that whereas from the beginning his tender mercies, his compassion, his "goodwill," was ever toward the creature, those tender mercies, that divine compassion, that goodwill was broadened and deepened when he saw his own beloved Son in the likeness of the creature.

The stream does not change its character though its volume is swelled by waters from another source, and God's heart of pity is moved afresh for man when he beholds the divine Word made flesh.

But yet a still further addition to the river of love and "goodwill" is revealed to us in 1 Tim. ii. "I exhort, therefore, that first of all supplications, prayers, intercessions, and giving of thanks be made for all men; for this is good and acceptable in the sight of God our Savior, who will (to will, to wish, to desire) have all men to be saved, and to come unto the knowledge of the truth; for there is one God, and one Mediator between God and men, the man, (rather a man) Christ Jesus."

How all-embracing is the goodwill of God as revealed to us in this Scripture: unchanged still in its character, still is it the compassion of the Creator for his creature, but wondrous is now the source from whence it flows.

Jesus (he who, being in the form of God, and who thought it not robbery to be equal with God, having taken the form of a servant and being found in the likeness of men) is now a man at the right hand of God in heaven. This is now the source of the divine goodwill to man, for how can the Creator forget the creature when one bearing the creature's form is ever before him! How tender must the solicitude of God be for the race when one in that form has perfectly glorified him and is ever in his presence! It is on a man the eye of God are ever fixed with delight, and therefore towards men the river of divine goodwill ceaselessly flows, bearing to the joys of eternal life all who cast themselves unreservedly on its waters.

The glorious gift of God is indeed limited to those who desire and seek for it. The "goodwill" of God is universal, and embraces all men.—J. S. Freeman.

What is Prophecy?

Prophecy is a revelation of God's will and designs in relation to man, and the government of the world.

Prophetic truths are presented in various forms, suited to the varied circumstances and conditions of those addressed.

Prophecy may include doctrine, instruction, warning, entreaty, expostulation, or whatever Jehovah has been pleased to reveal to man.

But specially and principally, Prophecy is the foretelling of future events. It is the delineation of the fate of cities, nations, kingdoms and empires; sometimes with all the minuteness of historic record.

To reveal future events is solely the prerogative of him who "sees the end from the beginning;" with whom all things are present—nothing past, nothing future.

God accomplishes his purposes through various media. Sometimes he "makes the winds his messengers, and the lightnings his ministers;" the sea hears his voice, and executes his high behests; the earthquake heaves the solid earth, and cities fall; volcanoes belch forth their flames and fiery floods, and consternation and devastation are spread around.

But man is the medium through whom God has been pleased to reveal the purposes of his will; and those through whom he thus communicates are called prophets.

A true prophet is one who is under the direction of the Spirit of God. Without this Spirit he could as easily invade heaven and scale the throne of the Eternal, as to lift the thick veil of futurity and unravel its dark mysteries. Yet aided by that divine afflatus he records with unerring precision the destinies of nations and kingdoms, even before they exist.

In his recordings he uses no mysteries—no incantations—no cabalistic signs—no mysterious knockings. He invokes not the aid of familiar spirits neither does he pretend to read the destinies of men and nations by the configurations of the heavenly orbs. He makes no pretentions to superior sagacity or foresight, nor to greater holiness. Neither does he boast of the possession of intellectual powers and literary attainments higher than other men.

When God makes choice of men to fill the Prophetic and Apostolic offices, he passes by the reputed wise, learned, and honorable among men, and chooses "the foolish things of the world to confound the wise; and the weak things of the world to confound the things that are mighty," etc., and thus he does "That no flesh should glory in his presence," 1 Cor. i. 27, 29.

A true Prophet faithfully reports or records what God has revealed to him while under the divine influence. If the things come to pass which he has spoken in the name of the Lord, then we know assuredly that the Lord has spoken by him.

Sometimes, when under the afflatus, the Prophet heard, as it were, the voice of God speaking to him, directing him what to do and what to say—as "Thus saith the Lord:" "The Word of the Lord came unto me, saying."

Sometimes in dreams and visions of the night, things and events were portrayed before them with all the minuteness and vividness of reality—a daguerreotype likeness of things before they transpire; as for instance, the prophecies of Isaiah are represented as "visions of things which he saw concerning Judah and Jerusalem;" also the vision which Peter, James, and John saw on the mount of transfiguration, representative of the glory which Jesus and the saints will have in the future age; and also, the vision of things beyond the power of utterance, which Paul saw and heard in Paradise.

Again, symbols are sometimes employed to represent nations, kingdoms, empires, peoples, governments, powers—Heaven's heraldic signs of things to come, represented by the sun, moon, stars, heavens, earth, seas, etc.

PROPHETIC SYMBOLS.

Sun, Moon, and Stars—Symbolic of kings, princes, and nobles.

The Heavens—Symbolic of the Political Constitution of a nation or kingdom. As the constitution of a nation is the basis of law and government, so the heavens are said to rule.

The Earth—Symbolic of the People upon whom these heavenly constellations shed their glory.

The Sea—The People in a state of agitation.

Earthquake—A Revolution—a change of Government—a turning of things upside down.

Hail—Invasion.

Wild Beast—A roving warlike power of a character and disposition akin to the representative beast.

Wings—Speed. When attached to a beast irresistible and rapid conquest. Sometimes they denote shelter and protection.

Horns—Power—Strength.

Darkening of Sun and Moon, and Falling of Stars—The overthrow of thrones and principalities, and the extinction of nobility, by reducing them to the level of the people.

The Rolling up the Heavens as a Scroll—The rolling up and laying aside of a parchment, upon which God is constitution of a nation is engrossed, when no longer in use.

The passing away of the Heavens and the Earth with a great noise—Great debate, clamor, and uproar among the people, consequent upon the extinction of their constitution and the loss of their nationality.

New Heavens and New Earth—A new Constitution and arrangement of things, which will effect a complete change in the character of the people. —Millennial Advocate.

Obituary.

It was our sad duty last Monday, Sept. 4, to speak the last words of comfort to the bereaved family of Bro. Willard Gates, of Leighton, over the cold and lifeless remains of the greatly beloved wife and mother. Sister Emily Cope-Gates was born in Jamaica, Windom Co., Vermont, Nov. 17, 1825, was married to Willard Gates, Dec. 25, 1849, came to Michigan 32 years ago, where they have since lived. She accepted the gospel faith and was baptized by Elder B. W. Woodward, Jan. 27, 1889, and has had those blessed truths to rest upon during these last twelve years of her life. For over a year she has been almost a helpless, paralytic, suffering much, patiently enduring all. Death released her, Sept. 2, 1899, and she now sleeps in hope. Bro. Gates embraced the faith the same winter with his wife, and is firm in its teachings, therefore sorrows not as others who have no hope. Six children were born to them, three have been laid away to rest.

Poetry.

Seek the Kingdom.

Seek first the kingdom of heaven,
Let nothing prevent the search;
Don't think you are in the kingdom,
Because you are in the church.

The church is not the kingdom,
The members are not kings;
Neither are our loved ones wafted,
To heaven on angel's wings.

We would like to go to a home above,
If God had said we must;
But it is only in his holy Word,
That we can surely trust.

We rejoice to know the earth is to be
Our eternal dwelling place;
There is no promise of a home above,
Beyond the bounds of space.

"The kingdom of heaven," and "world to come,"
Are found within the Word,
While "get to heaven," or "go to heaven"
Are certainly never heard.

The kingdom here thou first must seek,
Walking in the path of duty,
And when the heavy conflict is o'er,
We shall see the King in his beauty.

Works of Bro. Wiley Jones.

TWELVE WORDS, or the true meaning of Hell, Soul, Spirit, Ghost, Paradise, Incorruption, Incorruptible, Immortal, Immortality, Forever, Everlasting, Eternal, and their originals as learned by their uses in the Bible. A tract of 40 pages, sold formerly at 10 cents a copy.

THE GOSPEL OF THE KINGDOM, an 8 page, double column tract, sold formerly at 10 cents a dozen.

EARLY LESSONS, suitable for old and young, 30 pages, sold formerly for 10 cents a copy.

These works are excellent for use by those who wish to do missionary labor, and we offer them at such a low price that they should be out in a short time. Bro Jones had largered them printed and by dying suddenly, and his Widow being in feeble health, we have undertaken the task of selling them. Her income is quite limited, and all that can be gotten out of the sales goes to her after expenses are paid. When you buy these tracts you get several times the worth of your money, and also aid a worthy Sister, who will thank you for it.

Assorted package 30 cents per pound. Gospel of the Kingdom, alone at 25 cents per pound.

The Gospel of the Kingdom.

Advocated in a series of Ten Discourses. A Volume of 283 pages, cloth 25 cents, leather bound, embossed, and gilt edges, $1.00. By Wiley Jones. This book is so well known that it is only necessary to announce that it is for sale, to insure a market for it. We have undertaken to dispose of these books for the Widow of our lamented Brother Jones, and while getting them at this low price, you at the same time will help Sister Jones to much needed money.

Popular Lectures by M. Joblin

Brethren and Sisters, Have you loved ones who think sincerity will save them? Have you friends who think they worship acceptably while ignorant of God's promises? Have you acquaintances with false hopes of heaven, or who believe themselves immortal by nature, or who think their sins are forgiven, although they are ignorant of the Law of Pardon, or who have no use for a God who consigns sinners to Eternal Torment, and are ignorant of Jehovah's beneficent purpose to fill the earth with his glory and bestow Eternal Life upon believers of the Gospel, so they can enjoy it for ever? If so, send for Popular Lectures by Bro. Joblin, entitled:—"The Kingdom of God;" "Old Mother Earth to Be Born Again;" "Strangers from the Covenants of Promise;" "Vain Worship;" "No Immortality Out of Christ;" "Hope Begotten by the Resurrection of Christ;" "God's Love and Solicitude for Mankind;" and "What Shall We Do to be Saved?"

All persons addressing us should give their name, postoffice, county and state, plainly and distinctly.

All letters should be addressed to "THE RESTITUTION, Plymouth, Marshall Co., Ind."

Remittance should be sent by bank draft, postoffice money order, or registered letter. Money sent in either of the above ways is at our risk, money sent loose in letters is at the risk of the sender. It is folly to think that you can fold bills in a letter so that no one can tell it, for one who handles much mail matter can almost invariably tell a letter with money in it. Take warning and send safely.

All remittances should be made payable to the order of "THE RESTITUTION."

We cannot hold ourselves responsible for the return of manuscripts. Authors should preserve a copy for themselves.

In ordering books or tracts get the latest copy of the paper you have and order only what you see advertised in that.

When desiring a change of address, give both your old and new address.

By complying strictly with the above you will save us much annoyance, and your order will be much more promptly attended to.

The Restitution.

THE RESTITUTION advocates the final "restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint-heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ, and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for remission of sins, pre-requisites of the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for the salvation.

Poetry.

A Prayer.

"Thy help be thy helper." Heb. xiv. 6.

O God of strength and power,
To Thee, Omnipotent might,
In life's or death's darkest hour
Be Thou our light.

Encompassed by the gloom
We cannot feel our way;
Around us dangers loom.
Be Thou our stay.

We know not where to fly,
We know not where to hide;
Send down thy pitying eyes
To Thou our guide.

Exposed to Satan's dart,
We almost faint and yield
Beneath its deadly smarting—
Be Thou our shield.

In vain we search for peace,
And wearied in the quest
We would for an erring race—
Be Thou our rest.

Our souls look up to Thee,
Our Savior, King, and Friend,
Our help and guardian be Until the end.

"Truths and Errors of Futurism."

A REPLY TO E. L. DELANO OF WENATCHEE, WASH., IN A CRITICISM OF MY REPLY TO "TRUTHS AND ERRORS OF FUTURISM" BY O. H. WALLACE.

Your laborious effort of 16 pages of note paper is before me. I believe in the second coming of Christ, but that does not constitute me an Adventist. Adventists, (so called,) do not believe in any age of probation after the kingdom is set up which the Scripture so fully teaches, and secondly; they do not appear to hold any affinity with Israel, but on the other hand appear to bear an inveterate hatred of them, notwithstanding Paul says—"They are beloved for their fathers' sakes." But Adventists do not appear to endorse this statement of Paul. I believe that Israel is beloved for their fathers' sakes." But Adventists do not appear to endorse this statement of Paul. I believe that Israel is beloved for their fathers' sakes, and that God still remembers his covenant with Abraham, Isaac and Jacob and especially with David. Psa. lxxxix. 35, 36, 37. But more especially as the angel Gabriel said to Mary the Mother of Jesus; The Lord God shall give unto him the throne of his father David, and he shall reign over the house of Jacob for ever. When Zedekiah the last king in the line of David was on the throne of David; the Prophet said—"Remove the diadem, take off the crown.....) will overturn it, (the kingdom and throne of David,) and it shall be no more until he come whose right it is, and I will give it him." Christ will occupy the throne of David by right. If this does not prove that Christ is to raise up the tabernacle or throne of David just as James says, I do not see how language can prove any thing.

On your first page or two you speak of Spiritual Israel and appear to make that a scape goat for very plain promises. You speak of circumcision, grafting, etc., and appear to go a long way around to make a case out of Spiritual Israel. Now I do not wish to follow you in your "wild goose chase" after Spiritual Israel.

You refer me to Luke xvii. 27, 29, and say, "the righteous are saved and the wicked which comprises all others were destroyed." This is nearly the only Scriptural reference that you make literal. We understand that this type will be literal only so far as the suddenness is concerned and taking the world unawares, but I cannot overlook the voluminous utterances found in Scripture contrary to your application of this type.

You refer me to Acts xv. 15, 16, and say, "it is very apparent that I do not have the slightest idea of what James is talking about." You say again that James quotes from Amos to prove that the taking out from the Gentiles a people for his name builds the tabernacle of David. Now my friend let me tell you that neither James nor Amos says any such thing. There is not the slightest idea in James' language from which to draw any such conclusion. It is not there until you manufacture it out of whole cloth and put it in there. James says—After this, (after the preaching time;) "I (Christ,) will return and will build again the tabernacle of David." It is Christ that builds the tabernacle not Peter's preaching. It appears to be perverseness that causes you to invent language and put it into James' mouth that he did not use.

I will now quote from the Diaglott. "After these things I will return and I will rebuild the tabernacle of David which has fallen down: and I will rebuild its ruins and I will establish it." 17 ver. "In order that the remainder of men may seek the Lord, even all the Gentiles upon whom my name has been invoked."

I will not follow your contradictions in Scripture any further, but will say there is one class of Scriptural promises that Adventists seem to overlook entirely. I refer you to Num. xiv. 21; Psa. cxiii. 3; Hab. ii. 14, Isa. xi. 9; and many others of like import. Your application of Luke xvii. 27, 29 destroys all except the righteous. Now tell me how the above promises can have a fulfillment. Will the dead wicked nations have a knowledge of the glory of the Lord? Recollect all except eight souls were destroyed. Pretty small amount of nations for the overcomers, (Rev. ii. 26,27,) to have power over, and to rule with a rod of iron. Or will you, (as it has been suggested for Adventists,) rule over one another?

Now, turn to Isa. ii., first five verses. I have heard Sheldon say that this is only what the people say; but the second verse is what the Lord says. Has any thing of this kind taken place in your day? The mountain of the Lord's house we understand to be Mount Zion, and the Lord's house will be a "house of prayer for all nations." Now read Isa. lxvi. 18, 19, 20. This will be a missionary enterprise on a grand scale, to declare the glory of the King on David's throne in Zion, unto all the earth. The 20th verse speaks of the gathering of the Jews, and of their being taken for priests and for Levites.

Now turn to Jer. xxxiii. This prophecy is especially adapted to Adventists, as if the Prophet had his eye upon that people. This is a mirror in which Adventists may see their photograph plainly delineated. You, (as their representative,) plainly shows, "that the two families which the Lord hath chosen, he hath even cast them off." You despise God's people that they should be no more a nation before you. But God declares that his covenant with the seed of Jacob and David is as binding and sure as his covenant of day and night.

Now turn to Ezek. xxxvii. the vision of dry bones. The 36th chapter shows plainly that Israel shall return and "dwell in the land that I gave to your fathers." "And I will call for the corn, and will increase it, and lay no famine upon you." Has this ever come to pass? You know it has not. The vision of dry bones delineates the return of Israel in detail. 2 ver. "Behold, there were very many in the open valley; and, lo, they were very dry." Then the question—can these bones live? Adventists say no! but the Prophet said, "Thou knowest. Prophesy upon these bones, and say unto them, O ye dry bones, hear the Word of the Lord." 5 v., "Behold, I will cause breath to enter into you, and ye shall live." Now notice; these bones do not represent dead men, but living men, but spiritually dead. They were in the open valley; not in literal graves. 6 v., "And I will lay sinews upon you, and will bring up flesh upon you, and cover you with skin." This refers to them after their return to the land of their fathers.

7 v., "So I prophesied as I was commanded; and as I prophesied, there was a noise (Zionism) and behold a shaking, and the bones came together bone to his bone." "And when I beheld, lo, the sinews and the flesh came up upon them, and the skin covered them above; but there was no breath in them." This description applies to the present status of very many Colonies and individuals that have returned. They are without laws of their own for their protection and live there by the sufferance of the Sultan.

Notice, please, that the resurrection of these dry bones is gradual, quite different from the resurrection of the saints which is in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye.

9 v., "Prophesy unto the wind,..... Thus saith the Lord God: Come from the four winds, O breath, and breathe upon these slain, that they may live." The 10 verse gives something of a description of their conversion. The 11 v. shows that the dry bones represent the whole house of Israel: and also their despair. "Our bones are dried, and our hope is lost." They have looked so long for a Messiah to restore again the kingdom to Israel (Acts i. 6) that Moses and the prophets said God would raise up unto them, and he has not done it; therefore Moses and the prophets were impostors. "Our hope for a Messiah is lost." But there is a set time for Israel as a nation to be converted to Christ and that time has not yet arrived. Israel will be be converted by sight and not by faith; even Paul was converted by sight, as of one born out of due time, as he says.

We will now let Zechariah give a description of the conversion of Israel. See Zech. xii. 10. "And they shall look upon me whom they have pierced and they shall mourn for him, as one mourneth for his only son," etc. 13 chap., "In that day there shall be a fountain opened to the house of David and to the inhabitants of Jerusalem for sin and for uncleanness." Israel will be converted to Christ after his return to earth and builds again the tabernacle of David and is seated upon it. They will be converted by seeing his wounds and realize that he received those wounds in the house of his friends.

But we will return to the vision of dry bones. Have the two families of the house of Israel ever been re-united since they were divided in the days of Jeroboam? You know they have not. But a promise of Israel's return and a union of the two families is here plainly given. But more than this. "Neither shall they defile themselves any more with their idols, nor with their detestable things." They have defiled themselves with their idols since their return from Babylon; hence we know that a future return is brought to view. God says "I will make a covenant of peace with them and I will place them and multiply them (mortal Israel) and set my sanctuary and tabernacle in the midst of them for evermore." All this will come to pass while there are heathen to see it. 28 v., "And the heathen shall know that I the Lord do sanctify Israel; when my sanctuary shall be in the midst of them for evermore."

It seems strange that Adventists can read all these plain promises, and yet contend that there will be no probation after the kingdom is set up. It certainly looks as if they had a very meager view of the great plan of salvation, which is contained in part in Numbers xiv 21. "But as truly as I live, all the earth shall be filled with the glory of the Lord." Also Malachi i. 11, will certainly be fulfilled after the kingdom is set up. See also Psa. xxii. 27, 28; Zech. xiv. 16.

Tell me, my friend, why the church is called the Bride, the Lamb's wife? Christ will increase his family of obedient children through his Bride, the overcomers of Rev. ii. 26, who shall have power over the nations and bring them into subjection to the mind and will of the King.

Again—In Ephes. ii. 12, Paul refers the Ephesians to the time before their conversion, and shows them that they were aliens from the commonwealth of Israel and strangers from the covenants of promise, and that they were without hope and were without God in the world. Webster defines commonwealth to be "an established form of government or civil polity." Then there is an established form of government of Israel; yet that government was overturned in the days of Zedekiah and is in abeyance until this day, but is in "expectation of possession hereafter." "Strangers from the covenants of promise." The covenants of promise were made with Abraham and David. With Abraham of an inheritance of the land of Canaan, Gen. xv. 7, and with David of the perpetuity of his throne. Psa. lxxxix. 34, 37. Now, my friend, if I can [illegible] and the draft of your criticism, [illegible] in the same relation to the commonwealth of Israel and the covenants of promise as did the Ephesians before their conversion.

Again see Matt. six. 28, "Ye which have followed me in the regeneration when the Son of Man shall sit in the throne of his glory; ye also shall sit upon twelve thrones judging the twelve tribes of Israel."

DANIEL HOWARD.

The Promise to Abraham.

"Now to Abraham and his seed were the promises made. He saith not, and to seeds as of many, but of one, and to thy Seed, which is Christ." Gal. iii. 16.

It appears from the earnestness of Paul in trying to instruct the early church in the things pertaining to Abraham and the promises made to him, that there is something of more than common importance attached to them. He used unusual caution to make them understand that it was the one Seed (in the singular) separate and distinct from all others; no doubt he had in his mind the first promise, that the Seed of the woman should bruise the serpent's head, and that this Seed (Christ) and the promises to Abraham are of vast importance to us. He plainly shows us the relation we sustain to Abraham, when he says, "For ye are all the children of God by faith in Christ Jesus, for as many of you as have been baptized into Christ have put on Christ.....And if ye be Christ's then are ye Abraham's seed and heirs according to the promise." Ver. 26 and 29.

We notice that he first speaks of the promise in the plural which includes all the promises; and immediately specifies the one pertaining to Christ, the Restorer, our Redeemer. He who was to come to seek and to save that which was lost. Luke xix. 10. Now, let us go to the record and see if we can find what promises were made to Abraham. In Gen. xii. to xxii. inclusive, we find the entire history of the calling out of Abraham, the first germ of the ecclesia, the planting of the tame olive tree, the head of the Jewish nation, which grew and shot forth its branches until the specific seed came, at which time some of the natural branches were broken off, that we the branches of the wild olive might be grafted in among the natural branches and made partakers of the fatness of the root, (the blessings of Abraham). Rom. xi. 17, 24.

In Gen. xii. 1, 2, we find the first promise, after commanding Abraham to go into a strange land, he promises to make him a great nation, and make him a blessing, while Christ the Seed that should bruise the serpent's head, "Though it is not definitely mentioned in this promise, it is reasonable to infer that the blessing that he would make him referred to the blessing through the Seed; for in the next verse he adds, "that he would bless them that bless him (Abram), and curse them that curse him; and in him all the families of the earth should be blessed." Of course if it was to reach all the families of the earth, it included the Gentile nations and extended down to us as is shown in Rom. iv. 17-24.

Then God continues in the succeeding chapters, "And the Lord said unto Abram, after that Lot was separated from him, lift up thine eyes and look from this place where thou art, northward and southward and eastward and westward, for all the land which thou seest, to thee will I give it, and to thy seed forever." xiii. 14, 15. Then he goes on in the next few verses and promises the numerical seed and repeats the promise of the land direct to Abram.

Again in the 15th chapter when Abram complained in bewilderment, seeing he had no heir, not knowing how the Lord would fulfil the promise. The Lord tells him to "fear not," that he should have an heir and that he should inherit the land, and to show him the secret of the promise causes him to fall into a deep sleep and pass through a horror of great darkness. As much as to say you must pass through the valley of death before you can inherit it forever. You can only sojourn in the land for a time now, and informs him that his seed should be afflicted in a strange land for four hundred years, that he should be buried in a good old age, and in the fourth generation he would bring them out, and renew the promise of the land, though in a different way from the first.

Again in the 17th chapter the Lord continues the promise of the land to the multitudinous seed, changes his name, enters a covenant, gave the token or sign of the seal. Rom. iv. 11. And changes the name of Abraham's wife, promises him that Sarah should bear him a son indeed, gave him a name, promised to establish his covenant with him and his seed for an everlasting covenant, made him a promise pertaining to Ishmael. About eight promises, some compounded, but most of them so distinct that they can easily be comprehended.

Have these promises all been fulfilled? No, they have not all been fulfilled. Let the Bible answer, Acts vii. 5. Stephen says that God did not fulfil the promise to Abraham pertaining to the land. Then the question is, will he yet fulfil that promise? In Ezek. xxxvii. the Lord in explaining to the prophet said, "Son of man, these bones are the whole house of Israel. O my people, I will open your graves and cause you to come out of your graves, and to come into the land of Israel." It is clear that if the whole house of Israel is to be regenerated, born again, and dwell in the land of promise, Abraham will be one of them; and by adoption we have become Abraham's seed and are included, which is shown in Heb. xi. 8, 9, where it is affirmed that by faith Abraham went into a strange land and sojourned, dwelling in tents with Isaac and Jacob, looking forward to a city, or a more permanent abiding place. Then going on to tell what was accomplished by the faithful ones, he adds in the 13th verse, "These all died in faith not having received the promises," and couples us with the promises, by saying, "God having provided some better thing for us, that they without us should not be made perfect."

Thus we might add text after text to the same import, but lest some may say that we have garbled the Scriptures we will notice a few texts that from a slight glance would appear that the promises have all been fulfilled.

Stephen says, Acts vii. 17, "That when the time of the promise (in the singular) drew nigh, which God had sworn to Abraham," etc. From this by referring to the field notes, Gen. xv. 13, 14. It will be seen that it was the promise to bring them out of the strange land that Stephen referred to which was fulfilled to the fleshly seed, which is a figure of the Scriptural. They were, or a portion of them, brought into the land, but not allowed to remain, because of their disobedience, only Joshua and Caleb, that were of full age, that came out of Egypt, were permitted to ever enter the land.

Again, Neh. ix. 7, 8, it is stated that God had fulfilled the promises, but by close observing it is plain, First, that as it was fulfilled on conditions of obedience that they were not allowed to remain in the land. Second as it was a compound promise the part to the fleshly seed, part to the Spiritual, it was suitable to a double fulfilment, the same as the prophecy of Joel, which Peter said was being fulfilled by the advent of the Holy Spirit on the day of Pentecost, which Paul says was the first fruits of the Spirit, Rom. viii. 23, which he also speaks of as the earnest of the Spirit. 2 Cor. v. 5. The first fruits are only a sample of the full harvest given in advance, but when will all the redeemed receive the full blessing, certainly in the age to come after the resurrection in the new earth state spoken of in 2 Peter iii. 13; and, brethren and friends, let us be diligent, that we may be found in that great day spotless, and let us not rest, but search diligently, for the knowledge of the Scriptures is hard to be understood. Ver. 16, 17, 18.

C. P. GRAHAM.

Heroic Preaching.

The grand old world "sermon," that once stood for solid Scriptural shot, has come to be an iridescent rubber ball. Preaching has taken so wide a range that nothing, from volunteers to volcanoes, but is, on occasion, blessed with a text. Rare indeed is the sermonizer who is not tempted to select his themes to suit popular tastes, instead of expounding saving truths.

The fact is, it requires no little courage now-a-days to cast one's self unreservedly upon the Word of God in the preparation and delivery of a discourse. The prophets Elijah and Isaiah came not with a more stirring message than does the preacher who proclaims, with anointed lips, what his heart has so deeply felt of the truth as it is in Jesus.

The Pharisee condemns the Bible-saturated preacher as altogether too revivalistic; the prayerless member thinks him too personal; the worldly parishioner, too dry, antiquated, and commonplace.

It is a brave thing to make the words of the Bible live and breathe with power. "For the Word of God is quick [alive], and powerful, and sharper than any two-edged sword,.....and is a discerner of the thoughts and intents of the heart." And because the Bible possesses these pungent, dynamic forces, it requires the highest form of courage to preach the Bible itself, just as it is, with all the strength of one's soul.

It is surprising how many other things come right in a parish when the Word of God is given free course in the pulpit and prayer meeting. And the thrill of joy on the preacher's part in re-discovering the truth in all its fulness, and sharing it with others, who can express? The heavenly treasure constantly increases in preciousness and value to him who sells all, in order that he may possess it.

The Wicked.

"The righteous shall be recompensed in the earth; much more the wicked and the sinner."—Prov. xi. 31.

"The wicked shall not inhabit the earth."—Prov. x. 30.

"The Lord hath made the wicked for the day of evil."—Prov. xvi. 4.

"The man that wandereth out of the way of understanding shall remain in the congregation of the dead."—Prov. xxi. 16.

"The lamp of the wicked shall be put out."—Prov. xxiv. 20.

"The dead know not anything."—Eccl. ix. 5.

"Upon the wicked Jehovah shall rain burning coals, fire, and brimstone, and a flaming tempest; this shall be the portion of their cup."—Ps. ix. 16.

"The wicked shall perish: into smoke shall they consume away."—Psalms xxxvii. 20.

"Everywhere political ordinances are more or less vicious; religion is of no force, or is made use of to serve party purposes; governments see in the people only the material life, and believe they have satisfied every want, because there are the banks, exchanges, telegraphs, railways and enormous speculations. But intellectual life, suffocated on the one side, seeks to exert itself on the other. Hence exists a permanent struggle between matter and spirit, between the intelligent and suffering multitude, and the oligarchy of the privileged parasites of society.

"The wise shall inherit glory." "The simple shall inherit folly."

Are You One of Them?

By examining our list we find there are between 500 and 600 people whose time has expired. Some only a few months and others some years. If each one of you who are thus owing us would go to the office right now and send the money due us, we would have over a thousand dollars with which to push forward our work.

Brothers and Sisters, we need this money very much. We have earned it—it is ours—and if you do not send it to us, but use it on self, you are simply spending our money. It is not yours—it is ours. Were we in position to do so we would gladly lend you the amount, but the fact is we have bills to pay and cannot lend it to you longer. We ask you kindly and in the spirit of love and justice, to at once send us what you owe us. If you cannot spare it all now then send part of it, and the balance after awhile. Please do not neglect this, but get a dollar and send to us right away today. We thank you in advance for the favor, and assure you we appreciate it very much.

The "Three-fact-gospel" questions must lie over till next time.

THE last act in the Dreyfus farce has been played, and he is a free man. The story is long, but can be told in few words. Dreyfus was accused of treason, was tried by court martial secretly and condemned to imprisonment on Devil's Island. Served five years of his term, was granted a revision by the Court of Cassation. Was again tried by court martial and again condemned, being found guilty by army officers, who though finding him chargeable with treason, yet found some "extenuating circumstances." A motion is made for the rehearing of the case, and while this is under discussion the poor man is told that if he will withdraw this action, and ask for mercy the President will pardon him, and he shall go free. So this is the end of the most widely advertized trial that ever was placed on record.

Is It Sound?

Under the above heading a writer in a contemporary paper says:—

"A voluminous writer in THE RESTITUTION of May 10, after asking the question, "What made the difference between the offerings of Cain and Abel? says in answer to this question: Abel, in the Divine way acknowledged that he was a sinner, and deserved a violent death, like that of the animal, and Cain acknowledged nothing of the kind."

What we have written is public property, and if it is unsound it should be exposed. And if we write too voluminously to please the critic, will he allow us to state by way of an extenuation, that we Never write till we are confident we have God's truth in the premises, or offer it as our opinion.

Never attempt to deprive any one of his faith and hope till we are confident we have something better to offer him.

Never like to leave a subject until we think we will be understood, lest we mislead others.

Never get on "The Fence," and wait for a favorable opportunity to get down.

Never avoid saying just what we believe and why.

Never covertly teach what we know to be subversive of the doctrines held by the church we belong to.

The critic says "Paul flatly contradicts" what we say in our article, when he says, "By faith Abel offered unto God a more excellent sacrifice than Cain, by which he obtained witness that he WAS righteous, God testifying of his gift, and by it, he being dead yet speaketh." And then by way of comment he adds:—"Instead of showing that his offering was to cancel Abel's sin, it was a gift from a pure and noble heart, an offering in faith, which God accepted BECAUSE HE WAS RIGHTEOUS. The old idea that all the sacrifices were types of Christ's death could be more readily believed if there was any proof of it; the fact is, that the idea of sin did not enter into the first sacrifices at all. He then says: "Take a few examples, and asks if Noah's burnt offering after the flood was because he had sinned? and answers, No; nothing of the kind. Paul says it was his obedience that condemned the world and made him heir of the righteousness which is by faith. These clean beasts and clean fowls which he offered seem to have been to express his gratitude to God for preserving him from the flood. At least there is no intimation of sin."

IS IT SOUND?

It is certainly a unique criticism. It claims that our statement of the difference between the offerings of these men is not correct, but where does he show us what the difference was? In our judgment, what he says is not sound, because:—

1. "In faith Abel offered to God a more sacrifice." Word for word rendering in Diaglott; Clark's translation is also a "greater sacrifice." Rotherham's,—"A fuller sacrifice." Young's translation "A better sacrifice." Henderson's—"More sacrifice." Sawyer's "A greater sacrifice." Syriac, "Better sacrifice."

2. He misquotes his supposed proof-text. Abel offered more than one gift. God testified of his GIFTS. This shows the meaning of the words more sacrifice.

3. The "more," "greater," "fuller" sacrifice of Abel was offered in faith. Cain's one gift was not offered in faith, and hence expressed no confidence in what God had promised—a Savior.

4. Faith comes by hearing the Word of God; so then Abel had heard the Word of God, and believed it, and the evidence is before us that the two gifts instead of one, was the OBEDIENCE of his faith; and that it is by the greater sacrifice, the product of faith, that he still speaks to us, by way of example.

5. We read of "The WAY OF CAIN as a warning to us, in Jude 11. In the lone family of mankind, he MUST have heard the word of faith, as well as Abel. That word revealed GOD'S WAY, and Abel walked in it; he did not, God held him accountable, and therefore he was accountable.

6. The grammatical and commonsense meaning of the critic's quotation from Heb. xi. 4, shows him plainly at fault when he says God accepted Abel's offering because he WAS [already] righteous, because,

(a.) Justification is by faith.

(b.) Faith without works is dead, and therefore useless, and

(c.) God testifying of his GIFTS, the fruit of faith, makes it clear that the works of Cain referred to by the Spirit, 1 John iii. 12, as evil, and those of Abel as righteous, relate to their respective offerings; and because

(d.) Genesis iv, 4, 5 proves that Cain was angry with Abel because God respected Abel's offering,—not because of a previous unpleasantness. This is additional evidence that the "works" of 1 John iii. 12 related to the offerings of these men. And

(e.) Gen. iv. 7, offers still further evidence in the same direction. The Lord said to Cain, "If thou doest well, shalt thou not be accepted? And if thou doest not well, sin lieth at the door." What is this but a gracious reminder that he knew what well-doing in this connection was, and that he had an opportunity to reform if he would, and in that case HE would be accepted also, and even retain his birthright: so fully and freely does God forgive the repentant, that he remembers their sin no more; so Cain may as before, rule over Abel, or retain the preference enjoyed by virtue of his birth, see verse seven. But if he did evil still, sin would lie at the door. And

(f.) The truth is made clear in this brief history, that no works are just or good if they are not in conformity to the will of God. And, as all must admit that the divine will can only be known by Revelation, that is, by being commanded, faith in it can only be attested by obedience; and, in the nature of the case, Justification cannot take place before the act of obedience, because that is a condition of Justification. Faith is not perfect without the obedience.

(g.) As in the past, so now, Justification is by faith; but when does the Justification take place? When the critic finds a person who has heard the Glad Tidings and believed it, and enquires what he must do in order to be saved, what does the critic tell him? Does he answer the enquirer in this way? "Justification is by faith; as you have faith, you are Justified, pardoned, righteous before God,—and now, if from a pure and noble heart you will perform an act which expresses your confidence that God has remitted all the sins of the past, God will accept it?" Or, does he answer as Peter did on the day of Pentecost? "Repent, and be baptized every one of you, in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins?" If he does this, when does God testify to him that he is righteous? Before baptism, or after it? If the enquirer has faith enough in God's Word, that he will remit all past sin, he will be baptized into Jesus Christ for that purpose,—and will know he is Justified the moment he has obeyed, because he has the promise of God to that effect.

(h.) The critic teaches that Abel was righteous before he made his offering. And yet the Spirit's word for it, he did not know but what he was a sinner, till God testified to his righteousness, by respecting his greater sacrifice—the "firstling of his flock," "AND of the fat thereof." We can perceive of nothing in our conception more unsound! How unreasonable and unlike God to forgive sin and adopt them as his children, and not let them know it. This might be taken for truth by some but not by those who by God's favor have found the Key to his Eternal Purpose, and the means to bring it about.

(i.) He says, "The old idea that all the sacrifices were types of Christ's death could be more readily believed if there was any proof for it."

Is that really so, "more readily believed?" These words mean, that it might, or might not be believed, if there were proof of it. If he did not mean that, he should, as a critic, say what he meant. They are by no means sound words, and there are more of them.

"The old idea that all the sacrifices were types of Christ's death," etc. This conveys the wrong idea, that the "voluminous writer" has that idea.

(j.) The critic next says, "The FACT [caps. ours] is, that the idea of sin did not enter into the first sacrifices at all."

He speaks as one having authority, but we cannot accept what he says, without proof; and there being but one source of information on that subject, we call for Scripture authority of that positive statement, in the meantime wondering what sort of an audience he was addressing. We do not believe there is any proof of it in all the Book of God, or else he would have given it. We can put it stronger than that. We KNOW there is no such proof because we have infallible evidence that the idea of both Mediatorship and sin DID enter into the sacrifices offered long before the Law of Moses, as follows:—

(k.) In Job i. 4, 5, we learn that Job's sons and daughters were in the habit of feasting from house to house, each one his own day, v. 5, "And it was so, when the days of their feasting were gone about ["gone around the days of the banquet" Young's Translation] that Job sent and sanctified them, and rose up early in the morning, and offered burnt-offerings to the number of them all, for Job said, It may be that my sons have sinned, and cursed God in their hearts. Thus did Job all the days."—Margin.

(l.) In Job xlii. 7, the Lord says to Eliphaz the Temanite, "My wrath is kindled against thee, and against thy two friends; for ye have not spoken of me right, as my servant Job. Therefore take you now seven bullocks and seven rams and go to my servant Job, and offer up for yourselves a burnt offering; and my servant shall pray for you; for him will I accept, [in their behalf] lest I deal with you after your folly, in that ye have not spoken of me right, like my servant Job." So we are told "they did according as the Lord commanded them; the Lord also accepted Job ["the face of Job," Margin.]

(m.) Here is incontrovertible testimony that the idea of sin did enter into the first sacrifices.

(n.) That a Mediator between God and man was necessary after the breech which sin made, is proven.

(o.) That burnt offerings were offered for sin both before and after the establishment of the official priesthood, is proven.

(p.) That the head of the family was its priest or mediator, is proven and when we know that the blood of beasts would not put away sin, we know that the offering was an expression of faith in blood that would in the future put away sin, or why offer it?

(q.) Additional evidence have we that sin entered into the patriarchal sacrifices, in Gen. xiv. 18, Melchizedek King of Salem was the priest of the Most High God. Nothing but sin made a priesthood necessary. As in the case of Job, God met others in the person of Melchizedec, as he now meets us in Christ, a Priest of the same order.

(r.) In reply to the objection that we have no evidence that offerers of the first sacrifices knew of the things which we claim sacrifices for sin then symbolized, we say, they are mistaken who say so. We have inspired testimony in Jude that Enoch knew of and believed in the

which is still future, and which we cherish as "that blessed hope." Read the soul-stirring song of David as he sees by faith his greater Son come down like rain upon the mown grass; hear him say "Thou wilt show me the path of life;" and "I shall be satisfied when I awake in thy likeness." Hear Job shouting his hope of

SEEING HIS REDEEMER

of the earth, after hearing his voice, while in his bed of darkness. Hear what our Lord said of Abraham seeing his day and rejoicing. Then go to the 11th of Hebrews and learn that every one of the great cloud of witnesses mentioned there suffered privation or death on account of their faith in the promises of God to be realized in a future and nothing more will the honest and intelligent require. Abel is in that noble list, being the first martyr to his faith. Instead of wondering if this be possible, people would have wondered if the hope of these witnesses of faith in the resurrection had not been plainly stated; because we read that the Lamb was slain (in the purpose of God, of course) before the foundation of the world. And 1 Peter i. 20 says of Christ that he was verily foreordained, or foreknown, before the foundation of the world, but was manifested in the last times for you." So that we have definite testimony that the Anointed One was always the centre of Jehovah's purpose in the creation and redemption of earth and man. From this point of view we see that God, who saw the end from the beginning, has no reason to change his mind or alter his purpose; and it follows from this that the shedding of blood was always necessary to the remission of sin; the gospel has always been the power of God unto salvation; and faith and obedience have always been exacted of those who would share God's great salvation.

In reference to the examples offered as proof by critic, this is the way the matter stands:—

Noah offered a burnt offering.

He was not doing this because he had sinned or his family—

Therefore:

"The fact is, that the idea of SIN did not enter into the first sacrifices at all."

Abraham built an altar between Bethel and Hai. Another at Hebron .....In all this there appears no evidence of sin, but on the contrary Abraham receives a blessed promise in their miraculous burning by the lamp and burning furnace, that he should receive the inheritance."

Therefore:

"The fact is, that the idea of SIN did not enter into the first sacrifices at all."

"So Samuel took a heifer and offered a sacrifice to the Lord.....Samuel had done no sin, yet he offered a sacrifice to the Lord."

Therefore:

"The fact is, that the idea of SIN did not enter into the first sacrifices at all."

It is really painful to think any one capable of offering such passages as proof that the idea of SIN never entered into the first sacrifices at all. If he did not know that all have sinned; if he did not know that because the blood shed could not put away sin, the offering had to be continually repeated under the law; if he did not know that then, as now, THOSE JUSTIFIED BY FAITH, even, often do, like Paul, what they would not; if he did not know that a gracious provision has been made whereby the blood of Christ cleanses God's disobedient children from all sins of ignorance and inadvertence and weakness; 1 John ii. 1, if he did not know that even God's adopted children cannot approach God in their own name now—yes, if he did not know these simple truths, some excuse may be formed for him when he denies that the antediluvian saints, who were equally needy, had similar privileges; and denies that sacrifices were at once a significant mode of confessing sin, and asking pardon, and expressing faith in the Great Offering, and the Only Mediator.

We regard the criticism as most injurious. We believe it calculated to lower the estimate of the value of the blood of Christ, and of Mediatorship. If the faithful of old could approach God without a mediator, why cannot we? This is just about what the flesh of the ill-informed or credulous is capable of suggesting. And if Abel could be reckoned righteous through a blind faith, why cannot we? If he was able to please God with a faith which did not embrace the world's Redeemer, and life after death, what is the use of contending for One Faith, and One Hope? Why not go with the crowd? This is what is to be feared.

Sacrifice is sacrifice without regard to the age; and to MIX UP all the offerings, and say that fruit or flour, or oil was just as acceptable as the death of an animal, without explaining that each of the articles named was acceptable for the purpose specified, is, in our estimation, most injurious, and we enter a solemn protest.

Reader, you are asked to believe that under the law an offering of fruit flour or oil or money, was just as acceptable as the death of an animal. Part of the price of the truth is kept back. Meat offerings, peace offerings, trespass offerings, and sin offerings, are jumbled together apparently, to make good his case. Why did he not explain to the ill-informed that flour, oil, fruit and money, were just as acceptable for the purposes designated, but not as sin-offerings? Why did he not show that "atonement money" was a national collection appointed for the "Service of the tabernacle of the congregation;" and was assessed at the taking of the census. Exodus xxx. 12-16. Why did he not illustrate by the reference to the shadows of good things in the Hebrews? Would flour, or fruit, or oil, or money bring the everlasting covenant into force—Heb. xiii. 20—that gives life beyond the grave?

Not a tithe of the testimony has been presented, but we will add no more except to give the critic a little of his own medicine. Only eight or nine years ago he taught us and our children as follows:

"That an offering is that which is brought as an atonement for sin; and asks what Mosaic offerings were a figure of Heb. ix. 14-28; Eph. v. 2; Heb. vii. 27; Titus. ii. 14."

In 1891 he taught that offerings were a means of conciliating God's favor; an essential part of public worship and private piety. He also says the offerings under the law were undoubtedly a readjustment of a previous system of worship. He says:

"Cain made the REQUIRED offering of first-fruits, but the Lord was not pleased. He did not well—had not fully ONEYED in faith as did his brother Abel. He was taking HIS OWN WAY. The Lamb for the sin-offerings that laid at the door had not been brought as a burnt offering unto the Lord." Again he says:

"Abel brought of the firstlings of the flock. Brought the lamb in accordance with the implied command, God had respect to, and accepted his offering, and GRANTED THE ASKED-FOR PARDON."

Also he says, "Only clean beasts could be offered under the law, and these must be without blemish, being typical of Christ the Sinless One."

In 1891 he teaches that the Israelites were taught by a system of object lessons that sin was contrary to his revealed will, and that holiness of the heart and life would meet his approval, and entitle to the promised reward. In this law the offerings and sacrifices, priestly adornments, and the tabernacle with its apartments and furniture, he says, were types of things future to that time. They pointed to the Great Redeemer Jesus, and to what God would in after ages accomplish through him."

He also says, "THE ADAMIC and PATRIARCHAL RITUAL WAS RE-ARRANGED," (Small caps. ours.)

He also says there seems to be something SIGNIFIED in the coats of skin which God gave to him (Adam) and his wife for a covering; and refers to the words "Blessed is he whose iniquities are forgiven and whose sins are covered."

Distinct from sin-offerings, gifts of love, gratitude or reverence are mentioned. He did run well, who or what hath hindered him? Is not this progress backward?

To the Brethren:

I will say, that if any who sent to me for my little tracts failed to receive them, will let me know, I will send again, or to any others who wish to distribute tracts, as we have quite a good supply yet, and we want them out in the field. This is a good time to scatter tracts and sow the good seed, as the night is far spent and the day is at hand.

Jews to Possess Palestine.

From the Chicago Tribune of Sept. 25, we clip the following item regarding the work of the Zionists at their last conference.

Leon Zolotkoff, the Chicago delegate to the third congress of the Order of Knights of Zion, held at Basle, Switzerland, declares Palestine will soon be owned and settled by Jews, and that the colonists will possess a government of their own under the suzerainty of the Sultan of Turkey. Mr. Zolotkoff, has just returned from the congress, where were assembled 300 delegates from all parts of the world, the United States being represented by nine. The object of the convention was to make plans to obtain possession of Palestine, that it may be colonized by the Jews. A committee was appointed at the congress to visit the Sultan of Turkey and to obtain from him a charter to the land.

"We will buy the land from the Sultan," said Mr. Zolotkoff, "and we will settle a colony of Jews there that will be able to live as they choose. Already we have formed a stock company capitalized at $10,000,000 with 2,000,000 shares. The company, which is called the Jewish Colonial Trust of London, has already sold 100,000 shares, 2,000 of which were purchased by Chicago Jews. Thirty industrial colonies comprised of 6,000 Jews have been formed, ready to enter Palestine as soon as it is purchased. We also appointed a committee to wait on the Czar of Russia, asking him to use his influence to have the Sultan grant us the territory."

There are several thousand members of the Order of Knights of Zion in Chicago. The society was formed in 1891.

Editor Restitution:

The Church of God at Waterville, Washington, has this year built a very good church house in town, located on Central Avenue, in a very pretty part of the little city. The building is 32x46 feet. The house was dedicated about the middle of last July. The sermon was delivered by the writer, before a large audience. Since that time there has been service in it every Sunday. We now have a rather interesting Sunday school. Prayer meeting every Wednesday night. I have just learned that Bro. J. T. Prime of Edison, Neb., with his family have arrived at Wenatchee, Wash. Bro. Prime expects to preach at Wenatchee and other places as there may be opportunity. Wenatchee is 25 miles southwest from Waterville. The harvest here is truly great, but the laborers are few. The membership of the church at Waterville is now about 75, and we hope for some additions ere long. I have now started in my eightieth year, since the 7th of last month. My wife and I were baptized by Elder Henry Logan, in Yellow River, near Pisgah meeting house, Marshall Co., Ind., on the second Sunday in June, 1850. And on the second Sunday in June, 1860 I commenced preaching. I am resolved to continue trying to present the gospel, while I have the physical and mental ability to do so. May the great Life-giver soon come, Christian greetings to all. In hope,

RICHARD CORNALEY.

Deep, sympathizing, effectual benevolence, does not find its way often into ostentatious lists. Neither does it go about in mysterious melodramatic disguise, on purpose to be found out and be all the more blazoned; but, with unostentatious earnestness, gives its time, as well as its money to the needy and suffering. It discriminates, inquires, and affords judicious help rather than unqualified alms; which though it may bless the giver, seldom blesses the receiver: unless in cases of utter helplessness.

An Arab proverb says: By six qualities may a fool be known—Anger without cause, speech without profit, change without motive, inquiry without an object, putting trust in a stranger, and wanting capacity to discriminate between friend and foe.

Report.

Closed a nine days meeting at Green school house, 11 miles east of south of Rensselaer, Ind., Tuesday evening, Sept. 19. Two were baptized Sept. 20.

A Little Talk With Jesus.

A little talk with Jesus, how it smooths the rugged road,
How it seems to help me onward when I faint beneath my load!
When my heart is crushed with sorrow, and my eyes with tears are dim,
There's naught can yield me comfort like a little talk with him.

I tell him I am weary, and I pray would be at rest;
That I'm daily, hourly longing for a home upon his breast;
And he answers me so sweetly, in tones of tenderest love,
"I am coming soon to take thee to my happy home above."

All this is what I'm wanting, his lovely face to see,
And I'm not afraid to say it I know he's wanting me.
He gave his life a ransom to make me all his own,
And he can't forget his promise, to me, his purchased one.

I know the way is dreary to yonder far-off clime,
But a little talk with Jesus will while away the time;
And yet the more I know him, and all his grace explore,
It only sets me longing to know him more and more.

I cannot live without him, nor would if I could;
He is my daily portion, my medicine and my food.
He's altogether lovely, none can with him compare;
The chief among ten thousand, the fairest of the fair.

So I'll wait a little longer, till his appointed time,
And glory in the knowledge that such a hope is mine;
When in my Father's dwelling, where "many mansions" be,
I'll sweetly talk with Jesus, and he shall talk with me.

"In my Father's house are many mansions." John xiv. 2. "For he looked for a city which hath foundations, whose builder and maker is God." Heb. x. 10.

Russia.

In view of the present condition of the Russian Empire, and the enormous enterprises undertaken and carried out by her in the last few years, the following published in the Herald of the Kingdom and Age to Come, of July, 1856 is of interest. This was written just after the close of the Crimean War and the signing of the Treaty of Paris, that was intended to serve as a check to Russian aggression in the region of the Black Sea. It seems as if the author had a very fair conception of the nature of the Northern Bear.—Ed.

"Russia, disabled at last, can no longer threaten and injure Turkey; she has lost likewise, her influence over the Christian population of that country; and, moreover, Alexander II. has surrendered his ancestral policy regarding the Ottoman." Such are the triumphant dicta of the European publicists, belonging to the Allies, in their comments on the Treaty of Paris; but they seem to be marked by no very profound or far-seeing wisdom. Nor, indeed, could the philosophic truth on the subject be expected from such a source, under the present circumstances. The recent ensanguined foe must remain a bitter opponent even after the battle is over; besides, the necessity of persuading the people of the West that the war has been worth all it has cost, renders exaggeration quite natural on the part of these writers. It becomes, then, so much the more proper for us, at this distance from the scene of conflict, to consult the light of impartial facts and of history respecting these allegations, and to endeavor to ascertain whether Russia has really suffered any vital injury, which can avert or much hinder the normal development of her career.

Undoubtedly Russia emerges from the war with ghastly gashes; wounded, too, in her pride and prestige. But the treaty closing this drama has, more forcibly than many preceding it, a material and moral view, and in each a transcient and permanent side. The losses of Russia—even the reduction of the sovereignty over her shores—at the worst for her, count only as material diminutions; but such a huge and vigorous political tree, after being clipped and hedged in, must sprout anew, with health and strength undiminished. The new state of things created by the peace for Turkey and Christians there, may apparently diminish the Russian influence over them during a short time, but in the long run it may throw these same Christians more fully into the arms of the Northern Power. The political, and, still more, the religious current, so powerful among the Eastern nations of old, uniting them with Russia, cannot at once be diverted, much less absorbed. Traditions and recollections are not easily destroyed in the popular heart. Besides, it will be very easy for the partisans of Russia, between Cape Matapan and the Pruth—and they are very numerous—to represent to the people that all the concessions and rights, as well as the administrative ameliorations, conceded to them in the Principalities and throughout the Ottoman Empire, result from the efforts and sacrifices of Russia. They only be made to perceive that but for the war all this would not have been wrested from the Porte: and that the contest originated solely in the demand of Russia concerning this object. Without the provocation neither France nor England would ever have taken any decided step in the matter.

Moreover, the Greek Catholic Church which during the centuries of pressure and martyrdom, consoled the Christians of Turkey while preserving their religious and national sentiments, will now be exposed to new trials and dangers. The Romanism and Protestantism of the West under protection of France, Austria and England, are preparing for a campaign of propagandism in the heart of that communion. Their missionaries will seek to make converts more among the Eastern Christians than among the Mohammedans. But the ties of the people to that Church will not be easily sundered, or her influence destroyed; and her hope of temporal salvation will lie in being drawn more closely than hitherto to the bosom of her severe and powerful sisters in Russia. Under these circumstances the influence of the Czar over the immense majority of the Christian inhabitants of Turkey being fostered by the Greek and Slavonic clergy, will still overshadow that of his Western antagonists. Though Alexander II. may wish to abandon the so-called hereditary policy of the Empire from the time of Peter the Great, it will be beyond his power.

Only those wholly unacquainted with the laws which give life and development to nations—as diplomats and politicians generally are—consider this policy as of personal origin, and hence capable of being destroyed by an individual fiat. But the Russian tendency and march toward the south, toward Constantinople, is as old as the existence of the Empire; it was, it is, and will be until fulfilled, a necessary consequence of its material and immaterial growth and development. The greatest rivers of Russia running through her richest territories, point to the south, and make a national contact with the Mediterranean indispensable for commercial purposes. Destiny seems to have traced out this policy from the beginning, long centuries ago, indeed. It began, probably, in the fifth century with the city of Novgorod, the commercial link between the North of Europe and the Orient, and was distinctly pronounced in the ninth century, immediately on the foundation of the empire on the Dneiper by the Varangues. Their hen-progeny ponred around the Euxine, overflowing its shores to the Caucasian slopes, stormed the gates of Constantinople, and shook the thrones of Porphyrogenes. The nation, Christianized, did the same thing afterward. The domination of the Tartars temporarily arrested this current, but it resumed its course so soon as that yoke was broken. The Ivans pushed simultaneously toward the Baltic, toward the Black and Caspian Seas, and the North Pacific Ocean. Under them, religion became identified with this policy, and a marriage with an heiress of the Moslem destroyed the Byzantine throne and gave a certain documentary legality to their aspirations. The Romanoffs, under Peter and his successors, have only carried out what had been for centuries the mainspring of the national life and action. Transient events may arrest this movement for a time, but it will constantly seek to be renewed and with increased force. Can any man, can Alexander II., divert or destroy it?

It is now evidently the interest of Russia to protract as long as possible, the agony of the Ottoman Empire. Time, ever the best ally of Russia, will work for her. The death and decomposition of Turkey will occur about the time when Russia has healed her wounds, and unfolded more fully her resources with the lights of civilization, turning to profit the experience for which she has now so dearly paid. What she loses in a naval and military point of view by the neutralization of the Black Sea, she will gain in a different manner in other waters and on new fields. No one supposes that she will meekly cross her Lambson herlap. She immediately will go to work and avail herself of fresh resources. The old battleships sunk in the bay of Sebastopol will re-appear, more numerous and powerful, as steamers and screw-propellers, on other waters. Navy-yards will be built at Archangel on the White Sea, and the mouth of the Amoor on the Pacific; both having better materials for the construction of vessels than the ports of the Euxine, while to the Amoor machinery may be easily forwarded from the United States. This new basis for a powerful navy is sure and independent, no Dardanelles being there to impede the movement of ships.

The war, it is true, has been with disaster to Russia. But disasters have always proved advantageous for her growth. One is astonished in taking a bird's eye view of her history, and comparing it with that of most other nations, past or present. Indeed, the history of Russia, in its development, bears a similitude to the various epochs of the geological formation of the earth. Russia has stood already about twelve centuries; a lapse of time during which many other empires, for example Persia, and above all Rome, were born, rose, shook the world and fell; or during which others, of modern fame, though chronologically posterior, have reached seemingly the limits of their geographical extension as well as of their internal material development and population. Russia, in this respect, has scarcely entered upon her youth, and her limitless resources are as yet mainly untouched. As geological history is marked by epochs of life-destroying convulsions and revolutions, so in the history of Russia the invasion and long dominion of the Tartars, the invasion of the Poles in the seventeenth century, and the invasion of 1812, threatened to destroy her independence and nationality. And so, after the terrific convulsions of the globe, nature resuming her powers, bursts forth in new and more perfect creations, so Russia, after each of those prostrating events, has always risen more vigorous, active and expansive. So will it be now. After all, this war has been a salutary and purifying tempest for her and for the world. It has shown to the ruler and the nation that power or greatness is not encompassed wholly by military organization, but must repose on industrial and intellectual development penetrating all the popular strata. The war has been an electric spark, awakening powers of mind and national resources hitherto hidden.

Long before the end of the present century under the action of general statistical laws, the population of Russia, even in her present limits between Germany, the Pruth, and the Pacific Ocean, must naturally reach one hundred millions, or nearly half the population of the rest of Europe; and this on an area where five times that number can live and move comfortably. This mass of people of one and the same creed, language, traditions and aspirations, will then possess a comparatively much higher degree of mental culture than the present generation. Nets of railroads will cover their territory, running, not through solitudes, but through animated and cultivated regions. Russia will acquire a power of elasticity, of contraction and expansion, centupling her gigantic forces. Such a mass, well organized and endowed with normal life, must unavoidably—for good or for evil—wield a momentuous influence in the policy or destinies of European States. Russia, like a steadily rising tide, may be momentarily checked; but it will overflow with renewed force any artificial dam. Should, therefore, the relations of nations for the future be guided by the old spirit of rivalry and jealousy, should the force of mutual prejudice and disparagement still overcloud higher impulses, then it is easy to comprehend the pang of fear thrilling through European politicians at the sight of the huge form of Russia and her vast growth and capacities.

The Jews.

Portland, June 24.—(To the Editor.)—Noticing the correspondence in The Oregonian of recent issues on the Jew question, I would like, with your permission, to give some Scripture on the subject. I can not understand how anyone who is a Christian and knows and believes what the Bible has to say on the subject can have anything else but a tender regard and a feeling of respect for the Jew. It is surprising how much testimony there is in the Bible of the future glories of the Jew.

While the Bible is a Jewish Bible; written for and by Jews. Jesus said: "Salvation is of the Jews." John iv. 22. Did you ever hear a Christian preach from [illegible] venture.

To my mind [illegible] tian without be[illegible] therly feeling t[illegible] cause to them [illegible] and the glory, a[illegible] the giving of the [illegible] ises; whose are [illegible] whom as concern[illegible] came." Rom. ix. [illegible] cast away his p[illegible] knew. Why the Je[illegible] not recognize the [illegible] the conversion of [illegible] Christian convert. [illegible] x. 20.

The disciples wen[illegible] not to convert the [illegible] as some im[illegible] Acts xv. 14-17, plainly puts it b[illegible] all dispute. Thus the disciples [illegible] come together to consider this ye[illegible] and here is a part of t[illegible] above: "And after they had held t[illegible] James answered and said, H[illegible] unto me. Simon has declared [illegible] (as recorded in [illegible] the Gentiles to t[illegible] of them a people for his name, [illegible] convert all of them, but to take [illegible] of them a people from the Gentiles to represent his name in his future kingdom on this earth, and to this agree the words of the prophets as it is written in the Old Testament, the Jews' Bible: After this, (taking out a people from the Gentiles), I will return and will build again the tabernacle of David, which is fallen down, and I will build again the ruins thereof, and I will set it up. Then comes the salvation of the world after God has restored the kingdom, glory, honor and power, with Jerusalem its capital, to the Jew once more, as proven by the following. That the remnant of men might seek after the Lord and all the Gentiles upon whom my name has (previously) been called, saith the Lord who doeth all these things. "And I will plant them upon their land and they shall no more be pulled up out of their land which I have given them, saith the Lord thy God." Amos ix. 15.

"Thus saith the Lord God. I will take the children of Israel from among the Gentiles, whither they be gone, and will gather them on every side and bring them into their own land; and I will make them one nation in the land upon the mountains of Israel; and one king shall be king to them all; and they shall be [illegible] nations; [illegible] kingdoms any more at all." Ezek. xxxvii. 21-22. Here are positive statements that have not as yet been fulfilled. The prophets are full of such ideas. Christians either ignore all these statements or else give them a spiritual application to themselves.

The quotation from Acts xv. 14-17 shows that the apostles applied such to the Jews and to the future, I can produce testimony to prove that it is God's purpose to keep the Jews a separate and distinct people, with all their peculiarities until the set time has arrived to favor Zion again. And when that time comes, they will not have to buy Palestine either, for it is their own by gift from Jehovah, and all the money in the world can not buy it. But God will rid the Turk from the land when the time comes.

To Jesus and the apostles Jerusalem had a connection with it that made them weep over it, and no true Christian will speak lightly of it or of the Jews. Jesus said, "Swear not by Jerusalem, for it is the city of the great king." Matt. v. 35. Why? Because "the Lord God shall give unto him (Jesus) the throne of his father David; and he shall reign over the house of Jacob for ever, and of his kingdom there shall be no end." Lu. i. 32-33. Christians give the former part of these verses a literal application to Jesus. But the latter part they spiritualize by saying it is a spiritual kingdom and he is now reigning on David's throne. But not so; for David's throne lies to waste; his city is trodden down and his people scattered abroad. But for how long? Just listen and see from the Master's own words spoken shortly after these things began to be fulfilled: "And they shall fall by the edge of the sword and shall be led away captive into all nations; and Jerusalem shall be trodden down of the Gentiles (how long?) until the times of the Gentiles be fulfilled." Luke xxi. 24. How long are the "times" of the Gentiles? Two thousand five hundred and twenty years from the beginning of the Babylonian empire. (Space will not permit the evidence being here given.) So the Gentiles have not much longer in which to tread down Jerusalem. The "sick man" (Turk) will die suddenly, though hard, some of these days.

Let us see what Paul has to say on the subject, quoting in part from Romans xi. 11 onward: "I say then, Have they stumbled that they should fall? God forbid: but through their (temporary) fall salvation is come (preached) to the Gentiles" to excite them to emulation; for if the first fruits be holy, so also is the mass, and if the root be holy so also the branches. They are the root, body and branches, constituting the commonwealth of Israel, and at the very best we Gentiles are only wild branches grafted into the natural tree of God's choice. Paul warns us to boast not against the natural branches. Again says Paul: "I would not that ye (Gentiles) be ignorant of this mystery lest ye should be wise in your own conceit (and, strange to say, many have fallen into what he guarded against) that hardness in some measure has happened to Israel until the fullness of the Gentiles be come in." Here we have the times of the Gentiles again. Then comes the time to favor Israel, at which time the following will be fulfilled: "[illegible] that I will make a new covenant with the house of Israel and with the house of Judah. Not according to the covenant that I made with their fathers in the day that I took them out of the land of Egypt, but this shall be the covenant I will make with them: After those days (the days the Gentiles now have), saith the Lord. I will put my law in their inward parts and write it in their hearts, and I will be their God and they shall be my people: for I will forgive their iniquities and remember their sin no more." Jeremiah xxxi. 31-34. Yes, "no more." During the millennium they shall be at the head of all government and reforms, and the law shall go forth from Zion and the Word of the Lord from Jerusalem. Then the salvation of the world will be of the Jews and not carried on as it is now. As represented by the prodigal son in a strange country feeding swine and living on the husks, which is the condition the true church of followers of Christ are in.

To make sure this prophecy applies to the Jews and is yet in the future we have only to turn to Hebrews viii. 7-12, where Paul quotes it and applies it to them and the future. I must return to Romans xi., for a few more thoughts, and then I am done. And so all Israel shall be saved, as it is written (yes, no guess work about it): there shall come out of Zion a deliverer and shall turn away ungodliness from Jacob. For "this" is my covenant with them when I shall take away their sin. Rom. xi. 11-27. The Jews will never be converted to modern Christianity. But all must have the Abrahamic faith and hope, and then all will be brothers in point of religion. Christian is only a nickname of contempt, first applied to the early Jewish followers of Christ, because that was a title he went by, just the same as we call people "Bryanites," "populists," etc.—James M. Level, in Portland Oregonian.

The Forgiveness of Sins.

Do you see that it is because God forgives sins that men fear him? It must be so. First, if he did not forgive their sins there would be nobody left to fear him, for they would all die. If he were to deal with them after their sins he would sweep the whole race away. Next, if it were certain that God did not pardon sin, so everybody would despair and not one would fear him, for a despairing heart grows hard. Because there is no hope men go on to sin worse and worse. "But there is forgiveness with God, that he may be feared." The devils never repent for there is no pardon for them. There is forgiveness with him for you to-night, that he may be feared. What a wonderful effect pardon has on a man! Oh, the wonderful effect it has a man to know he is pardoned, to be sure he is forgiven. He begins to tremble all over. "They shall fear and tremble for all the goodness I will make to pass before them." He is afraid he shall go to sin again after such love and after such mercy. He is melted down. He does not know what to make out of it. For a time he can hardly believe it is true. I know I felt at first like Peter when the angel brought him out of prison and the great iron gate was opened. He wist not what was done unto him and thought it was a vision. He could not believe it was true. You are amazed, you are overwhelmed, you are faint-hearted with fear at the intense delight of pardon, being half afraid it cannot be so. That such a wretch as you can really be passed by and your iniquities blotted out for ever and ever—oh, it does make you fear with a holy, reverential fear.

Now, are there any of God's people here to-night who are afraid they do not fear God enough? If you want to revive your fear of God and have it deepened, believe in your pardon. Believe that you are forgiven, prize the forgiveness, cling to the cross. Know that your sins are blotted out, and all that sweet fear of God, by which is meant the whole of piety, will abound in your soul. Some think it would be a good way of deepening their faith to begin to question whether they are Christians.

Unbelief does not heal anybody. It is faith that heals. Believe, then, come what may, believe thou in Christ, though thy sins rage and roar; believe thou in Christ, though the devil tell thee thou art damned. Though hell seem to open to thee, yet believe thou in thy pardon through the precious blood, and be not staggered at the promise. And thou shalt feel thyself filled with a holy fear and joy and peace and love and zeal and burning desire to serve him who has done all this for thee.

"There is forgiveness with thee, that thou mayest be feared." I say unto thee, believe in Jesus Christ, in the name of Jesus of Nazareth. I say unto you unbelieving ones, Believe in him now. Arise, take up thy bed and walk. I, that have no power in myself, yet speaking in my Master's name, know that his power will go with his gospel and his Word shall not return unto him void. Believe and live. God bless you, for Jesus' sake. Amen.—C. H. Spurgeon.

Dear Restitution:

Bro. John Foore, of Parson, Kansas, according to appointment, conducted our annual meeting at Bluch, Mo., beginning on the 17th day of Aug., and ending on the 24th. Preached 16 discourses and baptized 2 into the all-saving name. Our meetings was well attended from start to finish, good order, and I am proud to tell we had good singing. The little flock at this place was greatly benefitted by the refreshing showers of spiritual food. Our worst enemies to the faith were there eagerly listening to catch every word that fell from the lips of the great Kansas preacher, and no wonder for he is so earnest and zealous in his great mission to preach the Word, that the most careless becomes interested. Such a talented speaker as Bro. Foore should be kept constantly in the field of labor. Our next annual meeting will be held in the light of the moon in August, 1900, the Lord willing. Words fail to express our thanks to a dear sister, in Port Byron, New York, who so kindly sent us $1.00 to help pay the expenses and burdens of our last meeting. Her name will ever be remembered by the brothers and sisters of this place.

Poetry.

The Divine Fatherhood.

"The Spirit of adoption, whereby we cry, Abba, Father." Rom. viii. 15.

My Father! O the holy joy.
The luxury of bliss,
That I can at thy feet employ
A name so dear as this!

My Father! when the griefs of time
Would fill me with despair,
I have the privilege sublime
To come to thee in prayer.

A bolder child for help divine
I humbly look to thee;
O Father, let thy heart be mine
Thy hand bestowed me.

It will, my Father! for the years
That I have known thy heart
Relieve all unbelieving fears,
And bid me call thee part.

The filial word I use in prayer
Is by adoption mine;
It is more than I could dare,
Without a right divine.

Father in Christ! thy name I sing,
For thy great grace to me,
That by thy Spirit, lands me bring
My heart in love to thee?

Pleasures of Contentment.

I have a rich neighbor that is always so busy that he has no leisure to laugh: the whole business of life is to get money, and more money, that he may still get more and more money. He is still drudging on, saying what Solomon says, "The diligent hand maketh rich." And it is true, indeed: but he considers not it is not in the power of riches to make a man happy: for it was wisely said by a man of great observation, "that there be as many miseries beyond riches as on this side of them." And yet heaven deliver us from pinching poverty, and grant that, having a competency, we may be content and thankful. Let us not repine, or so much as think the gifts of God unequally dealt, if we see another hound with riches, when, as God knows, the cares that are the keys that keep those riches hung often so heavily at the rich man's girdle, that they clog him with weary days and restless nights, even when others sleep quietly. We see but the outside of the rich man's happiness: few consider him to be like the silk-worm, that, when she seems to play, is at the same time spinning her own bowels, and consuming herself. And this many rich men do, loading themselves with corroding cares to keep what they have already got. Let us, therefore, be thankful for health and competency, and above all for a quiet conscience.—Izaak Walton.

"Eternal life is a matter of promise; it is promised only to true believers; it is hid in Christ, and is only obtainable by the dead and living at his appearing.

The Gospel of the Kingdom, an 8 page, double column tract, sold formerly at 10 cents a dozen.

Early Lessons, suitable for old and young, 30 pages, sold formerly for 10 cents a copy.

These works are excellent for use by those who wish to do missionary labor, and we offer them at such a low price that they should be out in a short time. Bro. Jones had large editions of these tracts printed, and by death suddenly, and his Widow being in feeble health, we have undertaken the task of selling them. Her income is quite restricted, and all that can be gotten out of the tracts goes to her after expenses are paid. When you buy these tracts you [illegible] several times the worth of your money, and also aid a worthy Sister, who will thank you for it.

Assorted package 30 cents per pound. Gospel of the Kingdom, alone at 25 cents per pound.

The Gospel of the Kingdom.

Advocated in a series of Ten Discourses. A Volume of 283 pages, cloth 25 cents, leather bound, embossed, and gilt edges, $1.00. By Wiley Jones. This book is so well known that it is only necessary to announce that it is for sale, to insure a market for it. We have undertaken to dispose of these books for the Widow of our lamented Brother Jones, and while getting them at this low price, you at the same time will help Sister Jones to much-needed money.

Popular Lectures by M. Joblin.

Brethren and Sisters, Have you loved ones who think sincerity will save them? Have you friends who think they worship acceptably while ignorant of God's promises? Have you acquaintances with false hopes of heaven, or who believe themselves immortal by nature, or who think their sins are forgiven, although they are ignorant of the Law of Pardon, or who have no use for a God who consigns sinners to Eternal Torment, and are ignorant of Jehovah's beneficent purpose to fill the earth with his glory and bestow Eternal Life upon believers of the Gospel, so they can enjoy it for ever? If so, send for Popular Lectures by Bro. Joblin, entitled—"The Kingdom of God;" "Old Mother Earth to Be Born Again;" "Strangers from the Covenants of Promise;" "Vain Worship" "No Immortality Out of Christ;" "Hope Begotten by the Resurrection of Christ;" "God's Love and Solicitude for Mankind;" and "What Shall We Do to be Saved?"

All persons addressing us should give their name, postoffice, county and state, plainly and distinctly.

All letters should be addressed to "The Restitution, Plymouth, Marshall, Co., Ind."

Remittances should be sent by bank draft, postoffice money order, or registered letter. Money sent in either of the above ways is at our risk, money sent loose in letters is at the risk of the sender. It is folly to think that you can fold bills in a letter so that no one can tell it, for one who handles much mail matter can almost invariably tell a letter with money in it. Take warning and send safely.

All remittances should be made payable to the order of "The Restitution."

We cannot hold ourselves responsible for the return of manuscripts. Authors should preserve a copy for themselves.

In ordering books or tracts get the latest copy of the paper you have and order only what you see advertised in that.

When desiring a change of address, give both your old and new address.

By complying strictly with the above you will save us much annoyance, and your order will be much more promptly attended to.

Poetry.

After Toil Cometh Rest.

After seed-time the harvest appears;
After the toiling and hoping and waiting
After endurance that knows no abating,
The husbandman, shrewd for his labor and cares,
Taketh his rest.

After the darkness the sunlight appears;
After the tempest and drifting and blowing;
After the seeking and weeping and rowing,
Rejoiceth the mariner's heart, as he nears
His haven of rest.

After the battle, the victory won;
After the hardship and dangers and cramping;
After the weariness, resting, and tramping,
The soldier's brave heart turns again to his home,
Seeking his rest.

After life's toils there cometh repose;
After its changes and trials are ended—
Its hopes and its fears, alternately blended—
The weary one sleepeth—an end to his woes—
The tomb giveth rest.

After the cross there cometh the crown,
After temptation and conflict and sighing
Over the loved and the lost in the land of the dying,
Christian, for thee, when thy labor is done,
There remaineth a rest.

The Restitution.

"The Restitution of all things Which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his Holy Prophets."

VOLUME XLVIII. PLYMOUTH, INDIANA, OCTOBER 4, 1899. NUMBER 37.

The Restitution.

THE RESTITUTION advocates the final "restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint-heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ, and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for remission of sins, pre-requisites of the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

PINE WOODS BIBLE CLASS.

Teacher. I have thought much with regard to the difference between modern and anciently inspired people, as developed by the investigation between Miss Gordon and Mr. Williams. I feel confident that if Jesus were in our place, he would not profess Holy Spirit inspiration, and teach contrary to the writings of holy men of old, who wrote as they were moved by the Holy Spirit. It is our pleasure to listen to a continuance of these reports.

Mr. Williams. I wish to tell you something about Mrs. Surcutt, an Australian Evangelist, who relies upon special Spirit guidance outside of the Bible. Last Wednesday, at Willard Hall noon meeting, Chicago, Ill., she spoke about the birth of water and of Spirit, from John iii. She spiritualized the birth of water to mean, a cleansing by means of the Word. She quoted to sustain her theory, "You are clean through the Word which I have spoken unto you." "How shall a young man cleanse his way, by taking heed according to thy Word," etc.; the cleansing was through the Word, independent of water. She reasoned away the water, but accepted the birth of the Spirit, without any attempt to reason it away, but explained it as meaning conversion. Now, Miss Gordon, what do you think about it?

Miss Gordon. If this Evangelist really did speak under Holy Spirit guidance, she would not talk contrary to the Holy Spirit's teaching, as found upon the Sacred Page. The reception of the Word does not take the place of the birth of water, but precedes it.

Mr. Williams. Can you give some Bible samples?

Miss Gordon. Yes. See Acts ii. 41: "Then they that gladly RECEIVED his WORD were baptized." Not until the reception of the Word, did they receive baptism—the birth of water.

See Acts xviii. 8: "Many Corinthians HEARING, (the Word) believed, and were baptized"—born of water.

Mark xvi.: "He that BELIEVETH (the Word—gospel) and is baptized (born of water) shall be saved."

Acts viii. "When they BELIEVED Philip preaching the things concerning the kingdom of God and the name of Jesus Christ, they were BAPTIZED, (born of water) both men and women." Belief of the Word (gospel) must always come BEFORE baptism—born of water; and never takes the place of the birth of water.

"Ye must be born again." To be born again is to RE-generate, or bring to birth again. See Titus iii. 5: "He saved us by the WASHING OF REGENERATION, (born of water—baptism) and renewing of the Holy Ghost."

Mr. Williams. That which proceeds from a new birth is a new life. Is a new life supposed to result from the birth of water?

Miss Gordon. Yes. See Rom. vi. 4: "Therefore we are BURIED with him in BAPTISM into death, that like as Christ was raised up from the dead by the glory of the Father, even so we also should walk in NEWNESS OF LIFE."

We further read: "If any man be IN CHRIST he is a NEW CREATURE."

Mr. Williams. I notice that the new creature is conditioned upon being "IN Christ." Who are "In Christ?"

Miss Gordon. See Gal. iii. 27: "For as many of you as have been BAPTIZED into Christ, (born of water) have put on Christ." Those who are subjects of this new birth, are further spoken of as "NEW BORN BABES," or "NEW CREATURES."

Jesus has ordained that the birth of water, and of Spirit is ABSOLUTELY ESSENTIAL to a part in God's kingdom, and oh how dangerous, and how sad it is, when a teacher comes along, and professes to teach under the SPECIAL guiding power of God's Holy Spirit, and interprets one of these emphatic statements of essentials to salvation, and of an inheritance in God's kingdom to mean something different from what Jesus said. In this way many thousands of people fail to accomplish what he has declared as essential to be done. Great responsibility must attach to teachers who even innocently deceive the people. Before attempting to teach others the Word, they should become learned in the Sacred Oracles. The result is, as the Scriptures said: "the blind lead the the blind, and both fall into the same ditch." This trusting some outside influence to teach them the Word is deceptive. It could not be God's Holy Spirit which leads them to teach contrary to the Holy Bible. Jesus said "Search the Scriptures," and those who would do as Jesus advised, would heed his direction.

Mr. Williams. I know the pardon of sin is an essential to salvation, no one can be saved in sin. These Willard Hall people tell those who wish to get rid of sin, to hold up their hands for prayer, and come down to the front, and sincerely cry out, "God be merciful to me a sinner," and then you are washed white as snow, How is this Miss Gordon?

Miss Gordon. God tells us just what to do, but I never read of any such performance, as above described.

Mr. Williams. What do you find?

Miss Gordon. See Acts ii. 3: The convicted thousands on the day of Pentecost were told to "repent and be baptized, (be born of water) for the remission of sins." You can see one reason at least by this, that unless a person is born of water and the Spirit, he cannot enter the kingdom, because the birth of water is the divinely appointed medium for the REMISSION OF SINS. A human device will not answer. Let me give you another instance, see Acts xxii. 16: "And now, why tarriest thou? Arise, and be baptized (be born of water) and WASH AWAY THY SINS, calling on the name of the Lord." Jesus, himself commissioned his disciples to go into all the world and preach the gospel, and say unto them, "He that BELIEVETH and is BAPTIZED (born of water) shall be saved."

Mr. Williams. I learn from others, who attend these Willard Hall noon meetings, that many earnest seekers after salvation come there, and ask the way to be saved, and these teachers (who claim to be filled with the guiding power of the Holy Ghost) never mention Christ's direction to be baptized (born of water) "for the remission of sins." Jesus and his apostles always insisted upon faith and obedience as essential to the pardon of sin, which these people completely ignore in directing people how to be saved. They do not have a particle of use for the CHRIST METHOD, it is as completely set aside as though Peter filled with the Holy Spirit from that memorable outpouring on Pentecost, had never told heart-pricked sinners to "REPENT and be BAPTIZED every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ for the REMISSION OF SINS."

If any one wants the dictation of the Holy Spirit, as to how sins are to be pardoned, the above was what the Holy Spirit inspired Peter to proclaim to sinners who agonized to have their sins forgiven.

The complete substitution of the human, for the Divine method of pardon of sin, is good evidence that God's Holy Spirit is not guiding them into all truth, as they claim. If it was guiding them, they would harmonize with what the Holy Spirit revealed on Pentecost, and on other occasions.

Miss Gordon. The method of dealing sinners how to be saved, at Willard Hall, is not local to that place by any means, you will find it in vogue in almost any place. The Apostle told us that in the last days, that "the time will come when they will not endure sound doctrine, but after their own lusts shall heap to themselves teachers, having itching ears; and they shall TURN AWAY THEIR EARS from THE TRUTH, and shall be turned unto fables."

This time has surely come because the vast majority of those calling themselves Christians, are "turned unto" the fables of a sky-kingdom for immortal souls, and practice ruotism in place of baptism. How needful it is to stand close by God's Word, in place of delusive influences. Don't you think so, Miss Gordon?

Miss Gordon. You are right, Mr. Williams. Now, while you have been talking so earnestly and Scripturally about baptism, etc., for the remission of sins, I have been thinking hard.

Mr. Williams. What about?

Miss Gordon. About you.

Mr. Williams. Why, what about me?

Miss Gordon. Well, today is just two years since I first met you at your house, when your daughter Ruth was so very sick, and I have been thinking of the changes since then. Your daughter is now well, and is fast growing into a lovely young woman. And again, you have been blessed financially since then; you hold a better position than you then had in the coal mines. You have also been studying the Scriptures considerably since then, and have made large advances in Bible knowledge. Don't you think our Heavenly Father's sweet benediction is upon you?

Mr. Williams. I do, I have been wonderfully blessed. I praise his holy name for his marvelous kindness.

Miss Gordon. Don't you think Jesus would say unto you, "If you love me, keep my commandments?" And if you would do as Jesus would do, were he in your place, you must keep his commandments?

Mr. Williams. I don't knowingly omit any. I may not keep them as perfectly as I expect I will, when I grow stronger.

Miss Gordon. Well, let me come a little closer. The message comes to you, as it did unto others of old: "And now why tarriest thou? Arise, and be baptized; and wash away thy sins, calling on the name of the Lord."

Mr. Williams. I respond, Amen. I have often thought of the matter, and I thought I would go forward at such and such a time, then something else would come into my mind, that I wished to examine First, and so I have put it off from time to time, but I believe I am ready now. How shall I make application?

Miss Gordon. "With the mouth confession is made unto salvation;" you had better come to the church and make confession of faith, either orally, or by writing. Please yourself in the matter. May God bless you.

Mr. Williams. I think I will write it out, won't you come down to our house on Friday night, I would like you to read it, before I submit it to the church?

Miss Gordon. I will. I will be there along about six o'clock.

Mr. Williams. Now, Miss Gordon, I want to ask you a question about the gospel. I was conversing a short time since with my old friend Browning, and he maintained that there were two gospels, viz: The gospel of the kingdom, and the three-fact-gospel, usually preached by the Christian Church people,—the death, burial, and resurrection of Jesus, based upon 1 Cor. xv. 1-4.

Miss Gordon. That is a mistake, the Bible knows but ONE saving faith and hope of the gospel. Since the death, burial and resurrection of Jesus became facts, they have inseparably been connected with the message of the kingdom as constituting the way of salvation.

Read Acts xxviii. 23: "And when they had appointed him a day, there came many to him in his lodging; to whom he expounded and testified the kingdom of God, persuading them concerning Jesus, both out of the law of Moses, and the prophets, from morning till evening. And some believed the things which were spoken, and some believed not."

See also verses 30, 31: "And Paul dwelt two whole years in his own hired house, and received all that came in unto him, preaching the kingdom of God, and teaching those things which concern the Lord Jesus Christ, with all confidence, no man forbidding him."

With regard to his auditors he says: "Their ears are dull of hearing, and their eyes have they closed; (what for?) lest they should see with their eyes, and UNDERSTAND with their heart, (mind), and should BE CONVERTED, and I should HEAL (save) them."

In view of this, what did he resolve to do? See verse 28: "Be it known therefore unto you, that THE SALVATION OF GOD ("preaching the kingdom of God, and teaching those things which concern the Lord Jesus") is sent unto the Gentiles, and they will hear it." That means us—the Gentiles—to which "the salvation of God" is sent, viz: "preaching the kingdom of God, AND teaching those things which concern the Lord Jesus." No one is authorized to mutilate "the salvation of God" by separating "those things which concern the Lord Jesus" from "the kingdom of God." This harmonizes with Acts viii. 12: "When they believed Philip preaching the things concerning the kingdom of God, AND the name of Jesus Christ, they were baptized, both men and women." The Christian Church takes the liberty to separate "the kingdom of God" from "those things which concern the Lord Jesus Christ," and by that means pervert the one saving gospel.

It is also easy to show that they do not even believe that Jesus died, was buried, and rose again. They do not hesitate to affirm that what they call the immortal soul of Jesus, was the real Jesus, the body they say was merely an abode in which Jesus dwelt, and the very day he was crucified he (Jesus) went right away to Paradise, and the body or house in which Jesus lived, was put in Joseph's new tomb, but Jesus himself was not there, he was in Paradise. This being the case, Jesus NEVER DIED, and they could not bury him, because he was still alive in Paradise, and not having been buried, there would be no resurrection. Hence, they nullify their own perverted gospel.

W. H. WILSON.

A Letter to a Friend

To Mr. G. Dear Sir:

I received not long since a few tracts in favor of Universalism which may have been sent by you as your name was on the envelope in which they were inclosed. If I am mistaken in the person, please excuse. I read the tracts carefully in order to learn the arguments in favor of Universalism and found they were not in harmony with the plain teaching of the Bible. Neither is the popular religious teaching in harmony with that blessed Book. Some of the most important errors taught at the present time are based upon a wrong view of the origin, nature and destiny of man.

The Bible teaches that the first man was formed out of the dust of the ground, and therefore was of the earth. See Gen. ii. 7; 1 Cor. xv. 47. Notice the statement, it does not say that man was made out of some other material and a house was made out of the ground for him to live in. No, no. In order to cause him to live after thus formed, God breathed into his nostrils the breath of life, and he (the man whom he had made out of the ground) became a living soul, (or person). After thus made, God put him and his mate in the Garden of Eden, with the privilege of eating the fruit of all of the trees except one. The history shows they did partake of it and thereby became subject to death. And God explains this death to be a returning to the ground from whence they were taken. See Gen. iii. 19; Rom. v. 12; 1 Cor. xv. 21, 22.

From the foregoing testimony (for ought we know to the contrary) if God had not provided a plan of redemption, man after thus returning to the dust would never live again. But man is not left without hope to perish, for "God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten Son that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life." From the above statement we discover that in order to obtain everlasting life, we must comply with the conditions, viz., believe on the Son of God; or as stated in an another place, to "hear him in all things whatsoever he would say to us, and those who would not hear him should be destroyed." Acts iii. 23. He spake as never man spake, his Word was authoritative. He said to certain ones, "Except ye repent, ye shall perish." Luke xiii. 3. He told those unbelieving Jews that they should die in their sins, and where he went they could not come. Just before he ascended up to heaven he gave commandments unto the Apostles, to go into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature, stating that he that believeth and is baptized shall be saved, and he that believeth not shall be condemned. Mark xvi. 16. We are told that without faith it is impossible to please God. Heb. xi. 16.

Again, we are told, "All men have not faith," therefore all men do not please him. We are told also that Jesus came to his own and his own received him not, but to as many as did receive him, to them gave he power to become the sons of God. Again, we are told, "It pleased God through the foolishness of preaching to save them that believe." Well, what will be the end of those who know not God, and obey not the gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ?

Paul says they shall be punished with everlasting destruction from the presence of the Lord and the glory of his power. 2 Thes. i. 9, 10. Paul said again in Rom. vi. 23, "The wages of sin is death." What is death? Neither Universalism nor endless torment. But extinction of life, so says Webster in harmony with the Bible. The wicked are always represented in the Bible, like unto combustible matter as chaff, dry branches, tares, stubble, bad fish, etc.

David said "The ungodly shall not stand in the judgment, but shall be like the chaff which the wind driveth away." Again, John the Baptist represented them as chaff, which he said Christ would burn up with unquenchable fire. Again, Christ represented them as tares to be gathered out from amongst the wheat to be cast into the fire (not to be converted into wheat but) to be burned. Again they are compared to bad fish (not to be converted into good ones but) to be cast away.

David said in Psa. xxxvii. 20. "But the wicked shall perish. They shall be as the fat of lambs; they shall consume away into smoke."

Time would fail me to put forth all the testimony on this important subject. Paul says God has appointed a day in which he will judge the world in righteousness by his Son, having committed all judgment unto him. Again, Paul said we must all appear before the judgment seat of Christ to receive a reward according to the deeds done in the body, whether they be good or bad. 2 Cor. v. 10. In the 25th chapter of Matthew we have a description of the judgment in which the judge says to them on the left hand, "Depart ye cursed into everlasting fire, prepared for the devil and his angels;" and these go away into everlasting punishment.

Paul in 2 Thes. i. represents this punishment as being destruction. One of the definitions of destruction as given by Webster is "annihilation," which is in harmony with the Bible. Malachi says 4th chapter 1st verse, "For behold the day cometh that shall burn as an oven, when all the proud and all that do wickedly shall be stubble and the day that cometh shall burn them up, saith the Lord of hosts, that it shall leave them neither root nor branch." And in the 3rd verse it is said, "They shall be ashes under the soles of the righteous feet in the day that I shall do this, saith the Lord of Hosts."

In conclusion I would ask, Do these Scriptural statements which I have quoted to you sound like Universalism? Nay, verily, there is as much difference as there is between darkness and light, or between truth and error. O that we may be amongst that number to whom Jesus will say, "Come ye blessed of my Father, inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world, when the meek will inherit the earth and delight in the abundance of peace. Psa. xxxvii. Matt. v. 5; Dan. vii. 27.

I will close with love to all, hoping you may be benefitted by what I have written, being conscious that I have spoken the Word of the Lord.

Farewell, may God bless you,

P. H. BOYK.

The Twisting and Turning Game.

When a text of Scripture comes smack up against some men's theories, all they have to do is to resort to the twisting and turning game in order to remove the most serious objections in their way. Thus lending the Bible to suit their theories, instead of shaping their theories to harmonize with the Bible. By this mode of operation almost any false theory can be made to appear plausible. This twisting and turning business has been going on for many years, it is no new device.

Some quote only a part of a verse, leaving out the rest, in order to sustain their theory; this is as unfair as the twisting and turning business. Thus by so doing we can prove from the Bible that there is no God, when if the whole verse is quoted it would place the right construction upon it, thus: "The fool has said in his heart there is no God." When all the verse is quoted there can be no such idea conveyed as that there is no God. When any man's theory is so hard pushed as to be obliged to resort to such underhand ways to prove it true, it is time for them to order a halt and make a new start in another direction. The way some do is to form a theory, then go to work and make the Bible prove it. He who teaches false doctrines is a deceiver. See 3 John iii. There are those who would, if possible deceive the very elect. Let every one carefully search the Scriptures for himself. Woe is unto those who seek to build up new sects by the introduction of false doctrines, thus dividing the flock of God, and scattering instead of uniting them. "Preach the Word."—*J. B. Effectual Prayer.

An arrow, if it be drawn up a little way, goes not far; but if it be pulled up to the head, it flies swiftly and pierces deep. Thus prayer, if it be only dribbled forth from careless lips, falls at our feet. It is the strength of ejaculation and strong desire which sends it to heaven and makes it pierce the clouds. It is not the arithmetic of our prayers, how many there are; nor the rhetoric of our prayers, how eloquent they be; nor the geometry of our prayers, how long they be; nor the music of our prayers, how sweet our voice may be; nor the logic of our prayers, how argumentative they may be; nor the method of our prayers, how orderly they may be; nor even the divinity of our prayers, how good the doctrine may be—which God cares for. He looks not for the horny knees which James is said to have had through the assiduity of prayer! We might be like Bartholomew, who is said to have had a hundred prayers for the morning and as many for the evening, and all might be of no avail. Fervency of spirit is that which availeth much.—Bishop Hall.

Are You One of Them?

By examining our list we find there are between 500 and 600 people whose time has expired. Some only a few months and others some years. If each one of you who are thus owing us would go to the office right now and send the money due us, we would have over a thousand dollars with which to push forward our work.

Brothers and Sisters, we need this money very much. We have earned it—it is ours—and if you do not send it to us, but use it on self, you are simply spending our money. It is not yours—it is ours. Were we in position to do so we would gladly lend you the amount, but the fact is we have bills to pay and cannot lend it to you longer. We ask you kindly and in the spirit of love and justice, to at once send us what you owe us. If you cannot spare it all now, then send part of it, and the balance after awhile. Please do not neglect this, but get a dollar and send to us right away today. We thank you in advance for the favor, and assure you we appreciate it very much.

IF we want to do God a service, we must do it in his way, or it will not be acceptable.

"TRYING providences are doubtless intended to be merciful preventives or gracious restoratives."

NEVER fear people will think you are fallible; that is just what you are, whether you think so or not.

HE whose prerogative it is to command us, promises us strength to perform; and he giveth liberally too.

DARE to change your mind, confess your error, and alter your conduct, when you are convinced you are wrong. This is both manly and Scriptural.

THE condition of affairs in South Africa is by no means bettered. It is now simply a waiting for an answer, and many think the Boers will answer by beginning hostilities.

IF cares flow in from every quarter we are invited to cast them all upon the Lord, and asks what reason we have to distrust him? Did we ever know his Word to fail?

DEAR Sister, just a word to the wise is sufficient. Chastened sorrow leads to closer intercourse with God, but we are persuaded that inordinate grief invariably hinders devotion.

THE Christian Advocate says, "Apathy is the disease which has gotten hold of the Church life. Unless we besir ourselves we will perish, and will deserve to perish. When war and greed, frolic and fun, fraternity and secularism become of more consequence in popular thought than redemption, salvation, peace, and God, it is about time for the very stones to cry out warnings of danger."

IN answer to the question "How can I quit the use of tobacco?" we would say we have had literally no experience. We never quit it, because we never began with it. I know of one in this city, nearly, if not quite threescore years and ten, who quit after being many years a slave to the filthy habit. When he had no well grounded hope of life beyond the grave it no doubt soothed his troubled mind in the absence of something better, and could not be induced to give it up, but in the Providence of God he was directed to a place where he found a perfect cure for this and all other evil habits. It was the Gospel of the Grace of God. He was made clean inside and out—morally and physically cleaned. The "HOW" about his quitting was this: He just quit and left the consequences with God, not daring to defile his Temple. Try this plan.

Salvation: What is it?

We are constantly hearing something about salvation when among religionists. And we think that those who use that word most frequently would be most puzzled to explain what they mean by it,—and still more puzzled if they had to give a Scriptural exposition of the term. Lexicographers tell us that salvation is the act of saving. This may satisfy a few unreasoning people, perhaps, who do not care to know the why or wherefore of things; but we think there are others who would like to know how it happens that man needs to be saved; would like to know ails them before they whatever; and as we consider this a wise course to adopt we will attempt to crowd into one article an epitome of the whole matter, beginning at the point of time when there was no man.

The strata of earth proves that it was made for just such a creature as man is, because in its bowels are vast stores of iron, copper, tin, zinc, silver, gold, lead, oil and coal and a great many other things that man has found a use for; and its soil produces just what he needs to sustain him, and it was not till the earth was fitted up just to suit such a creature that he was introduced. He came just at the right time, but

WHERE DID HE COME FROM?

Only God who made him could answer that question. Happily he has done this. Gen. ii. 7 says he was formed of the dust of the ground, Gen. iii 19 reaffirms this in the following words addressed to Adam, "In the sweat of thy face shalt thou (Adam) eat bread, till thou return unto the ground, for out of it wast thou taken; for dust thou art, and unto dust shalt thou return." This shows where he came from,—what he was made of, and what would become of him. Before we go further, note

1. There was no man till he was formed of dust.

2. God being true, only dust entered into man's composition.

3. After man's formation from dust, he was caused to live. This caused his eyes to see, his ears to hear, his hands to handle, his brain to think, remember, calculate, his tongue to taste and speak,—in fact, to do all we see him do. But what caused him to perform all these functions? Ans:—

God being true, The Breath of lives was the cause,—the only cause, as proven by Psa. civ. 29. It says, "Thou takest away their breath, they die, and return to their dust. Simply deprived of what first gave them life, and they are unmade. There was no man before he was made—there is no man after he is unmade. But

WHY WAS MAN UNMADE?

Not because he was not perfectly formed. He was perfectly formed, and his whole organism worked harmoniously. It was a very good organism. But an exquisite physical organism was not what he was formed for. The Creator is a MORAL being;—a holy being; a righteous being,—a God of love and truth, and justice. And although Jesus said the flesh "profiteth nothing," God had so organized the flesh of man capable of developing a character in harmony with his own —a godly character,—a moral character. He had the faculty of loving God, —reverencing him, believing him, and obeying him. God's object in the formation of man as he did, was the development of character resembling his own. The faculties man was endowed with, mentioned above, were for this purpose, and just adapted to this purpose. Here we ask the reader to pause. Before he goes any further we want him to realize the difference between the mechanical action of a machine that is what it was intended to do, and a living, moral organism that is capable of choosing the right and rejecting the wrong. Such a creature man was. He was capable of choosing his own course and permitted to choose it, and did choose it.

OBLIGED TO DO

A MORAL CHARACTER

could be developed in no other way. A man without a will of his own could develop no character of his own, and of necessity would be only a living machine to be set in motion and obliged to do just so, and in no sense responsible for his conduct, and therefore could be amenable to no law, nor rewarded nor punished on account of it. Man under those conditions would be on a level with the brute creation, not being eligible to glory, honor and immortality.

But, as we have shown that man so fearfully and wonderfully made was afterward sentenced to be unmade, and returned to the ground he was taken out of, we must now show the

REASON WHY

this was done? We have referred to the irresponsibility of the brute, and the responsibility of the man, and now we will show that God treated him as personally responsible for his actions. He gave him one law to test him. He was told he could eat of every tree of the garden except one, "for in the day he ate of that he should die, surely die." He ate of it after this fair warning of the consequences, and the words, "Dust thou art, and unto dust shalt thou return," is the sentence of the death threatened him. God's own explanation of death, what men say to the contrary notwithstanding. Read carefully, half a dozen times, Genesis, second and third chapters. And then we will have a word to say respecting

THE TREE OF LIFE,

mentioned Gen. iii. 22-24; and Gen. ii. 9. In this last reference it is seen that a distinction is made between the trees good for food and the two others, named, viz., "the tree of life," and "the tree of knowledge of good and evil." They had eaten of the forbidden tree, and were sinners, and had been sentenced to death as such. But the sentence was suspended, not executed on the spot because God determined to give man another opportunity. A remote promise of a Redeemer in the person of the Woman's Seed had been made, see Gen. iii. 15, and the skins with which the Lord covered their nakedness are understood to have been obtained from animals slain as symbols of the Great Sacrifice, the Woman's Seed would in the distant future make.—so that if they believed the promise of him, they could by faith take him as the real sin-covering. Suspension of the execution gave ample opportunity to live a life of faith and obedience to God. Justification from sin, could only be by faith. Before they sinned they might have taken of the tree of life in the Garden, but having sinned, Gen. iii. 22-24 shows they were then means redemption from sin and death. And Paul in 1 Cor. xv. 12-22, 20-58 shows in a marvelous argument that future life was an unsolved problem till Christ himself was raised, —and declares that those who had died in Christ would have perished if Christ had not been raised. Secondly, salvation is to be crowned with life and glory in the kingdom of God on earth. All God's promises of this life after death to inherit the kingdom of God has been gospel all down the ages. The germinal promise, or first gospel sermon being the promise of the Woman's Seed to bruise the Serpent's head.

DRIVEN AWAY FROM IT

LEST they eat of that also and become immortal in sin,—so that no Savior could save them. In this way, if they failed of salvation by the Savior they would at last go to dust and stay there, never be anything but dust. On the other hand, if they laid hold of the hope set before them, it would not prevent their dying, but the Redeemer would redeem them from death, as Job believed he would, see Job xix. 23-26, and as the Redeemer himself said he would, John v. 28, 29, being, as he declared John xi. 25, the resurrection and the life; and will not fail to do what he pledges himself to do in John vi. 39, 40, raise them up at the last day.

SALVATION

THE SECOND CHAPTER

of Redemption's plan consisted of the covenant to Abraham and Christ, Gen. xii. 1-7; xiii. 14-17. And Galatians iii. 16, and repeated to Isaac and Jacob and wonderfully enlarged to David 2 Sam. vii. 12-16, and xxiii. 5-5, and Psa. lxxxix. These comprise what Paul calls the covenants of promise, Eph. ii. 12, and shows that those who are strangers to them are Godless, Christless, and hopeless. And Peter says of these same promises 2 Peter I. 4 that they are exceeding great and precious, and that it is by these we can be made partakers of Divine Nature. This furnishes infallible evidence that those covenants are the foundations of the gospel; and as Paul in Eph. iv. 4 says there is only one hope, and then tells us what was, viz., "the hope of the promises made of God unto our fathers, (Abraham, Isaac, Jacob and David). it becomes a serious question for every one, "Am I hoping for the promises Paul hoped for? If not, and as there is but one hope, what will become of me? And if it be added that Christ was made a curse for us that the blessing of Abraham might come on the Gentiles, Gal iii. 14, it becomes very serious, indeed. The promise of the land for God's kingdom is in that covenant, the King of that kingdom is nominated in that covenant, the throne is also promised in it, and the capital city, and the rulers and their subjects, and blessings of all nations is assured.

HIS OWN HOPE

FOLLOWING THIS

comes Jesus to tell us that that kingdom of God was surely coming, and commanding repentance in view of its coming, and making it known that he was going to a far country to receive that kingdom, and that he would return and take his seat upon its throne of glory, and invite all who are to be blessed of the Father to come and inherit the kingdom prepared for them from the foundation of the world, see Matt. xxv. 34. and so inherit what he had said in his Sermon on the Mount, "Blessed are the meek, for they shall inherit, (not heaven above; the earth,"—and further proof that they will is found in Rev. v. 9, 10 and other places. But we must begin once more,—the Covenant to Abraham, all will see, includes a resurrection to life or else he could never realize what was promised him. Heb. xi. 8-35 proves that Abraham and all the faithful away back there never expected to realize in mortal life what God promises them. V. 8 shows the land he lived as a stranger should AFTER THAT be his inheritance—in resurrection life, see v. 35. But that covenant was only typically confirmed with the blood of beasts. It required the spotless blood of the woman's Seed, the Seed of Abraham and Son of God to confirm it and bring it into force. And so he said at the last supper. "This is my blood of the New Covenant shed for you." This New Covenant is the Everlasting Covenant because it covenants everlasting life after death, and the kingdom which shall never end, with all its attendant glory.

AWAY BACK

IT COULD NOT GIVE LIFE

after death till brought into force by the death of Christ,—and by reference to Hebrews xiii. 20 he was the first fruits from the dead, the first-born among many brethren, was himself raised from the dead through the blood of the Everlasting Covenant which he shed. Yes; it says "the God of Peace brought again from the dead our Lord Jesus, that Great Shepherd of the sheep, through the blood of the Everlasting Covenant." And now dear reader, do you want to share

THE BLESSINGS OF ABRAHAM

and his Seed, the Christ? Do you want to live and reign as a King and Priest with Christ, and sit with him upon his throne, Rev. iii. 21, and have power over the nations as he promised in Rev. ii. 26, 27, when he possesses what Gabriel promised his mother, Luke i. 32, at his return to rebuild David's tabernacle as is foretold of him Amos ix. 11, 12 and Acts xv. 16, 17, and possess the kingdom under the whole heaven, for ever, even for ever and ever, Dan. vii. 18 and 27. Do you want all this blessedness? If so you must accept all the promises of it as gospel, in connection with the offices and work of Christ, as his sacrifice in our behalf, his being raised from the dead for our Justification,—his office of Mediator for all God's children at the court of heaven, and then renounce sin, and be baptized into Christ's death in order to obtain his name as your sin-covering, then live Godly while you live in the flesh, and ever be looking for that blessed hope, his glorious appearing, and all will be well.

The Hope of the Gospel.

Let us look at Paul's language, Acts xxiii. 6, "But when Paul perceived that the one part were Sadducees, and the other Pharisees, he cried out in the council. Men and brethren, I am a Pharisee, the son of a Pharisee: of the hope and resurrection of the dead I am called in question."

Then truly, he preached the resurrection of the dead, as the gospel hope unless he was called in question for something he did not preach. In Acts xxvi. 6–8. he says, "And now I stand and am judged for the hope of the promise made of God unto our fathers: unto which promise our twelve tribes, instantly serving God day and night, hope to come; for which hope's sake, King Agrippa, I am accused of the Jews. Why should it be thought a thing incredible with you that God should raise the dead?"

Here is seen the burden and hope of apostolic preaching. It is a future life, by a resurrection from the dead. He adds, verses 22 and 23, "Having therefore obtained help of God, I continue unto this day, witnessing both to small and great, saying none other things than those which the prophets and Moses did say should come. That Christ should suffer, and that he should rise from the dead, and should shew light unto the people, and to the Gentiles."

Not only is the resurrection the apostolic burden and hope, but he affirms the same things were the theme of the prophets and Moses; the hope is one. Not an intimation thus far of the notion of entering the holy of holies—heaven—at death, or at all; it is the resurrection. He has shown us that that was the hope of Israel, as well as the hope of the gospel, and in chapter xxviii. 20. in his bondage at Rome he says, "For the hope of Israel I am bound with this chain."

We will now see whether Paul with equal clearness states the hope of the gospel in his epistles. 1 Cor. xv. "Now if Christ be preached that he rose from the dead, how say some among you that there is no resurrection of the dead? But if there be no resurrection of the dead, then is Christ not risen. And if Christ be not risen, then is our preaching vain, and your faith is also vain. Yea, and we are found false witnesses of God; because we have testified of God that he raised up Christ; whom he raised not up, if so be that the dead rise not. For if the dead rise not, then is not Christ raised; and if Christ be not raised, your faith is vain; ye are yet in your sins. Then they also which are fallen asleep in Christ are perished. If in this life only we have hope in Christ, we are of all men most miserable.

That the apostle has reference to the hope of a future life by a resurrection, is clear from what he says in in verse 32 of the same chapter. "If after the manner of men I have fought with beasts at Ephesus, what advantageth it me, if the dead rise not? let us eat and drink; for tomorrow we die." Such a course would be folly indeed; rather let us eat and drink, if there is no resurrection: for tomorrow we die, and there is no hope beyond that. Such is the apostolic conclusion if there is no resurrection of the dead. This reasoning is both absurd and false, if he could or would go to heaven at death.

Again Paul says in Rom. viii. 23, after speaking of the groaning creation, "And not only they, but ourselves, also, which have the first fruit of the Spirit, even we ourselves groan within ourselves, waiting (to go to heaven at death? No, but) for the adoption, to-wit the redemption of our body." Not its dissolution at death. He adds, "For we are saved by hope; but hope that is seen is not hope; for what a man seeth, why doth he yet hope for? But if we hope for that we see not, then do we with patience wait for it."

What does the apostle affirm he and the Christians of his time were waiting for? Ans. "The redemption of our body; that is, for the coming of Christ from heaven, and the resurrection. This will be clearly seen by comparing what he says here with Paul, Phil. iii. 20, 21. "For our conversation is in heaven: from whence also we look for the Savior, the Lord Jesus Christ, who shall change our vile body, that it may be fashioned like unto his glorious body, according to the working whereby he is able even to subdue all things unto himself." Here is no ground for mistake or doubt. Paul was not expecting to go to heaven at death; nor at all; but he was looking for Christ to come from heaven—not when his vile body should go to corruption, but when the time should arrive for it to be fashioned like to Christ's glorious body, which is not till the resurrection. This is further confirmed by his language in the same chapter where he tells us how he labored and suffered, "if by any means I might attain unto the resurrection of the dead." How unlike all this is the common idea of an entrance into heaven. The hope of Paul is thus distinctly stated, and it is the gospel hope, and demonstrates that modern Christians are ignorant of what that hope is as the pagans themselves, in fact the theology of these days has substituted an immortal soul for or instead of Christ; and hence a hope of going to heaven at death instead of a resurrection from the dead at the last day, as Christ has promised.

A fatal mistake this, by which Christ is robbed and dishonored: while death is crowned Prince of Peace, and as the door into heaven. Christ however, declares himself to be the door, and affirms that those who climb up any other way are thieves and robbers.

He is the resurrection and the life; without him, and without that resurrection which he has promised there is no gospel hope of a future life or immortality. Let men beware how they attempt to approach the Holy Place, into which Jesus our High Priest has entered. That is no part of the work of a Christian, even to attempt an entrance into heaven at death or any other time, if they do not want to be slain, as under the Aaronic Priesthood.

JOHN POORE.

"The Web Begun, God Finds the Thread."

That means that if we begin work for God, in a sincere and prayerful way, he will find means whereby to carry it on. How many dear saints in the past have proven this to be so. Single-handed and without means, their souls have burned within them and they have started out to win. Through slush and mud, and dangerous marsh, they have ploughed their lonely way. Mountains have been climbed and oceans crossed. Through the desert there has been found a way and paths have been forced through the jungle. The club of the savage has not deterred, nor dread minions driven back.

In and out of the beautiful web has the flying shuttle been thrown, one weaver has dropped from the loom, only to have his place supplied by another. So all the long ages of the life of the Church, in this world, has the work gone on.

No fear may be felt in beginning the web of our lives for God. We may be slow of speech, or isolated or poor, or timid, and yet, God can make us a mighty power. Our strength is not in ourselves, it is all in him. The "shut in one" can pray, and bring showers of blessings on the church, reviving it through God's mercy and causing many converts to be added to its numbers. The isolated one can write and stir up his fellows to give to God's cause. No one so humble that he cannot begin the web, that is to be bright for eternity.

"The web begun God sends the thread." Mueller began his web, and it was woven. so far as he could weave. Miller began his by sounding the midnight cry, and lo, in multiplied looms, all over the world, have weaver's sprung up to ply the shuttle and fill in the shining threads. Storrs took up "the life and death question" in our country and wove for a time alone. How much opposition there was! What an awful heresy it looked like to the staid fathers and mothers of those early days! But the weaving went on. Into the web has gone millions of threads and God has sent them all.

The world begins to look at it now, and to think, "It is not such a bad piece of cloth after all!" So fresh and beautiful has it grown, sprinkled over with its delicate sprays of blossoms.

O hesitating ones, begin your webs! Commence your life-work now. Take up your cross and follow Christ. Go out into the world's vineyard and gather sheaves for God. Let not a moment go to waste. Give time and strength and money to save men. Daily not or life will be gone! Come on soldiers! for the work is great. You cannot sit down and be saved. We have been "hired" to work; let us be at it. The web will not grow while the weavers are asleep.

Conference Notice.

The Quarterly Conference of the Church of God, in Michigan, will convene (D. V.) at Millbrook, Mecosta Co., Michigan, on Friday, Oct. 6th, 1899, and continue over the following Sunday. All of like precious faith are cordially invited to attend. Brothers and sisters, we once more appeal to you to come and enjoy a short season with us talking over the things concerning Jesus and the resurrection, and the kingdom of God. Come with your hearts full of love and self-sacrifice, and we are sure you will not come in vain. Those coming by railroad from the north stop at Millbrook; from the south, at Blanchard, changing cars at Edmore for Blanchard. Those coming from south of Grand Rapids, change at Grand Rapids, take the Detroit Grand Rapids and Western train at 7.00 A. M., no other train connects at Edmore, only have to wait there about ten or fifteen minutes. Blanchard is about two miles from the place of meeting, at the Decker school house. Able speakers are expected to be present.

Yours for the truth,

Poetry.

New Every Morning.

Every day is a fresh beginning,
Every morn is the world made new,
You who are weary of sorrow and sinning,
Here is a beautiful hope for you
A hope for me and a hope for you.

All the past things are past and over,
The tasks are done and the tears are shed,
Yesterday's errors let yesterday cover:
Yesterday's wounds, which smarted and bled,
Are healed with the healing which night has shed.

Yesterday now is a part of forever,
Bound up in sheaf, which God holds tight,
With glad days, and sad days, and bad days which never
Shall visit us more with their bloom and their blight,
Their fulness of sun-shine or sorrowful night.

Let them go, since we cannot relieve them
Cannot undo and cause it alone;
God in his mercy receive, forgive them!
Only the new days are our own,
Today is ours and today alone.

Here are the skies all burnished brightly,
Here is the spent earth all reborn,
Here are the tired limbs springing lightly
To face the sun, and to share with the morn
In the chrism of dew and the cool of dawn.

Every day is a fresh beginning,
Listen, my soul, to the glad refrain,
And, spite of old sorrow and older sinning,
And puzzles unguessed, and possible pain,
Take heart with the day, and begin again!

Selections.

If a Man Die, Shall he Live Again?

"If a man die, shall he live again?" This question is found in the book called the Bible, acknowledged by all true Christians to be the revealed will and purpose of God to man. The question is found in Job xiv. 14. The whole verse reads, "If a man die shall he live again? All the days of my appointed time will I wait until my change come." Now, please, let us not leave this book for a solution of this question, for its solution is found nowhere else in the wide universe. If we go to the tenth verse we read: "But man dieth and wasteth away: yea, he giveth up the ghost and where is he? As the waters fail from the sea, and the flood decayeth and drieth up; so man lieth down, and riseth not till the heavens be no more, they shall not awake, nor be raised out of their sleep. O, that thou wouldst hide me in the grave, that thou wouldst keep me secret, until thy wrath be past, that thou wouldst appoint me a set time and remember me."

"If a man die, shall he live again? All the days of my appointed time will I wait, till my change come. Thou shalt call, and I will answer thee; thou will have a desire to the work of thine owns hands." We notice in the tenth verse that "man dieth;" this should settle the question in every mind, that has claim of faith in God, that a man cannot be dead and alive at the same time. For proof of this I turn to Eccl. ix. 5, and read, "For the living know that they shall not die; but the dead know not anything, neither have they any more a reward, for the memory of them is forgotten." I notice in the twelfth verse, "So man lieth down and riseth not till the heavens be no more." When will the heavens which now are pass away? We turn to 2 Peter iii. 10, and read, "But the day of the Lord will come, as a thief in the night, in the which the heavens shall pass away with a great noise, and the elements shall melt with a fervent heat, the earth also, and the works therein shall burn up. Seeing then that all these things shall be dissolved, what manner of persons ought ye to be in all holy conversation and godliness. Looking for and hasting unto the coming of the day of God, when the heavens being on fire shall be dissolved, and the elements shall melt with fervent heat. Nevertheless, we according to his promise look for new heavens and a new earth wherein dwelleth righteousness."

We turn to Isaiah lxv. 17, and read: "For, behold, I create new heavens and a new earth; and the former shall not be remembered nor come into mind. But be ye glad and rejoice forever in that which I create, for, behold, I create Jerusalem a rejoicing, and her people a joy. And I will rejoice in Jerusalem, and joy in my people, and the voice of weeping shall be heard no more in her, nor the voice of crying." We turn to Rev. xxi. 1, and read. "And I saw a new heaven and a new earth, for the first heaven and the first earth were passed away and there was no more sea. And I, John, saw the Holy City, New Jerusalem, coming down from God out of heaven, prepared as a bride adorned for her husband. And I heard a great voice out of heaven, saying, Behold, the tabernacle of God is with men, and he will dwell with them, and they shall be his people, and God himself shall be with them, and be their God. And God shall wipe away all tears from their eyes, and there shall be no more death, neither sorrow nor crying, neither shall there be any more pain, for the former things are passed away. And he that sat upon the throne said, Behold, I make all things new. And he said unto me, write, for these words are true and faithful."

For proof that the dead shall live again, I turn to John v. 26, and read, "For as the Father hath life in himself: so he hath given to the Son, to have life in himself. And hath given him authority to execute judgment also because he is the Son of God. Marvel not at this, for the hour is coming, in which all that are in the graves shall hear his voice, and shall come forth; they that have done good unto the resurrection of life; and they that have done evil unto the resurrection of damnation." I turn to John viii. 12, and read, "Then spake Jesus unto them again, saying, I am the light of the world: (please hear him) he that followeth me shall not walk in darkness, but shall have the light of life." Whence then comes this gross darkness that covers the minds of the people? Jesus says, "he that followeth me shall not walk in darkness but shall have the light of life." We turn again to 1 John v. 10, and read, "He that believeth on the Son of God hath the witness in himself, he that believeth not God hath made him a liar, because he believeth not the record that God gave of his Son. And this is the record, that God hath given us eternal life and this life is in his Son. He that hath not the Son of God hath not life." (Eternal life).

Again we turn to John xvii. 1, and we read, "These words spake Jesus, and lifted up his eyes to heaven and said, Father, the hour is come: glorify thy Son, that thy Son may glorify thee. As thou hast given him power over all flesh, that he should give eternal life to as many as thou hast given him." Again, John ix. 39, "And this is the Father's will, which hath sent me, that of all which he hath given me, I should lose nothing, but should raise it up again at the last day! And this is the will of him that sent me, that every one which seeth the Son, and believeth on him may have everlasting life: and I will raise him up at the last day."

"God is his own interpreter," we need not go outside of his book to solve the great problems of life and death. We understood by his book that he created the universe and all things in it, he pronounced it "very good," Gen. xviii. 14, "Is anything too hard for the Lord?" He, who created man from the dust of the ground and gave him life, and for transgressing his holy law, turned him back again to his native element, can he not by the same word of his power, bring him back again to life? Job xix. 23, "O that my words were printed in a book. That they were graven with an iron pen, and lead in the rock forever. For I know that my Redeemer liveth, and that he shall stand at the latter day upon the earth. And though after my skin worms destroy this body, yet in my flesh shall I see God: whom I shall see for myself, and mine eyes shall behold, and not another: though my reins be consumed within me." Seek for the "light of life," in the book of God, not heeding what man shall say about it, for "The wisdom of this world is foolishness with God."—Joseph A. Philbrick.

Good, but not Pleasant to Live With.

'Yes, I suppose she's good—I know she is. But she isn't pleasant to live with.'

Only a fragment of conversation that reached the ear above the rattle and clangor of the electric car, yet how full of meaning they seem when the few chance words come back to us further on! 'Good, but not pleasant to live with.' Goodness that seemed undesirable; goodness that failed to accomplish its noblest mission because of this; goodness shorn of beauty and attractiveness, like the granite of the hills stripped of its gracious mantle of flowers and foliage. Ah, the sadness of it! The sadness and the loss!

We need to realize more vividly the necessity of being pleasant to live with, as well as faithful to life's higher obligations. We may accomplish our daily tasks painstakingly and well, and bear our full share of each day's burdens and perplexities, and yet by an unlovely spirit cause the very ones for whom we toil and sacrifice, to feel that what we do does not compensate for what we are—that the value of our service is overbalanced when placed in the scale with the cloudy looks and sharp words which are its accompaniment.

Think a moment. Are you always 'pleasant to live with,' you who are so careful to do the extra tasks that others may be spared the burden? Do not impatient words slip from your lips even when your hands are busy with helpful acts? Is it by chance that you remind others of the sacrifices which you make in their behalf? And are you not somewhat given to praising yourself by holding up to disparagement some one who comes short of your measure of excellence? Are you as ready with excuses for others' faults as you are with condemnation? Have you reached the height of life where you can do good and forget it?" Do smiles come more naturally to your lips than frowns? Do you speak the words which turn away anger oftener than those which stir up strife? Are love and gentleness in all you do? In fact, while doing for others, 'are you 'pleasant to live with?'

Selected Paragraphs.

The atheist who spent a few days with the saintly Fenelon remarked: "If I stay here much longer I shall become a Christian in spite of myself." Fenelon had used no word of controversy or solicitation. It was but the quiet, convincing argument of a holy life—a consistent walk and conversation.

"I tried to be a skeptic when I was a young man," said Cecil, "but my mother's life was too much for me." Let us know that a consistent life is a power anywhere and everywhere. The religion which keeps the speech pure and honest, the temper sweet and kindly, the actions considerate and unselfish; such a walk and conversation are a constant telling of the gospel story, of the real good news to men: and with strongest possible enforcement.

"My brethren," said an old African preacher, "a good example is the fullest kind of preaching." And he was right.

"There is an energy or moral suasion in a good man's life," says Dr. Chalmers, "passing the highest efforts of the orator's genius. The seen beauty of holiness speaks more eloquently of God and duty than the tongue of men and angels."

I know a man who went to Jerusalem out of mere curiosity and without believing in the Scriptures. He met a clergyman—a friend of mine—on his way in, who said to him: "What are you doing here in the Holy Land, an infidel?" "I have come to show up the humbug of a Holy Land," he replied, "and to tell all Christians what they ought to know—that the Bible is an imposition on the world's credulity." Having made the circuit of the Holy Land, he came out and again met my clerical friend. "Well, how did you find it," asked the clergyman. "I am going home," said the agnostic, "to advocate the divinity of the Scriptures. I am fully persuaded that the Bible is true. I went in a complete infidel; I have come out a Christian."

You will never be sorry for serving God; you may be very sorry for almost everything else. Says Joseph Berry: "There are men and women who declare their regret at almost every step in life they have taken. I could find married people who tell you they wished they had never been married, and single people who would tell you they wished they had; I could find carpenters who would say, 'The worst trade you could put a boy at is a carpenter's,' and doctors who would say, 'Better be a chimney sweep than a doctor;' and I can find a chimney sweep who would say, 'Better be anything else than a chimney sweep; mine is the dirtiest trade going.' Now, I am going to throw out a challenge: Will some one find me a person who will say, 'I wish I had never loved Christ?' Blessed be God, you can't do it; the consecrated life bears the test of experience. He saved me when I was a lad, and I began to preach the gospel when I was sixteen. He is the friend who has never failed me, who has come close in trouble, and has been nearest and dearest to me when I needed him most."

For Our Children.

What a Preacher Said.

"You [illegible]ber the sermon you heard, my dear!"
The little one blushed, and dropped her eyes,
Then lifted them bravely, with look of cheer—
Eyes that were blue as the summer skies.

"I am afraid I forgot what the minister said,
He said so much to grown-up men,
And the pulpit was 'way up over my head;
But I told mamma that he said 'Amen.'

And 'amen,' you know, means 'let it be,'
Whatever our Lord may please to do:
And that is sermon enough for me,
If I mind and feel so the whole week through."

I took the little one's word to heart;
I wish I could carry it all day long.
The "amen" spirit, which helps the or:
To meet each cross with a happy song.

The Story of Israel. No. 93.

The people of Israel are still at Kadesh find it on your maps. It was from Kadesh that Moses sent messengers to the king of Edom. Can any [illegible] little ones tell what relation the king of Edom was to the Israelites? Do you remember the story of Jacob and Esau, and how Jacob got the birth right from Esau? They were twin brothers but God saw what Esau's character would be when he grew to be a man and so he let the birthright go to Jacob. Jacob was the father of the twelve tribes of Israel, and Esau of the Edomite nation, so the Israelites and Edomites were near of kin: they were brother nations.

Moses wanted to know if the king of Edom would let the Israelites pass through his country by the king's highway, if they disturbed nothing and paid for even the water they might drink, but he sent back word that they should not go through, came out in strong force, to prevent them from entering the land, so the Israelites had to go by another route.

The Edomites have always treated the Israelites badly, so badly that the Lord says he has "indignation against them forever," (Mal. i. 4.) and will "cut them off forever," "for their violence against their brother Jacob." Obadiah ver. 10. It is thought that the Turks are Edomites, because it was to be the Edomites who were to have the Holy Land in their possession in the last days, and the Turks have it now.

From Kadesh the Israelites journeyed—not far from the land of Edom—and came to Mount Hor, where Aaron died. On the map you will see the word Arabah. This is the name of a great valley, east of this valley is a range of mountains, sandstone mountains. Mount Hor is the highest of them all, and has a double top. A white spot on "the dark surface of the mountain," is called the tomb of Aaron. On the eastern side of the mountain, at its base, are the ruins of ancient Petra. Moses, at the command of the Lord, took Aaron, and Eleazar his son, up into Mount Hor, stripped Aaron of his beautiful priestly garments and put them upon Eleazar, and Aaron died and they came down from the Mount, and all Israel mourned for Aaron. Thus ends our lesson in the 20th chapter of Numbers. We go now to the 21st.

King Arad, the Canaanite, has heard that the Israelites are coming by the same road that the spies came over, and he thinks he will beat them back, so he goes out with a great army and fights against them and takes some of them prisoners. The Israelites look to the Lord. They make a vow to him that "if he will deliver the Canaanites into their hand, they will utterly destroy their cities." The Lord hears them, and Canaanites are overthrown. The place was named Hormah. To get around the country of the Edomites, the Israelites had to take the road that came across the country from the Red Sea. It was a very difficult road, and the people again became so discouraged, that they hardly knew what they were saying. They spake against God and against Moses. They wondered why they had been brought out of Egypt to die in the wilderness where there was no bread nor water. They had come to hate the very sight of the manna-bread, "angel's food," though it was.

Then the Lord sent serpents among them whose fiery bite was sure death, but when the people repented, he bade Moses make a brazen serpent and put it on a pole, and every one that was bitten, was to look at the serpent of brass and live.

The Son of Man, our dear Savior, "has been lifted up just as the serpent was in the wilderness, that whosoever believeth on him should not perish but have eternal life." The wicked serpent, Satan, has bitten every one of us, dear children, by causing us to sin; his bite is certain death, unless we look to Jesus. Come to him, and get your sins all washed away. He is the true bread from heaven, that giveth life to the world.

Many places were passed, and at last they came to Beer. There the princes, at the command of the Lord through Moses, digged a well with their staves. Who ever heard of such a thing? They made a song about it and said,

"Spring up, O well,
Sing ye unto it;
The princes digged the well.
The nobles of the people digged it,
By the direction of the law-giver.
With their staves."

On and on they went till they came to the top of Pisgah. Messengers were then sent to the king of the Amorites asking permission to pass through his land, but Sihon would not let one of them set a foot on his territory, but gathered his people and went out to Israel in the wilderness, and fought them at Jahaz, was beaten and lost his country. Sihon had taken this country from the king of Moab. It was the first land to fall into the possession of Israel, but it was not to be the last; under the leadership of Christ this same people are to conquer the whole earth: the territory outside of Canaan first, and then the Holy Land itself. "And Israel took all these cities, and Israel dwelt in the cities of the Amorites, in Heshbon, and in all the villages thereof."

The Amorites were driven out of other villages in Jazer, then the people turned and went up by the way of Bashan, and fought a great battle with Og, the king, at Edrei, and smote him and his sons and all his people, and possessed his land.

Og had 60 cities fenced with high walls, with gates and bars, and a great many unwalled towns, but all were taken, and men, women and children destroyed. Their cup of iniquity was full like that of the people who perished in the flood. Og and his people were Amorites. He himself was the last of the race of giants. His bedstead was of iron, nine cubits long and four cubits wide, or about 13½ feet long and 6 feet in width, taking the cubit to be 18 inches. It was probably the giant race to which Og belonged, who built the giant cities of Bashan, whose ruins are still to be seen. Immense rock slabs form the houses of these cities. How the builders ever moved these slabs from the quarries, and put them in place is a perfect mystery.

But our lesson is finished, for we have gone through the 20th chapter, from the 14th verse to the close, and have studied all of the 21st. Our next lesson will find the children of Israel encamped in the plains of Moab, on the east side of the river of Jordan, and just opposite the city of Jericho, for Jericho is across the river on the other side. It will be about Balaam, and the ass that talked,—a most wonderful lesson, and one that will greatly interest you. Numbers xxii. and xxiii.

Obituary.

"Samuel J. McLenithan was born in Paris Township, Kent Co., Mich., Aug. 19, 1873; died Sept. 11, 1899; aged 24 years and 22 days. He was married to Miss Mary Terrel, Aug. 26, 1897, by Rev. J. H. Goshert. This happy marriage was blessed with one child. Mr. McLenithan was baptized Jan., 1895, and joined the U. B. church. Besides many relatives who deeply mourn their loss, he leaves a wide circle of friends who will always remember him as a bright, energetic young man, whose character was beyond reproach, and who lived an exemplary life."

This death was another one of the sudden, sad events, which warns us all of the brevity of human life. Mr. McLenithan had fed a horse he wished to use, some oats, another horse coming up behind, he threw a small stick at him, when the horse turned kicking him in the stomach; he crawled to the gate, but could go no farther, his wife hearing groans went to him, summoned help and after some time working over him they carried him to the house. He lived only a few hours, leaving the little 19 year old wife heart-broken: we never witnessed so sad a sight as she presented, reason almost dethroned, her tearless eyes staring so vacantly at the still, cold face, no moan, no tears. Oh tears, what a blessing they are when the heart is so sad. We tried to present the true hope of life to the grief stricken ones from James iv. 14. Oh, when will the work of the enemy cease? "Come Lord Jesus, come quickly."

"The funeral of the late Solomon J. Tanner, for ten years a member of the fire department of the city, was held yesterday afternoon in the church of Christ, corner of Lyon and Barclay streets. The services were attended by the Masons, the Modern Woodmen and a detachment of the fire department. The three bodies of men escorted the remains from the residence on Crescent court to the church and thence to the Valley City cemetery, where the interment was made. Fire engine No. 2, which was formerly operated by the deceased, led the procession appropriately draped in black. The funeral sermon was preached by Rev. Woodward, of Dutton, assisted by the Rev. Mr. McArthur. The floral offerings were especially fine."—Grand Rapids Herald.

Six years ago last month I united Mr. and Mrs. Tanner in marriage, and it has been to them six happy years, since last February he has been traveling in the south and west searching for that coveted boon, health; but the dread disease consumption had done its fatal work, and a week before his death, the wife who had not seen him since February, but was anxiously watching every mail, received a telegram to hasten to him, for he was dying in far off Denver. She reached him a few hours before his death, and every hour was spent by him, making arrangements for his burial and her future welfare, the next day he closed his eyes for the rest and sleep of death, and with her precious burden she started on her sad homeward journey, reaching Grand Rapids Wednesday evening, on Friday we spoke to a large concourse of people from Psa. xvii. 15. He leaves a wife and one brother. Several years ago I preached his father, mother and only sister's funeral, only one left of the family. Mr. Tanner was a very highly esteemed man, always faithful to his work, a true man everywhere.

Report.

Dear Restitution:

I am home again after an absence of nearly four weeks. On Sunday, Sept. 3rd, I with Brother and Sister Morse visited Morse's Mill and began a meeting. At first things looked gloomy, no one was there, but after while a few came, and at the afternoon service more came, and by evening we had to add bench after bench, as our meeting was held in an old store building, and by Sunday, the 10th, the house was filled with eager listeners. We broke bread with the people at this place.

There are fifteen or sixteen members at this place, and seem to be awakened by my visit to them, and requested that I should visit them again. We gave them the promise that we would return some time. They also remembered that they "That preach the gospel should live of the gospel." From here we went to De Soto, and spoke in a tent. The people at this place are very much prejudiced. A "Holiness Meeting" of four weeks had just closed and they had had about all they could stand. We tried it about one week and then gave it up. Brother Morse has spent several hundred dollars trying to get the truth before the people and they would not. Brother Hatch, from Indiana, and Brother Eychuner have each visited this place two times, and this is my second trip. We had only two or three regular listeners, the audience changing every night, but I trust in God for the results, as was said, "Paul may plant, Apollos water, but God gives the increase." Brother Morse has done his duty, the good seed has been sown, and we wait God's time for its growth.

May God bless the dear isolated ones, is my prayer.

The World to Come.

The Apostle Peter divides all time from the creation of Adam, into three grand divisions and calls these divisions "worlds." From the creation of Adam to the flood is called "The World that was;" from the flood to the second coming of the Lord is called "This Present Evil World;" and all after that is called, "The World to Come." I have had frequent occasions in speaking on this subject, to remark that many great and important events will take place in the next age or world to come.

The "World that was" or the time before the flood was put in subjection to the angels; but it seems that even the angels were not capable of restoring fallen man to his original estate, for sin became so prevalent that the world that was, was ended by a mighty flood, that destroyed all mankind except those that were saved in Noah's ark.

Then began what Peter calls "This Present Evil World." It is not ruled by angels, nor even by God himself, but in this age God has "left the nations to walk after their own way." The result is that man has not been able to lift himself up, or to restore himself to his former condition; but it seems from statistics of crimes, and from the teaching of the Scriptures also, that this present evil world is becoming more evil.

After "this Present evil World" comes "the World to Come." It is future to us; therefore, all we know of it is what the prophets have said. But, as all the prophets, from Samuel and those that follow after have foretold something of the "Age to Come," "World to Come," we surely can know something of the "World to Come."

We learn from Heb. ii., that the "World to Come" was not (will not be) put in subjection to the angels, for one in a certain place has testified, saying, "What is man that thou art mindful of him, or the Son of Man that thou visitest him? Thou hast made him (Jesus) a little lower than the angels. Thou crownest him with glory and honor, and didst set him over the works of thy hands. Thou hast put all things in subjection under his feet. * * * But now, we see not yet all things put under him. But we see Jesus, who was made a little lower than the angels for the suffering of death, crowned with glory and honor, that he by the grace of God should taste of death for every man." We learn from this chapter (Heb. ii.), 1st. that Paul is speaking of the "World to Come." 2nd. That it was not (will not be) put in subjection under the angels. 3rd, That the world to come will be put under "man" and "the Son of Man" (Jesus) or under Jesus, and his brethren who are called sons of God, and joint heirs with Christ in the rulership of the age to come. The whole creation groaneth and travaileth in pain, waiting for the manifestation of the sons of God, (Jesus and his brethren).

There are many passages of Scripture in which the present tense is put for the future tense, that is, "God calleth those things that be not as though they were." Rom. iv. 17. "Thou hast put all things in subjection under his feet," reads as though the thing was done, but "we see not yet all things put under his feet." Therefore, the putting of all things under him is yet in the future, and will not take place until the next age, or "World to Come." But we see Jesus crowned with glory and honor, an event which will not take place until the world to come. "This present evil world" does not honor Jesus. Nay, more than half of the inhabitants of the earth have never even heard of him, and of those who have heard of him, only a few care anything about him.

One of the principal events which will take place in the "world to come" will be the healing of the nations. John the Revelator after he saw the new heaven and the new earth established, and the Holy City come down from God out of heaven; after he had seen all these, he says he saw a pure river of water of life, proceeding out of the throne of God and of the Lamb. In the midst of the street of it, and on either side of the river was the tree of life, which bear twelve manner of fruit, and yielded her fruit every month, and the leaves of the tree were for the healing of the nations. It seems that the nations, as they exist now, (in this present evil world) are sick.

We as a people divide up political parties and yell ourselves hoarse for some party that is going to cure our own nation, but it is all of no use. The evil influences that are tending toward the downfall of the nation still continues, and no difference which party is successful at the polls, the disease continues. Yet, amid all our adverse surroundings, the Christian should not lose courage. Looking a little distance in the future through the prophetic lens we can see the present state of things terminate in a mighty conflict between capital and labor, Jas. v., and the brethren are exhorted to be patient when they see these signs, for the coming of the Lord is nigh. The Lord is sure to come. The manifestation of the sons of God will take place in the age to come, and the groaning creation which is waiting for this manifestation will get relief, and not till then. Indeed, in God's plan, the very purpose of the "world to come" is the healing of the nations. It is God's set time for the fulfilment of his promises to Abraham to bless all the families of the earth. The Holy City, Jerusalem, will shine forth in all the splendor and glory of God. The kingdom of God will be established, and the nations of them which are saved shall walk in the light of it; and the kings of the earth do bring (willingly) their glory and honor into it: and they shall bring the glory and honor of the nations into it. Glorious city! Glorious age! Glorious work of blessing and healing the nations. Glorious will be our lot if we share with our Lord the glory of blessing and healing the nations in the world to come.

"Great men have found no royal road to their triumphs. It is always the old road, by way of industry and perseverance. A constant struggle, a ceaseless battle to bring success from inhospitable surroundings, has ever been the price of all great achievement. The man who has not fought his way up to his own loaf, and does not bear the scar of despair conquered, does not not know the meaning of success."

To the Brethren:

I will say, that if any who sent to me for my little tracts failed to receive them, will let me know, I will send again, or to any others who wish to distribute tracts, as we have quite a good supply yet, and we want them out in the field. This is a good time to scatter tracts and sow the good seed, as the night is far spent and the day is at hand.

Works of Bro. Wiley Jones.

Twelve Works, or the true teaching of Hell, Soul, Spirit, Ghost, Paradise, Incorruption, Incorruptible, Immortal, Immortality, Forever, Everlasting, Eternal, and their originals as learned by their uses in the Bible. A tract of 40 pages, sold formerly at 10 cents a copy.

The Gospel of the Kingdom, an 8 page, double column tract, sold formerly at 10 cents a dozen.

Early Lessons, suitable for old and young, 30 pages, sold formerly for 10 cents a copy.

These works are excellent for use by those who wish to do missionary labor, and we offer them at such a low price that they should be out in a short time. Bro. Jones had large editions of these tracts printed, and by dying suddenly, and his Widow being in feeble health, we have undertaken the task of selling them. Her income is quite limited, and all that can be got out of the sales goes to her after expenses are paid. When you get these tracts you get several times the worth of your money, and also aid a worthy Sister, who will thank you for it.

Assorted package 30 cents per pound. Gospel of the Kingdom, alone at 25 cents per pound.

The Gospel of the Kingdom.

Advocated in a series of Ten Discourses. A Volume of 283 pages, cloth 25 cents, leather bound, embossed, and gilt edges, $1.00. By Wiley Jones. This book is so well known that it is only necessary to announce that it is for sale, to insure a market for it. We have undertaken to dispose of these books for the Widow of our lamented Brother Jones, and while getting them at this low price, you at the same time will help Sister Jones to much-needed money.

Poetry.

After Toil Cometh Rest.

After seed-time the harvest appears:
After the toiling and hoping and waiting
After endurance that knows no abating.
The husbandman, cheered for his labor and cares,
Taketh his rest.

After the darkness the sunlight appears;
After the tempest and skirting and shivering;
After the tearing and beating and rowing,
Reposeth the mariner's heart, as he nears
His haven of rest.

After the battle, the victory won;
After the hard-fought and long-waged campaign;
After the weariness, fainting and tramping,
The soldier's home-heart turns again to his home,
Seeking its rest.

After life's toils, they receive a reward;
After its changes and trials are ended—
Its hopes and its fears, all already blended—
The weary one sleepeth—and sleeping is blessed—
The faithful giveth rest.

After the cross, there cometh the crown:
After temptation and conflict and sighing
Over the loved and the lost in the land of the dying,
Christian, for thee, when thy labor is done,
There remaineth a rest.

Would Jesus do it? No. 9.

PINE WOODS BIBLE CLASS.

Teacher. I have thought much with regard to the difference between modern and anciently inspired people, as developed by the investigation between Miss Gordon and Mr. Williams. I feel confident that if Jesus were in our place, he would not profess Holy Inspiration, and teach contrary to the writings of holy men of old, who spoke as they were moved by the Holy Spirit. It is our pleasure to listen to the utterance of those reports.

Mr. Williams. I wish to tell you something about Mrs. Norcutt, an Australian Evangelist, who relies upon special Spirit guidance outside of the Bible. Last Wednesday, at Willard Hall noon meeting, Chicago, Ill., she spoke about the birth of water and of Spirit, from John iii. She spiritualized the birth of water to mean, a cleansing by means of the Word. She quoted to sustain her theory, "You are clean through the Word which I have spoken unto you." "How shall a young man cleanse his way, by taking heed according to thy Word," etc.; the cleansing was through the Word, independent of water. She reasoned away the water, but accepted the birth of the Spirit, without any attempt to reason it away, but explained it as meaning conversion. Now, Miss Gordon, what do you think about it?

Miss Gordon. If this Evangelist really did speak under Holy Spirit guidance, she would not talk contrary to the Holy Spirit's teaching, as found upon the Sacred Page. The reception of the Word does not take the place of the birth of water, but precedes it.

Mr. Williams. Can you give some Bible samples?

Miss Gordon. Yes. See Acts ii. 41: "Then they that gladly RECEIVED his word were baptized." Not until the reception of the Word, did they receive baptism—the birth of water.

See Acts xviii. 8: "Many Corinthians HEARING, (the Word) believed, and were baptized"—born of water.

Mark xvi.: "He that BELIEVETH (the Word—gospel) and is baptized (born of water) shall be saved."

Acts viii. "When they BELIEVED Philip preaching the things concerning the kingdom of God and the name of Jesus Christ, they were BAPTIZED, (born of water) both men and women." Belief of the Word (gospel) must always come BEFORE baptism—born of water; and never takes the place of the birth of water.

"Ye must be born again." To be born again is to RE-generate, or bring to birth again. See Titus iii. 5: "He saved us by the WASHING OF REGENERATION, (born of water—baptism) and renewing of the Holy Ghost."

Mr. Williams. That which proceeds from a new birth is a new life. Is a new life supposed to result from the birth of water?

The Restitution.

"The Restitution of all things Which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his Holy Prophets."

VOLUME XLVIII. PLYMOUTH, INDIANA, OCTOBER 4, 1899. NUMBER 37.

Miss Gordon. Yes. See Rom. vi. 4: "Therefore we are BURIED with him in BAPTISM into death, that like as Christ was raised up from the dead by the glory of the Father, even so we also should walk in NEWNESS OF LIFE."

We further read: "If any man be IN CHRIST he is a NEW CREATURE."

Mr. Williams. I notice that the new creature is conditioned upon being "IN CHRIST." Who are "IN Christ?"

Miss Gordon. See Gal. iii. 27: "For as many of you as have been BAPTIZED into Christ, (born of water) have put on Christ." Those who are subjects of this new birth, are further spoken of as "NEW BORN BABES," or "NEW CREATURES."

Jesus has ordained that the birth of water, and of Spirit is ABSOLUTELY ESSENTIAL to a part in God's kingdom, and oh how dangerous, and how sad it is, when a teacher comes along, and professes to teach under the SPECIAL guiding power of God's Holy Spirit, and interprets one of these emphatic statements of essentials to salvation, and of an inheritance in God's kingdom to mean something different from what Jesus said. In this way many thousands of people fail to accomplish what he has declared as essential to be done. Great responsibility must attach to teachers who even innocently deceive the people. Before attempting to teach others the Word, they should become learned in the Sacred Oracles. The result is, as the Scriptures said: "the blind lead the the blind, and both fall into the same ditch." This trusting some outside influence to teach them the Word is deceptive. It could not be God's Holy Spirit which leads them to teach contrary to the Holy Bible. Jesus said "Search the Scriptures," and those who would do as Jesus advised, would heed his direction.

Mr. Williams. I know the pardon of sin is an essential to salvation, no one can be saved in sin. These Willard Hall people tell those who wish to get rid of sin, to hold up their hands for prayer, and come down to the front, and sincerely cry out, "God be merciful to me a sinner," and then you are washed white as snow. How is this Miss Gordon?

Miss Gordon. God tells us just what to do, but I never read of any such performance as above described.

Mr. Williams. What do you find?

Miss Gordon. See Acts ii. 3: The convicted thousands on the day of Pentecost were told to "repent and be baptized, (be born of water) for THE REMISSION OF SINS." You can see one reason at least by this, that unless a person is born of water and the Spirit, he cannot enter the kingdom, because the birth of water is the divinely appointed medium for the REMISSION OF SINS. A human device will not answer. Let me give you another instance, see Acts xxii. 16: "And now, why tarriest thou? Arise, and be baptized (be born of water) and WASH AWAY THY SINS, calling on the name of the Lord." Jesus, himself commissioned his disciples to go into all the world and preach the gospel, and say unto them, "He that BELIEVETH and IS BAPTIZED (born of water) shall be saved."

Mr. Williams. I learn from others, who attend these Willard Hall noon meetings, that many earnest seekers after salvation come there, and ask the way to be saved, and these teachers (who claim to be filled with the guiding power of the Holy Ghost) never mention Christ's direction to be baptized (born of water) "for the remission of sins." Jesus and his apostles always insisted upon faith and obedience as essential to the pardon of sin, which these people completely ignore in directing people how to be saved. They do not have a particle of use for the CHRIST METHOD, it is as completely set aside as though Peter filled with the Holy Spirit from that memorable outpouring on Pentecost, had never told heart-pricked sinners to "REPENT and be BAPTIZED every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ for the REMISSION OF SINS."

If any one wants the dictation of the Holy Spirit, as to how sins are to be pardoned, the above was what the Holy Spirit inspired Peter to proclaim to sinners who agonized to have their sins forgiven.

The complete substitution of the human, for the Divine method of pardon of sin, is good evidence that God's Holy Spirit is not guiding them into all truth, as they claim. If it was guiding them, they would harmonize with what the Holy Spirit revealed on Pentecost and on other occasions [illegible] Miss Gordon. The [illegible] ing sinners how to be saved, at Willard Hall, is not local to that place by any means, you will find it in vogue in almost any place. The Apostle told us that in the last days, that "the time will come when they will not endure sound doctrine, but after their own lusts shall heap to themselves teachers, having itching ears; and they shall TURN AWAY THEIR EARS from THE TRUTH, and shall be turned unto fables."

This time has surely come because the vast majority of those calling themselves Christians, are "turned unto" the fables of a sky-kingdom for immortal souls, and practice ruinism in place of baptism. How needful it is to stand close by God's Word, in place of delusive influences. Don't you think so, Miss Gordon?

Miss Gordon. You are right, Mr. Williams. Now, while you have been talking so earnestly and Scripturally about baptism, etc., for the remission of sins, I have been thinking hard.

Mr. Williams. What about?

Miss Gordon. About you.

Mr. Williams. Why, what about me?

Miss Gordon. Well, today is just two years since I first met you at your house, when your daughter Ruth was so very sick, and I have been thinking of the changes since then. Your daughter is now well, and is fast growing into a lovely young woman. And again, you have been blessed financially since then; you hold a better position than you then had in the coal mines. You have also been studying the Scriptures considerably since then, and have made large advances in Bible knowledge. Don't you think our Heavenly Father's sweet benediction is upon you?

Mr. Williams. I do, I have been wonderfully blessed. I praise his holy name for his marvelous kindness.

Miss Gordon. Don't you think Jesus would say unto you, "If you love me, keep my commandments?" And if you would do as Jesus would do, were he in your place, you must keep his commandments?

Mr. Williams. I don't knowingly omit any. I may not keep them as perfectly as I expect I will, when I grow stronger.

Miss Gordon. Well, let me come a little closer. The message comes to you, as it did unto others of old: "And now why tarriest thou? Arise, and be baptized; and wash away thy sins, calling on the name of the Lord."

Mr. Williams. I respond, Amen. I have often thought of the matter, and I thought I would go forward at such and such a time, then something else would come into my mind, that I wished to examine First, and so I have put it off from time to time, but I believe I am ready now. How shall I make application?

Miss Gordon. "With the mouth confession is made unto salvation;" you had better come to the church and make confession of faith, either orally, or by writing. Please yourself in the matter. May God bless you.

Mr. Williams. I think I will write it out, won't you come down to our house on Friday night, I would like you to read it, before I submit it to the church?

Miss Gordon. I will. I will be there along about six o'clock.

Mr. Williams. Now, Miss Gordon, I want to ask you a question about the gospel. I was conversing a short time since with my old friend Browning, and he maintained that there were two gospels, viz: The gospel of the kingdom, and the three-fact-gospel, usually preached by the Christian Church people,—the death, burial, and resurrection of Jesus, based upon 1 Cor. xv. 1-4.

Miss Gordon. That is a mistake, the Bible knows but one saving faith and hope of the gospel. Since the death, burial, and resurrection of Jesus became facts, they have inseparably been united with the message of the kingdom as constituting the way of salvation.

See Acts xxviii, 23: "And when they had appointed him a day, there came many to him in his lodging; to whom he expounded and testified the kingdom of God, persuading them concerning Jesus, both out of the law of Moses, and the prophets, from morning till evening. And some believed the things which were spoken, and some believed not."

See also verses 30, 31: "And Paul dwelt two whole years in his own hired house, and received all that came in unto him, preaching the kingdom of God, and teaching those things which concern the Lord Jesus Christ, with all confidence, no man forbidding him."

With regard to his auditors he says: "Their ears are dull of hearing, and their eyes have they closed; (what for?) lest they should see with their eyes, and UNDERSTAND with their heart, (mind), and should BE CONVERTED, and I should HEAL (save) them."

In view of this, what did he resolve to do? See verse 28: "Be it known therefore unto you, that THE SALVATION OF GOD ("preaching the kingdom of God, and teaching those things which concern the Lord Jesus") is sent unto the Gentiles, and they will hear it." That means us—the Gentiles—to which "the salvation of God" is sent, viz: "preaching the kingdom of God, AND teaching those things which concern the Lord Jesus." No one is authorized to mutilate "the salvation of God" by separating "those things which concern the Lord Jesus" from "the kingdom of God." This harmonizes with Acts viii. 12: "When they believed Philip preaching the things concerning the kingdom of God, AND the name of Jesus Christ, they were baptized, both men and women." The Christian Church takes the liberty to separate "the kingdom of God" from "those things which concern the Lord Jesus Christ," and by that means pervert the one saving gospel.

It is also easy to show that they do not even believe that Jesus died, was buried, and rose again. They do not hesitate to affirm that what they call the immortal soul of Jesus, was the real Jesus, the body they say was merely an abode in which Jesus dwelt, and the very day he was crucified he (Jesus) went right away to Paradise, and the body or house in which Jesus lived, was put in Joseph's new tomb, but Jesus himself was not there, he was in Paradise. This being the case, Jesus NEVER DIED, and they could not bury him, because he was still alive in Paradise, and not having been buried, there would be no resurrection. Hence, they nullify their own perverted gospel.

W. H. WILSON.

A Letter to a Friend

To Mr. G. Dear Sir:

I received not long since a few tracts in favor of Universalism which may have been sent by you as your name was on the envelope in which they were inclosed. If I am mistaken in the person, please excuse. I read the tracts carefully in order to learn the arguments in favor of Universalism and found they were not in harmony with the plain teaching of the Bible. Neither is the popular religious teaching in harmony with that blessed Book. Some of the most important errors taught at the present time are based upon a wrong view of the origin, nature and destiny of man.

The Bible teaches that the first man was formed out of the dust of the ground, and therefore was of the earth. See Gen. ii. 7; 1 Cor. xv. 47. Notice the statement, it does not say that man was made out of some other material and a house was made out of the ground for him to live in. No, no. In order to cause him to live after thus formed, God breathed into his nostrils the breath of life, and he (the man whom he had made out of the ground) became a living soul, (or person). After thus made, God put him and his mate in the Garden of Eden with the privilege of eating the fruit of all of the trees except one. The history shows they did partake of it and thereby became subject to death. And God explains this death to be a returning to the ground from whence they were taken. See Gen. iii. 19; Rom. v. 12; 1 Cor. xv. 21, 22.

From the foregoing testimony (for ought we know to the contrary) if God had not provided a plan of redemption, man after thus returning to the dust would [illegible] But man is not left without hope to perish, for "God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten Son that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life." From the above statement we discover that in order to obtain everlasting life, we must comply with the conditions, viz., believe on the Son of God; or as stated in an another place, to "Hear him in all things whatsoever he would say to us, and those who would not hear him should be destroyed." Acts iii. 23. He spake as never man spake, his Word was authoritative. He said to certain ones, "Except ye repent, ye shall perish." Luke xiii. 3. He told those unbelieving Jews that they should die in their sins, and where he went they could not come. Just before he ascended up to heaven he gave commandments unto the Apostles, to go into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature, stating that he that believeth and is baptized shall be saved, and he that believeth not shall be condemned. Mark xvi. 16. We are told that without faith it is impossible to please God. Heb. xi. 16.

Again, we are told, "All men have not faith," therefore all men do not please him. We are told also that Jesus came to his own and his own received him not, but to as many as did receive him, to them gave he power to become the sons of God. Again, we are told, "It pleased God through the foolishness of preaching to save them that believe." Well, what will be the end of those who know not God, and obey not the gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ?

Paul says they shall be punished with everlasting destruction from the presence of the Lord and the glory of his power. 2 Thes. i. 9, 10. Paul said again in Rom. vi. 23. "The wages of sin is death." What is death? Neither Universalism nor endless torment. But extinction of life, so says Webster in harmony with the Bible. The wicked are always represented in the Bible, like unto combustible matter as chaff, dry branches, tares, stubble, bad fish, etc.

David said "The ungodly shall not stand in the judgment, but shall be like the chaff which the wind driveth away." Again, John the Baptist represented them as chaff, which he said Christ would burn up with unquenchable fire. Again, Christ represented them as tares to be gathered out from amongst the wheat to be cast into the fire (not to be converted into wheat but) to be burned. Again they are compared to bad fish (not to be converted into good ones but) to be cast away.

Again, says David in Psa. xxxvii. 20. "But the enemies shall perish. They shall be as the fat of lambs; they shall consume away into smoke."

Time would fail me to put forth all the testimony on this important subject. Paul says God has appointed a day in which he will judge the world in righteousness by his Son, having committed all judgment unto him. Again, Paul said we must all appear before the judgment seat of Christ to receive a reward according to the deeds done in the body, whether they be good or bad. 2 Cor. v. 10. In the 25th chapter of Matthew we have a description of the judgment in which the judge says to them on the left hand, "Depart ye cursed into everlasting fire, prepared for the devil and his angels;" and these go away into everlasting punishment.

Paul in 2 Thes. i. represents this punishment as being destruction. One of the definitions of destruction as given by Webster is "annihilation," which is in harmony with the Bible. Malachi says 4th chapter 1st verse, "For behold the day cometh that shall burn as an oven, when all the proud and all that do wickedly shall be stubble and the day that cometh shall burn them up, saith the Lord of hosts, that it shall leave them neither root nor branch." And in the 3rd verse it is said, "They shall be ashes under the soles of the righteous feet in the day that I shall do this, saith the Lord of Host."

In conclusion I would ask, Do these scriptural affirmations which I have quoted to you sound like Universalism? Nay, verily, there is as much difference as there is between darkness and light, or between truth and error. O that we may be amongst that number to whom Jesus will say, "Come ye blessed of my Father, inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world, when the meek will inherit the earth and delight in the abundance of peace. Psa. xxxvii. Matt. v. 5; Dan vii. 27.

I will close with love to all, hoping you may be benefitted by what I have written, being conscious that I have spoken the Word of the Lord.

Farewell, may God bless you,

P. H. BOYD.

The Twisting and Turning Game.

When a text of Scripture comes smack up against some men's theories, all they have to do is to resort to the twisting and turning game in order to remove the most serious objections in their way. Thus lending the Bible to suit their theories, instead of shaping their theories to harmonize with the Bible. By this mode of operation almost any false theory can be made to appear plausible. This twisting and turning business has been going on for many years, it is no new device.

Some quote only a part of a verse, leaving out the rest, in order to sustain their theory; this is as unfair as the twisting and turning business. Thus by so doing we can prove from the Bible that there is no God, when if the whole verse is quoted it would place the right construction upon it, thus: "The fool has said in his heart there is no God." When all the verse is quoted there can be no such idea conveyed as that there is no God. When any man's theory is so hard pushed as to be obliged to resort to such underhand ways to prove it true, it is time for them to order a halt and make a new start in another direction. The way some do is to form a theory, then go to work and make the Bible prove it. He who teaches false doctrines is a deceiver. See 2 John iii. There are those who would, if possible deceive the very elect. Let every one carefully search the Scriptures for himself. Woe be unto those who seek to build up new sects by the introduction of false doctrines, thus dividing the flock of God, and scattering instead of uniting them. "Preach the Word."—J. E. Clark, in Crisis.

Effectual Prayer.

An arrow, if it be drawn up a little way, goes not far; out if it be pulled up to the head, it flies swiftly and pierces deep. Thus prayer, if it be only dribbled forth from careless lips, falls at our feet. It is the strength of ejaculation and strong desire which sends it to heaven and makes it pierce the clouds. It is not the arithmetic of our prayers, how many there are; nor the rhetoric of our prayers, how eloquent they be; nor the geometry of our prayers, how long they be; nor the music of our prayers, how sweet our voice may be; nor the logic of our prayers, how argumentative they may be; nor the method of our prayers, how orderly they may be; nor even the divinity of our prayers, how good the doctrine may be—which God cares for. He looks not for the horny knees which James is said to have had through the assiduity of prayer! We might be like Bartholomew, who is said to have had a hundred prayers for the morning and as many for the evening, and all might be of no avail. Fervency of spirit is that which availeth much.—Bishop Hall.

SEND THE RESTITUTION to some poor person as present for 1900. The cost is only three cents a week.

The Restitution.

THE RESTITUTION advocates the final "restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint-heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ, and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for remission of sins, pre-requisites of the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

Are You One of Them?

By examining our list we find there are between 500 and 600 people whose time has expired. Some only a few months and others some years. If each one of you who are thus owing us would go to the office right now and send the money due us, we would have over a thousand dollars with which to push forward our work.

Brothers and Sisters, we need this money very much. We have earned it—it is ours—and if you do not send it to us, but use it on self, you are simply spending our money. It is not yours—it is ours. Were we in position to do so we would gladly lend you the amount, but the fact is we have bills to pay and cannot lend it to you longer. We ask you kindly and in the spirit of love and justice, to at once send us what you owe us. If you cannot spare it all now, then send part of it, and the balance after awhile. Please do not neglect this, but get a dollar and send to us right away today. We thank you in advance for the favor, and assure you we appreciate it very much.

If we want to do God a service, we must do it in his way, or it will not be acceptable.

"Trying providences are doubtless intended to be merciful preventives or gracious restoratives."

Never fear people will think you are fallible: that is just what you are, whether you think so or not.

He whose prerogative it is to command us, promises us strength to perform; and he giveth liberally too.

Dare to change your mind, confess your error, and alter your conduct, when you are convinced you are wrong. This is both manly and Scriptural.

The condition of affairs in South Africa is by no means bettered. It is now simply a waiting for an answer, and many think the Boers will answer by beginning hostilities.

If cares flow in from every quarter we are invited to cast them all upon the Lord, and asks what reason we have to distrust him? Did we ever know his Word to fail?

Dear Sister, just a word to the wise is sufficient. Chastened sorrow leads to closer intercourse with God, but we are persuaded that inordinate grief invariably hinders devotion.

The Christian Advocate says, "Apathy is the disease which has gotten hold of the Church life. Unless we heal ourselves we will perish, and will deserve to perish. When war and greed, frolic and fun, fraternity and secularism become of more consequence in popular thought than redemption, salvation, peace, and God, it is about time for the very stones to cry out warnings of danger."

In answer to the question "How can I quit the use of tobacco?" we would say we have had literally no experience. We never quit it, because we never began with it. I know of one in this city, nearly, if not quite threescore years and ten, who quit after being many years a slave to the filthy habit. When he had no well grounded hope of life beyond the grave it no doubt soothed his troubled mind in the absence of something better, and could not be induced to give it up, but in the Providence of God he was directed to a place where he found a perfect cure for this and all other evil habits. It was the Gospel of the Grace of God. He was made clean inside and out—morally and physically cleaned. The "HOW" about his quitting was this: He just quit and left the consequences with God, not daring to defile his Temple. Try this plan.

Salvation! What is it?

We are constantly hearing something about salvation when among religionists. And we think that those who use that word most frequently would be most puzzled to explain what they mean by it,—and still more puzzled if they had to give a Scriptural exposition of the term. Lexicographers tell us that salvation is the act of saving. This may satisfy a few unreasoning people, perhaps, who do not care to know the why or wherefore of things; but we think there are others who would like to know how it happens that man needs to be saved: would like to know ails them before they whatever; and as we consider this a wise course to adopt we will attempt to crowd into one article an epitome of the whole matter, beginning at the point of time when there was no man.

The strata of earth proves that it was made for just such a creature as man is, because in its bowels are vast stores of iron, copper, tin, zinc, silver, gold, lead, oil and coal and a great many other things that man has found a use for; and its soil produces just what he needs to sustain him, and it was not till the earth was fitted up just to suit such a creature that he was introduced. He came [illegible] at the right time, but

WHERE DID HE COME FROM?

Only God who made him could answer that question. Happily he has done this. Gen. ii. 7 says he was formed of the dust of the ground, Gen. iii. 19 reaffirms this in the following words addressed to Adam, "In the sweat of thy face shalt thou (Adam) eat bread, till thou return unto the ground, for out of it wast thou taken; for dust thou art, and unto dust shalt thou return." This shows where he came from,—what he was made of, and what would become of him. Before we go further, note

1. There was no man till he was formed of dust.

2. God being true, only dust entered into man's composition.

3. After man's formation from dust, he was caused to live. This caused his eyes to see his ears to hear, his hands to handle, his brain to think, remember, calculate, his tongue to taste and speak,—in fact, to do all we see him do. But what caused him to perform all these functions? Ans.—

God being true, The Breath of lives was the cause,—the only cause, as proven by Psa. civ. 29. It says, "Thou takest away their breath, they die, and return to their dust. Simply deprived of what first gave them life and they are unmade. There was no man before he was made—there is no man after he is unmade. But

WHY WAS MAN UNMADE?

Not because he was not perfectly formed. He was perfectly formed, and his whole organism worked harmoniously. It was a very good organism. But an exquisite physical organism was not what he was formed for. The Creator is a MORAL being,—a holy being; a righteous being,—a God of love and truth, and justice. And although Jesus said the flesh "profiteth nothing," God had so organized the flesh of man capable of developing a character in harmony with his own —a godly character,—a moral character. He had the faculty of loving God, —reverencing him, believing him, and obeying him. God's object in the formation of man as he did, was the development of character resembling his own. The faculties man was endowed with, mentioned above, were for this purpose, and just adapted to this purpose. Here we ask the reader to pause. Before he goes any further we want him to realize the difference between the mechanical action of a machine that is what it was intended to do, and a living, moral organism that is capable of choosing the right and rejecting the wrong. Such a creature man was. He was capable of choosing his own course and permitted to choose it, and did choose it.

OBLIGED TO DO

A MORAL CHARACTER

could be developed in no other way. A man without a will of his own could develop no character of his own, and of necessity would be only a living machine to be set in motion and obliged to do just so, and in no sense responsible for his conduct, and therefore could be amenable to no law, nor rewarded nor punished on account of it. Man under those conditions would be on a level with the brute creation, not being eligible to glory, honor and immortality.

But, as we have shown that man so fearfully and wonderfully made was afterward sentenced to be unmade, and returned to the ground he was taken out of, we must now show the

this was done? We have referred to the irresponsibility of the brute and the responsibility of the man, and now we will show that God treated him as personally responsible for his actions. He gave him one law to test him. He was told he could eat of every tree of the garden except one. If he ate of that he should die, surely die. He ate of it after this fair warning of the consequences, and the words, "Dust thou art, and unto dust shalt thou return," is the sentence of the death threatened him. God's own explanation of death, what men say to the contrary notwithstanding. Read carefully, half a dozen times, Genesis, second and third chapters. And then we will have a word to say respecting

THE TREE OF LIFE,

mentioned Gen. iii. 22-24; and Gen. ii. 9. In this last reference it is seen that a distinction is made between the trees good for food and the two others, named, viz., "the tree of life," and "the tree of knowledge of good and evil." They had eaten of the forbidden tree, and were sinners, and had been sentenced to death as such. But the sentence was suspended, not executed on the spot because God determined [illegible] remote promise [illegible] person of the Woman's Seed had been made, see Gen. iii. 15, and the skins with which the Lord covered their nakedness are understood to have been obtained from animals slain as symbols of the Great Sacrifice the Woman's Seed would in the distant future make,—so that if they believed the promise of him, they could by faith take him as the real sin-covering. Suspension of the execution gave ample opportunity to live a life of faith and obedience to God. Justification from sin, could only be by faith. Before they sinned they might have taken of the tree of life in the Garden, but having sinned, Gen. iii. 22-24 shows they were

DRIVEN AWAY FROM IT

LEST they eat of that also and become immortal in sin,—so that no Savior could save them. In this way, if they failed of salvation by the Savior they would at last go to dust and stay there, never being thing but dust. On the other hand, if they laid hold of the hope set before them, it would not prevent their dying but the Redeemer would redeem them from death, as Job believed he would, see Job xix. 23-26, and as the Redeemer himself said he would, John v. 28, 29, being, as he declared John xi 25, the resurrection and the life; and will not fail to do what he pledges himself to do in John vi. 39, 40, raise them up at the last day.

SALVATION

then means redemption from sin and death. And Paul in 1 Cor. xv. 12-22, 29-58 shows in a marvelous argument that future life was no unsolved problem till Christ himself was raised, —and declares that those who had died in Christ would have perished if Christ had not been raised. Secondly, salvation is to be crowned with life and glory in the kingdom of God on earth. All God's promises of this life after death to inherit the kingdom of God has been gospel all down the ages. The germinal promise, or first gospel sermon being the promise of the Woman's Seed to bruise the Serpent's head.

THE SECOND CHAPTER

of Redemption's plan consisted of the covenant to Abraham and Christ, Gen. xii. 1-7; xiii. 14-17. And Galatians iii. 16, and repeated to Isaac and Jacob and wonderfully enlarged to David 2 Sam. vii. 12-16, and xxiii. 8-5, and Psa. lxxxix. These comprise what Paul calls the covenants of promise, Eph. ii. 12, and shows that those who are strangers to them are Godless, Christless, and hopeless. And Peter says of these same promises 2 Peter i. 4 that they are exceeding great and precious, and that it is by these we can be made partakers of [illegible] nature. This furnishes infallible evidence that these covenants are the foundations of the gospel; and as Paul in Eph. iv. 4 says there is only one hope, and then tells us what was, viz., "the hope of the promises made of God unto our fathers, (Abraham, Isaac, Jacob and David). It becomes a serious question for every one, "Am I hoping for the promises Paul hoped for? If not, and as there is but one hope, what will become of me? And if it be added that Christ was made a curse for us that the blessing of Abraham might come on the Gentiles, Gal. iii. 14, it becomes very serious, indeed. The promise of the land for God's kingdom is in that covenant, the King of that kingdom is nominated in that covenant,—the throne is also promised in it, and the capital city, and the rulers and their subjects and blessings of all nations is assured.

HIS OWN HOPE

FOLLOWING THE same Jesus to tell us that that kingdom of God was surely coming, and commanding repentance in view of its coming, and making it known that he was going to a far country to receive that kingdom, and that he would return and take his seat upon its throne of glory, and invite all who are to be blessed of the Father to come and inherit the kingdom prepared for them from the foundation of the world, see Matt. xxv. 34, and so inherit what he had said in his Sermon on the Mount, "Blessed are the meek, for they shall inherit, (not heaven above) the earth,"—and further proof that they will is found in Rev. v. 9, 10 and other places. But we must begin once more,—the Covenant to Abraham, all will see, includes a resurrection to life or else he could never realize what was promised him. Heb. xi. 8-35 proves that Abraham and all the faithful away back there never expected to realize in mortal life what [illegible] he lived as a stranger should AFTER THAT be his inheritance—a resurrection life, see v. 35. But that covenant was only typically confirmed with the blood of beasts. It required the spotless blood of the woman's Seed, the Seed of Abraham and Son of God to confirm it and bring it into force. And so he said at the last supper, "This is my blood of the New Covenant shed for you." This New Covenant is the Everlasting Covenant because it covenants everlasting life after death, and the kingdom which shall never end, with all its attendant glory.

AWAY BACK

IT COULD NOT GIVE LIFE

after death till brought into force by the death of Christ,—and by reference to Hebrews xiii. 20 he was the first fruits from the dead, the first-born among many brethren, was himself raised from the dead through the blood of the Everlasting Covenant which he shed. Yes; it says "the God of Peace brought again from the dead our Lord Jesus, that Great Shepherd of the sheep, through the blood of the Everlasting Covenant." And now dear reader, do you want to share and his Seed, the Christ? Do you want to live and reign as a King and Priest with Christ, and sit with him upon his throne, Rev. iii. 21, and have power over the nations as he promised in Rev. ii. 26, 27, when he possesses what Gabriel promised his mother, Luke i. 32, at his return to rebuild David's tabernacle as foretold of him Amos ix. 11, 12 and Acts xv. 16, 17, and possess the kingdom under the whole heaven, for ever, even for ever and ever, Dan. vii. 18 and 27. Do you want all this blessedness? If so you must accept all the promises of it as gospel, in connection with the offices and work of Christ, as his sacrifice in our behalf, his being raised from the dead for our Justification,—his office of Mediator for all God's children at the court of heaven, and then renounce sin, and be baptized into Christ's death in order to obtain his name as your sin-covering, then live Godly while you live in the flesh, and ever be looking for that blessed hope, his glorious appearing, and all will be well.

THE BLESSINGS OF ABRAHAM

The Hope of the Gospel.

Let us look at Paul's language, Acts xxiii. 6, "But when Paul perceived that the one part were Sadducees, and the other Pharisees, he cried out in the council, Men and brethren, I am a Pharisee, the son of a Pharisee: of the hope and resurrection of the dead I am called in question."

Then truly, he preached the resurrection of the dead, as the gospel hope unless he was called in question for something he did not preach. In Acts xxvi. 6–8, he says, "And now I stand and am judged for the hope of the promise made of God unto our fathers: unto which promise our twelve tribes, instantly serving God day and night, hope to come: for which hope's sake, King Agrippa, I am accused of the Jews. Why should it be thought a thing incredible with you that God should raise the dead?"

Here is seen the burden and hope of apostolic preaching. It is a future life, by a resurrection from the dead. He adds, verses 22 and 23, "Having therefore obtained help of God, I continue unto this day, witnessing both to small and great, saying none other things than those which the prophets and Moses did say should come. That Christ should suffer, and that he should rise from the dead, and should shew light unto the people, and to the Gentiles."

Not only is the resurrection the apostolic burden and hope, but he affirms the same things were the theme of the prophets and Moses; the hope is one. Not an intimation thus far of the notion of entering the holy of holies—heaven—at death, or at all; it is the resurrection. He has shown us that that was the hope of Israel, as well as the hope of the gospel, and in chapter xxviii. 20, in his bondage at Rome he says, "For the hope of Israel I am bound with this chain."

We will now see whether Paul with equal clearness states the hope of the gospel in his epistles. 1 Cor. xv. "Now if Christ be preached that he rose from the dead, how say some among you that there is no resurrection of the dead? But if there be no resurrection of the dead, then is Christ not risen. And if Christ be not risen, then is our preaching vain, and your faith is also vain. Yea, and we are found false witnesses of God; because we have testified of God that he raised up Christ: whom he raised not up, if so be that the dead rise not. For if the dead rise not, then is not Christ raised; and if Christ be not raised, your faith is vain; ye are yet in your sins. Then they also which are fallen asleep in Christ are perished. If in this life only we have hope in Christ, we are of all men most miserable.

That the apostle has reference to the hope of a future life by a resurrection, is clear from what he says in verse 32 of the same chapter. "If after the manner of men I have fought with beasts at Ephesus, what advantageth it me, if the dead rise not? let us eat and drink; for tomorrow we die." Such a course would be folly indeed; rather let us eat and drink, if there is no resurrection: for tomorrow we die, and there is no hope beyond that. Such is the apostolic conclusion if there is no resurrection of the dead. This reasoning is both absurd and false, if he could or would go to heaven at death.

Again Paul says in Rom. viii. 23, after speaking of the groaning creation, "And not only they, but ourselves, also, which have the first fruits of the Spirit, even we ourselves groan within ourselves, waiting (to go to heaven at death? No, but) for the adoption, to-wit the redemption of our body." Not its dissolution at death. He adds, "For we are saved by hope; but hope that is seen is not hope; for what a man seeth, why doth he yet hope for? But if we hope for that we see not, then do we with patience wait for it."

What does the apostle affirm he and the Christians of his time were waiting for? Ans. "The redemption of our body; that is, for the coming of Christ from heaven, and the resurrection. This will be clearly seen by comparing what he says here with Paul, Phil. iii. 20, 21. "For our conversation is in heaven: from whence also we look for the Savior, the Lord Jesus Christ, who shall change our vile body, that it may be fashioned like unto his glorious body, according to the working whereby he is able even to subdue all things unto himself." Here is no ground for mistake or doubt. Paul was not expecting to go to heaven at death; nor at all; but he was looking for Christ to come from heaven—not when his vile body should go to corruption, but when the time should arrive for it to be fashioned like to Christ's glorious body, which is not till the resurrection. This is further confirmed by his language in the same chapter where he tells us how he labored and suffered, "If by any means I might attain unto the resurrection of the dead." How unlike all this is the common idea of an entrance into heaven. The hope of Paul is thus distinctly stated, and it is the gospel hope, and demonstrates that modern Christians are ignorant of what that hope is as the pagans themselves, in fact the theology of these days has substituted an immortal soul for or instead of Christ; and hence a hope of going to heaven at death instead of a resurrection from the dead at the last day, as Christ has promised.

A fatal mistake this, by which Christ is robbed and dishonored; while death is crowned Prince of Peace, and as the door into heaven. Christ however, declares himself to be the door, and affirms that those who climb up any other way are thieves and robbers.

He is the resurrection and the life; without him, and without that resurrection which he has promised there is no gospel hope of a future life or immortality. Let men beware how they attempt to approach the Holy Place, into which Jesus our High Priest has entered. That is no part of the work of a Christian, even to attempt an entrance into heaven at death or any other time, if they do not want to be slain, as under the Aaronic Priesthood.

"The Web Begun, God Finds the Thread."

That means that if we begin work for God, in a sincere and prayerful way, he will find means whereby to carry it on. How many dear saints in the past have proven this to be so. Single-handed and without means, their souls have burned within them and they have started out to win. Through slush and mud, and dangerous marsh, they have ploughed their lonely way. Mountains have been climbed and oceans crossed. Through the desert there has been found a way and paths have been forced through the jungle. The club of the savage has not deterred, nor dread miasma driven back.

In and out of the beautiful web has the flying shuttle been thrown, one weaver has dropped from the loom, only to have his place supplied by another. So all the long ages of the life of the Church, in this world, has the work gone on.

No fear may be felt in beginning the web of our lives for God. We may be slow of speech, or isolated or poor, or timid, and yet, God can make us a mighty power. Our strength is not in ourselves, it is all in him. The "shut in one" can pray, and bring showers of blessings on the church, reviving it through God's mercy and causing many converts to be added to its numbers. The isolated one can write and stir up his fellows to give to God's cause. No one so humble that he cannot begin the web, that is to be bright for eternity.

"The web began God sends the thread." Mueller began his web, and it was woven, so far as he could weave. Miller began his by sounding the midnight cry, and lo, in multiplied looms, all over the world, have weaver's sprung up to ply the shuttle and fill in the shining threads. Storrs took up "the life and death question" in our country and wove for a time alone. How much opposition there was! What an awful heresy it looked like to the staid fathers and mothers of those early days! But the weaving went on. Into the web has gone millions of threads and God has sent them all.

The world begins to look at it now, and to think, "It is not such a bad piece of cloth after all!" So fresh [illegible] beautiful has it grown, sprinkled with its delicate sprays of bloss[illegible]

O hesitating ones, begin your web. Commence your life-work now. Take up your cross and follow Christ out into the world's vineyard to gather sheaves for God. Let [illegible] moment go to waste. Give time and strength and money to save men. Daily not or life will be gone! Come on soldiers! for the work is great. You cannot sit down and be saved. We have been "hired" to work; let us be at it. The web will not grow while the weavers are asleep.

Conference Notice.

The Quarterly Conference of the Church of God, in Michigan, will convene (D. V.) at Millbrook, Mecosta Co., Michigan, on Friday, Oct. 6th, 1899, and continue over the following Sunday. All of like precious faith are cordially invited to attend. Brothers and sisters, we once more appeal to you to come and enjoy a short season with us talking over the things concerning Jesus and the resurrection, and the kingdom of God. Come with your hearts full of love and self-sacrifice, and we are sure you will not come in vain. Those coming by railroad from the north stop at Millbrook; from the south, at Blanchard, changing cars at Edmore for Blanchard. Those coming from south of Grand Rapids, change at Grand Rapids, take the Detroit Grand Rapids and Western train at 7.00 A. M., no other train connects at Edmore, only have to wait there about ten or fifteen minutes. Blanchard is about two miles from the place of meeting, at the Decker school house. Able speakers are expected to be present.

Yours for the truth,

New Every Morning.

Every day is a fresh beginning,
Every morn is the world made new,
You who are weary of sorrow and moning,
Here is a beautiful hope for you,
A hope for me and a hope for you.

All the past things are past and over,
The tasks are done and the tears are shed,
Yesterday's errors let yesterday cover;
Yesterday's wounds, which smarted and bled,
Are healed with the healing which night has shed.

Yesterday now is a part of forever:
Bound up in sheaf, which God holds tight,
With glad days, and sad days, and bad days which never
Shall visit us more with their bloom and their blight,
Their fulness of sunshine or sorrowful night.

Let them go, since we cannot relieve them,
Cannot undo and cannot atone;
God in his mercy receive, forgive them!
Only the new days are ours;

Here is the spent earth all reborn,
Here are the tired limbs springing lightly
To face the sun, and to share with the morn
In the chrism of dew and the coal of dawn.

Every day is a fresh beginning,
Listen, my soul, to the glad refrain,
And, spite of old sorrow and older sinning,
And puzzles forecasted, and possible pain,
Take heart with the day, and begin again!

Selections.

If a Man Die, Shall he Live Again?

"If a man die, shall he live again?" This question is found in the book called the Bible, acknowledged by all true Christians to be the revealed will and purpose of God to man. The question is found in Job xiv. 14. The whole verse reads, "If a man die shall he live again? All the days of my appointed time will I wait until my change come." Now, please, let us not leave this book for a solution of this question, for its solution is found nowhere else in the wide universe. If we go to the tenth verse we read: "But man dieth and wasteth away; yea, he giveth up the ghost and where [illegible] As the waters fail from the [illegible] the flood decayeth and drieth [illegible] man lieth down, and riseth not [illegible] the heavens be no more, they shall [illegible] wake, nor be raised out of their [illegible], that thou wouldst hide me [illegible] have, that thou wouldst keep [illegible] et, until thy wrath be past, that thou wouldst appoint me a set time and remember me."

"If a man die, shall he live again? All the days of my appointed time will I wait, till my change come. Thou shalt call, and I will answer thee: thou wilt have a desire to the work of thine own hands." We notice in the tenth verse that "man dieth;" this should settle the question in every mind, that has claim of faith in God, that a man cannot be dead and alive at the same time. For proof of this I turn to Eccl. ix. 5, and read, "For the living know that they shall not die; but the dead know not anything, neither have they any more a reward, for the memory of them is forgotten." I notice in the twelfth verse, "So man lieth down and riseth not till the heavens be no more." When will the heavens which now are pass away? We turn to 2 Peter iii. 10, and read, "But the day of the Lord will come, as a thief in the night, in the which the heavens shall pass away with a great noise, and the elements shall melt with a fervent heat, the earth also, and the works therein shall burn up. Seeing then that all these things shall be dissolved, what manner of persons ought ye to be in all holy conversation and godliness. Looking for and hasting unto the coming of the day of God, when the heavens being on fire shall be dissolved, and the elements shall melt with fervent heat. Nevertheless, we according to his promise look for new heavens and a new earth wherein dwelleth righteousness."

We turn to Isaiah lxv. 17, and read: "For, behold, I create new heavens and a new earth; and the former shall not be remembered nor come into mind. But be ye glad and rejoice forever in that which I create, for, behold, I create Jerusalem a rejoicing, and her people a joy And I will rejoice in Jerusalem, and joy in my people, and the voice of weeping shall be heard no more in her, nor the voice of crying." We turn to Rev. xxi. 1, and read, "And I saw a new heaven and a new earth, for the first heaven and the first earth were passed away and there was no more sea. And I, John, saw the Holy City, New Jerusalem, coming down from God out of heaven, prepared as a bride adorned for her husband. And I heard a great voice out of heaven, saying, Behold, the tabernacle of God is with men, and he will dwell with them, and they shall be his people, and God himself shall be with them, and be their God. And God shall wipe away all tears from their eyes, and there shall be no more death, neither sorrow nor crying, neither shall there be any more pain, for the former things are passed away. And he that sat upon the throne said, Behold, I make all things new. And he said unto me, write, for these words are true and faithful."

For proof that the dead shall live again, I turn to John v. 26, and read, "For as the Father hath life in himself; so he hath given to the Son, to have life in himself. And hath given him authority to execute judgment also because he is the Son of God. Marvel not at this, for the hour is coming, in which all that are in the graves shall hear his voice, and shall come forth; they that have done good [illegible] damnation." I turn to John viii. 12, and read, "Then spake Jesus unto them again, saying, I am the light of the world: (please hear him) he that followeth me shall not walk in darkness, but shall have the light of life." Whence then comes this gross darkness that covers the minds of the people? Jesus says, "he that followeth me shall not walk in darkness but shall have the light of life." We turn again to 1 John v. 10, and read. "He that believeth on the Son of God hath the witness in himself, he that believeth not God hath made him a liar, because he believeth not the record that God gave of his Son. And this is the record, that God hath given us eternal life and this life is in his Son. He that hath not the Son of God hath not life." (Eternal life).

Again we turn to John xvii. 1, and we read, "These words spake Jesus, and lifted up his eyes to heaven and said, Father, the hour is come; glorify thy Son, that thy Son may glorify thee. As thou hast given him power over all flesh, that he should give eternal life to as many as thou hast given him." Again, John ix. 39, "And this is the Father's will, which hath sent me, that of all which he hath given me, I should lose nothing, but should raise it up again at the last day! And this is the will of him that sent me, that every one which seeth the Son, and believeth on him may have everlasting life; and I will raise him up at the last day."

"God is his own interpreter," we need not go outside of his book to solve the great problems of life and death. We understood by his book that he created the universe and all things in it, he pronounced it "very good," Gen. xviii. 14, "Is anything too hard for the Lord?" He, who created man from the dust of the ground and gave him life, and for transgressing his holy law, turned him back again to his native element, can he not by the same word of his power, bring him back again to life? Job xix. 23, "O that my words were printed in a book. That they were graven with an iron pen, and lead in the rock forever. For I know that my Redeemer liveth, and that he shall stand at the latter day upon the earth. And though after my skin worms destroy this body, yet in my flesh shall I see God: whom I shall see for myself, and mine eyes shall behold, and not another; though my reins be consumed with me." Seek for the "light of life," in the book of God, not heeding what man shall say about it, for "The wisdom of this world is foolishness with God."—Joseph A. Philbrick.

Good, but not Pleasant to Live With.

'Yes, I suppose she's good—I know she is. But she isn't pleasant to live with.'

Only a fragment of conversation that reached the ear above the rattle and clangor of the electric car, yet how full of meaning they seem when the few chance words come back to us further on! 'Good, but not pleasant to live with.' Goodness that seemed undesirable; goodness that failed to accomplish its noblest mission because of this; goodness shorn of beauty and attractiveness, like the granite of the hills stripped of its gracious mantle of flowers and foliage. Ah, the sadness of it! The sadness and the loss!

We need to realize more vividly the necessity of being pleasant to live with, as well as faithful to life's higher obligations. We may accomplish our daily tasks painstakingly and well, and bear our full share of each day's burdens and perplexities, and yet by an unlovely spirit cause the very ones for whom we toil and sacrifice, to feel that what we do does not compensate for what we are—that the value of our service is overbalanced when placed the scale with the cloudy looks and sharp words which are its accompaniment.

Think a moment. Are you always 'pleasant to live with,' you who are so careful to do the extra tasks that others may be spared the burden? Do not impatient words slip from your lips even when your hands are busy with helpful acts? Is it by chance that you remind others of the sacrifices which you make in their behalf? And are you not somewhat given to praising yourself by holding up to disparagement some one who comes short of your measure of excellence? Are you as ready with excuses for others' faults as you are with condemnation? Have you reached the height of life where you can do good and forget it? Do smiles come more naturally to your lips than frowns? Do you speak the words which turn away wrath rather than those which [illegible]

'pleasant to live with!'

Selected Paragraphs.

The atheist who spent a few days with the saintly Fenelon remarked: "If I stay here much longer I shall become a Christian in spite of myself." Fenelon had used no word of controversy or solicitation. It was but the quiet, convincing argument of a holy life—a consistent walk and conversation.

"I tried to be a skeptic when I was a young man," said Cecil, "but my mother's life was too much for me." Let us know that a consistent life is a power anywhere and everywhere. The religion which keeps the speech pure and honest, the temper sweet and kindly, the actions considerate and unselfish; such a walk and conversation are a constant telling of the gospel story, of the real good news to men: and with strongest possible enforcement.

"My brethren," said an old African preacher, "a good example is the tallest kind of preaching." And he was right.

"There is an energy or moral suasion in a good man's life," says Dr. Chalmers, "passing the highest efforts of the orator's genius. The seen beauty of holiness speaks more eloquently of God and duty than the tongue of men and angels."

I know a man who went to Jerusalem out of mere curiosity and without believing in the Scriptures. He met a clergyman—a friend of mine—on his way in, who said to him: "What are you doing here in the Holy Land, an infidel?" "I have come to show up this humbug of a Holy Land," he replied, "and to tell all Christians what they ought to know—that the Bible is an imposition on the world's credulity." Having made the circuit of the Holy Land, he came out and again met my clerical friend. "Well, how did you find it," asked the clergyman. "I am going home," said the agnostic, "to advocate the divinity of the Scriptures. I am fully persuaded that the Bible is true. I went in a complete infidel; I have come out a Christian."

You will never be sorry for serving God; you may be very sorry for almost everything else. Says Joseph Berry: "There are men and women who declare their regret at almost every step in life they have taken. I could find married people who tell you they wished they had never been married, and single people who would tell you they wished they had; I could find carpenters who would say, 'The worst trade you could put a boy at is a carpenter's,' and doctors who would say, 'Better be a chimney sweep than a doctor;' and I can find a chimney sweep who would say, 'Better be anything else than a chimney sweep; mine is the dirtiest trade going.' Now, I am going to throw out a challenge: Will some one find me a person who will say, 'I wish I had never loved Christ?' Blessed be God, you can't do it; the consecrated life bears the test of experience. He saved me when I was a lad, and I began to preach the gospel when I was sixteen. He is the friend who has never failed me, who has never left me, who has come close in trouble, and has been nearest and dearest to me when I needed him most."

[illegible] of Israel. No. 93.

[illegible] of Israel are still at Ka[illegible] on your maps. It was [illegible] that Moses sent messen[illegible]. Can any [illegible] to the Israelites?

Do you remember the story of Jacob and Esau, and how Jacob got the birth right from Esau? They were twin brothers, but God saw what Esau's character would be when he grew to be a man and so he let the birthright go to Jacob. Jacob was the father of the twelve tribes of Israel, and Esau of the Edomite nation, so the Israelites and Edomites were near of kin, they were brother nations.

Moses wanted to know if the king of Edom would let the Israelites pass through his country by the king's highway, if they disturbed nothing and paid for even the water they might drink, but he sent back word that they should not go through, came out in strong force, to prevent them from entering the land, so the Israelites had to go by another route.

The Edomites have always treated the Israelites badly, so badly that the Lord says he has "indignation against them forever," (Mal. I. 4,) and will "cut them of forever," "for their violence against their brother Jacob." Obadiah ver. 10. It is thought that the Turks are Edomites, because it was to be the Edomites who were to have the Holy Land in their possession in the last days, and the Turks have it now.

From Kadesh the Israelites journeyed—not far from the land of Edom—and came to Mount Hor, where Aaron died. On the map you will see the word Arabah. This is the name of a great valley, east of this valley is a range of mountains, sandstone mountains. Mount Hor is the highest of them all, and has a double top. A white spot on "the dark surface of the mountain," is called the tomb of Aaron. On the eastern side of the mountain, at its base, are the ruins of ancient Petra. Moses, at the command of the Lord, took Aaron, and Eleazur his son, up into Mount Hor, stripped Aaron of his beautiful priestly garments and put them upon Eleazur, and Aaron died and they came down from the Mount, and all Israel mourned for Aaron. Thus ends our lesson in the 20th chapter of Numbers. We go now to the 21st.

King Arad, the Canaanite, has heard that the Israelites are coming by the same road that the spies came over, and he thinks he will beat them back, so he goes out with a great army and fights against them and takes some of them prisoners. The Israelites look to the Lord. They make a vow to him that "If he will deliver the Canaanites into their hand, they will utterly destroy their cities." The Lord hears them, and Canaanites are overthrown. The place was named Hormake. To get around the country of the Edomites, the Israelites had to take the road that came across the country from the Red Sea. It was a very difficult road, and the people again became discouraged, that they hardly knew what they were saying. They spake against God and against Moses. They wondered why they had been brought out of Egypt to die in the wilderness where there was no bread nor water. They had come to hate the very sight of the manna-bread, "angel's food," though it was.

Then the Lord sent serpents among them, whose fiery bite was sure death, but when the people repented, he bade Moses make a brazen serpent and put it on a pole, and every one that was bitten, was to look at the serpent of brass and live.

The Son of Man, our dear Savior, "has been lifted up just as the serpent was in the wilderness, that whosoever believeth on him should not perish but have eternal life." The wicked serpent, Satan, has bitten every one of us, dear children, by causing us to sin; his bite is certain death, unless we look to Jesus. Come to him, and get your sins all washed away. He is the true bread from heaven, that giveth life to the world.

Many places were passed, and at last they came to Beer. There the princes, at the command of the Lord through Moses, digged a well with their staves. Who ever heard of such a thing? They made a song about it and said,

"Spring up, O well,
Sing ye unto it;
The princes digged the well,
The nobles of the people digged it,
By the direction of the law-giver,
With their staves."

On and on they went till they came to the top of Pisgah. Messengers were then sent to the king of the Amorites asking permission to pass through his land, but Sihon would not let one of them set a foot on his territory, but gathered his people and went out to Israel in the wilderness, and fought them at Jahaz, was beaten and lost his country. Sihon had taken this country from the king of Moab. It was the first land to fall into the possession of [illegible] the last; under the leadership of Christ this same people are to conquer the whole earth; the territory outside of Canaan first, and then the Holy Land itself. "And Israel took all these cities, and Israel dwelt in the cities of the Amorites, in Heshbon, and in all the villages thereof."

The Amorites were driven out of other villages in Jazer, then the people turned and went up by the way of Bashan, and fought a great battle with Og, the king, at Edrei, and smote him and his sons and all his people, and possessed his land.

Og had 60 cities fenced with high walls, with gates and bars, and a great many unwalled towns, but all were taken, and men, women and children destroyed. Their cup of iniquity was full like that of the people who perished in the flood. Og and his people were Amorites. He himself was the last of the race of giants. His bedstead was of iron, nine cubits long and four cubits wide, or about 13½ feet long and 6 feet in width, taking the cubit to be 18 inches. It was probably the giant race to which Og belonged, who built the giant cities of Bashan, whose ruins are still to be seen. Immense rock slabs form the houses of these cities. How the builders ever moved these slabs from the quarries, and put them in place is a perfect mystery.

But our lesson is finished, for we have gone through the 20th chapter, from the 14th verse to the close, and have studied all of the 21st. Our next lesson will find the children of Israel encamped in the plains of Moab, on the east side of the river of Jordan, and just opposite the city of Jericho, for Jericho is across the river on the other side. It will be about Balaam, and the ass that talked,—a most wonderful lesson, and one that will greatly interest you. Numbers xxii. and xxiii.

Obituary.

Samuel J. McLenithan was born in Paris Township, Kent Co., Mich., Aug. 19, 1873; died Sept. 11, 1899; aged 24 years and 22 days. He was married to Miss Mary Terrel, Aug. 26, 1897, by Rev. J. H. Goshert. This happy marriage was blessed with one child. Mr. McLenithan was baptized Jan., 1895, and joined the U. B. church. Besides many relatives who deeply mourn their loss, he leaves a wide circle of friends who will always remember him as a bright, energetic young man, whose character was beyond reproach, and who lived an exemplary life."

This death was another one of the sudden, sad events, which warns us all of the brevity of human life. Mr. McLenithan had fed a horse he wished to use, some oats, another horse coming up behind, he threw a small stick at him, when the horse turned kicking him in the stomach; he crawled to the gate, but could go no farther, his wife hearing groans went to him, summoned help and after some time working over him they carried him to the house. He lived only a few hours, leaving the little 10 year old wife heart-broken; we never witnessed so sad a sight as she presented, reason almost dethroned, her tearless eyes staring so vacantly at the still, cold face, no moan, no tears. Oh tears, what a blessing they are when the heart is so sad. We tried to present the true hope of life to the grief stricken ones from James iv. 14. Oh, when will the work of the enemy cease? "Come Lord Jesus, come quickly."

"The funeral of the late Solomon J. Tanner, for ten years a member of the fire department of the city, was held yesterday afternoon in the Church of Christ, corner of Lyon and Barclay streets. The services were attended by the Masons, the Modern Woodmen and a detachment of the fire department. The three bodies of men escorted the remains from the residence on Crescent court to the church and thence to the Valley City cemetery, where the interment was made. Fire engine No. 2, which was formerly operated by the deceased, led the procession appropriately draped in black. The funeral sermon was preached by Rev. Woodward, of Dutton, assisted by the Rev. Mr. McArthur. The floral offerings were especially fine."—Grand Rapids Herald.

Six years ago last month I united Mr. and Mrs. Tanner in marriage, and it has been to them six happy years, since last February he has been traveling in the south and west searching for that coveted boon, health; but the dread disease consumption had done its fatal work, and a week before his death, the wife who had ministered to him since February, [illegible] gram to hasten to [illegible] dying in far off Denver. She reached him a few hours before his death, and every hour was spent by him, making arrangements for his burial and her future welfare, the next day he closed his eyes for the rest and sleep of death, and with her precious burden she started on her sad homeward journey, reaching Grand Rapids Wednesday evening, on Friday we spoke to a large concourse of people from Psa. xvii. 15. He leaves a wife and one brother. Several years ago I preached his father, mother and only sister's funeral, only one left of the family. Mr. Tanner was a very highly esteemed man, always faithful to his work, a true man everywhere.

Report.

Dear Restitution:

I am home again after an absence of nearly four weeks. On Sunday, Sept. 3rd, I with Brother and Sister Morse visited Morse's Mill and began a meeting. At first things looked gloomy, no one was there, but after while a few came, and at the afternoon service more came, and by evening we had to add bench after bench, as our meeting was held in an old store building, and by Sunday, the 10th, the house was filled with eager listeners. We broke bread with the people at this place.

There are fifteen or sixteen members at this place, and seem to be awakened by my visit to them, and requested that I should visit them again. We gave them the promise that we would return some time. They also remembered that they "That preach the gospel should live of the gospel." From here we went to De Soto, and spoke in a tent. The people at this place are very much prejudiced. A "Holiness Meeting" of four weeks had just closed and they had had about all they could stand. We tried it about one week and then gave it up. Brother Morse has spent several hundred dollars trying to get the truth before the people and they would not. Brother Hatch, from Indiana, and Brother Eychaner have each visited this place two times, and this is my second trip. We had only two or three regular listeners, the audience changing every night, but I trust in God for the results, as was said, "Paul may plant, Apollos water, but God gives the increase." Brother Morse has done his duty, the good seed has been sown, and we wait God's time for its growth.

May God bless the dear isolated ones, is my prayer.

The World to Come.

The Apostle Peter divides all time from the creation of Adam, into three grand divisions and calls these divisions "worlds." From the creation of Adam to the flood is called "The World that was;" from the flood to the second coming of the Lord is called "This Present Evil World;" and all after that is called, "The World to Come." I have had frequent occasions in speaking on this subject, to remark that many great and important events will take place in the next age or world to come.

The "World that was" or the time before the flood was put in subjection to the angels: but it seems that even the angels were not capable of restoring fallen man to his original estate, for sin became so prevalent that the world that was, was ended by a mighty flood, that destroyed all mankind except those that were saved in Noah's ark.

Then began what Peter calls "This Present Evil World." It is not ruled by angels, nor even by God himself, but in this age God has "left the nations to walk after their own way." The result is that man has not been able to lift himself up, or to restore himself to his former condition: but it seems from statistics of crimes, and from the teaching of the Scriptures also, that this present evil world is becoming more evil.

After "this Present evil World" comes "the World to Come." It is future to us; therefore, all we know of it is what the prophets have said. But, as all the prophets, from Samuel and those that follow after have foretold something of the "Age to Come," "World to Come," we surely can know something of the "World to Come."

We learn from Heb. ii., that the "World to Come" was not (will not be) put in subjection to the angels, for one in a certain place has testified, saying, "What is man that thou art mindful of him, or the Son of Man that thou visitest him? Thou hast made him (Jesus) a little lower than the angels. Thou crownest him with glory and honor, and didst set him over the works of thy hands. Thou hast put all things in subjection under his feet. * * * But now, we see not yet all things put under him. But we see Jesus, who was made a little lower than the angels for the suffering of death, crowned with glory and honor, that he by the grace of God should taste of death for every man." We learn from this chapter (Heb. ii.), 1st, that Paul is speaking of the "World to Come." 2nd, That it was not (will not be) put in subjection under the angels. 3rd, That the world to come will be put under "man" and "the Son of Man" (Jesus) or under Jesus, and his brethren who are called sons of God, and joint heirs with Christ in the rulership of the age to come. The whole creation groaneth and travaileth in pain, waiting for the manifestation of the sons of God. (Jesus and his brethren).

There are many passages of Scripture in which the present tense is put for the future tense, that is, "God calleth those things that be not as though they were." Rom. iv. 17. "Thou hast put all things in subjection under his feet," reads as though the thing was done, but "we see not yet all things put under his feet." Therefore, the putting of all things under him is yet in the future, and will not take place until the next age, or "World to Come." But we see Jesus crowned with glory and honor, an event which will not take place until the world to come. "This present evil world" does not honor Jesus. Nay, more than half of the inhabitants of the earth have never even heard of him, and of those who have heard of him, only a few care anything about him.

One of the principal events which will take place in the "world to come" will be the healing of the nations. John the Revelator after he saw the new heaven and the new earth established, and the Holy City come down from God out of heaven; after he had seen all these, he says he saw a pure river of water of life, proceeding out of the throne of God and of the Lamb. In the midst of the street of it, and on either side of the river was the tree of life, which bear twelve manner of fruit, and yielded her fruit every month, and the leaves of the tree were for the healing of the nations. It seems that the nations, as they exist now, (in this present evil world) are sick.

We as a people divide up political parties and yell ourselves hoarse for some party that is going to cure our own nation, but it is all of no use. The evil influences that are tending toward the downfall of the nation still continues, and no difference which party is successful at the polls, the disease continues. Yet, amid all our adverse surroundings, the Christian should not lose courage. Looking a little distance in the future through the prophetic lens we can see the present state of things terminate in a mighty conflict between capital and labor, Jas. v., and the brethren are exhorted to be patient when they see these signs, for the coming of the Lord is nigh. The Lord is sure to come. The manifestation of the sons of God will take place in the age to come, and the groaning creation which is waiting for this manifestation will get relief, and not till then. Indeed, in God's plan, the very purpose of the "world to come" is the healing of the nations. It is God's set time for the fulfillment of his promises to Abraham to bless all the families of the earth. The Holy City, Jerusalem, will shine forth in all the splendor and glory of God. The kingdom of God will be established, and the nations of them which are saved shall walk in the light of it: and the kings of the earth do bring (will bring) their glory and honor into it; and they shall bring the glory and honor of the nations into it. Glorious city; Glorious age! Glorious work of blessing and healing the nations. Glorious will be our lot if we share with our Lord the glory of blessing and healing the nations in the world to come.

W. F. Mamox.

"Great men have found no royal road to their triumphs. It is always the old road, by way of industry and perseverance. A constant struggle, a ceaseless battle to bring success from inhospitable surroundings, has ever been the price of all great achievement. The man who has not fought his way up to his own loaf, and does not bear the scar of desperate conflict, does not not know the meaning of success."

To the Brethren:

I will say, that if any who sent to me for my little tracts failed to receive them, will let me know, I will send again, or to any others who wish to distribute tracts, as we have quite a good supply yet, and we want them out in the field. This is a good time to scatter tracts and sow the good seed, as the night is far spent and the day is at hand.

Works of Bro. Wiley Jones.

Twelve Words, or the true meaning of Hell, Soul, Spirit, Ghost, Paradise, Incorruption, Incorruptible Immortal, Immortality, Forever, Everlasting, Eternal, and their originals as learned by their uses in the Bible. A tract of 40 pages, sold formerly at 10 cents a copy.

The Gospel of the Kingd [illegible] 8 page, double column tract—sold formerly at 10 cents a dozen.

Early Lessons, suitable for old and young, 30 pages, sold formerly for 10 cents a copy.

These works are excellent for use by those who wish to do missionary labor, and we offer them at such a low price that they should be sold in a short time. Bro. Jones had large editions of these tracts printed, and he died suddenly, and his Widow being in feeble health, we have undertaken the task of selling them. Her income is quite limited, and all that can be got [illegible] of the sales goes to her [illegible] expenses. [illegible] these tracts you get several times the worth of your money, and also aid a worthy Sister, who will thank you for it.

Assorted package 30 cents per pound. Gospel of the Kingdom, done at 25 cents per pound.

The Gospel of the Kingdom.

Advocated in a series of Ten Discourses. A Volume of 283 pages, cloth 25 cents, leather bound, embossed, and gilt edges, $1.00. By Wiley Jones. This book is so well known that it is only necessary to announce that it is for sale, to insure a market for it. We have undertaken to dispose of these books for the Widow of our lamented Brother Jones, and while getting them at this low price, you at the same time will help Sister Jones to much-needed money.

Popular Lectures by M. Joblin.

Brethren and Sisters, Have you loved ones who think sincerity will save them? Have you friends who think they worship acceptably while ignorant of God's promises? Have you acquaintances with false hopes of heaven, or who believe themselves immortal by nature, or who think their sins are forgiven, although they are ignorant of the Law of Pardon, or who have no use for a God who consigns sinners to Eternal Torment, and are ignorant of Jehovah's beneficent purpose to fill the earth with his glory and bestow Eternal Life upon believers of the Gospel, so they can enjoy it for ever? If so, send for Popular Lectures by Bro. Joblin, entitled:—"The Kingdom of God;" "Old Mother Earth to Be Born Again;" "Strangers from the Covenants of Promise;" "Vain Worship;" "No Immortality Out of Christ;" "Hope Begotten by the Resurrection of Christ;" "God's Love and Solicitude for Mankind;" and "What Shall We Do to be Saved?"

Important Notices.

All persons addressing us should give [illegible] name, post office, county and state, plainly and distinctly.

All letters should be addressed to "The Restitution, Plymouth, Marshall, Co., Ind."

Remittance should be sent by bank or postoffice money order, or registered letter. Money sent in either of the above ways is at our risk, money sent loose in letters is at the risk of the sender. It is folly to think that you can fold bills in a letter so that no one can tell it, for one who handles much mail matter can almost invariably tell a letter with money in it. Take warning and send safely.

All remittances should be made payable to the order of "The Restitution."

We cannot hold ourselves responsible for the return of manuscripts. Authors should preserve a copy for themselves.

In ordering books or tracts get the latest copy of the paper you have and order only what you see advertized in that.

When desiring a change of address, give both your old and new address.

By complying strictly with the above you will save us much annoyance, and your order will be much more promptly attended to.

A WAR ATLAS.

The exact locality of many places mentioned in the news of the War between the United States and Spain is not known to the general reader, and so recourse is had to geographies. We have decided to offer our readers a complete War Atlas of sixteen pages of maps, showing all the territory where a conflict can occur, besides some valuable statistics. This will be mailed to you for 25 cts. Send orders at once, and get the position of the places named that you can better understand how the various complications will affect the nations of the world. Poetry.

The Gold of Hope.

Bright shines the sun, but brighter after rain
The clouds that darken make the sky more clear.
So rest is sweeter when it follows pain,
And the sad parting makes our friends more dear.

'Tis well it should be thus; our Father knows
The things that work together for our good,
We draw a sweetness from the bitter woes
We would not have all sunshine if we could.

The days with all their beauty and their light
Come from the dark and into dark return,
Day sparkles earth, but heaven shines through the night,
When in the blue a thousand stars are burn.

So runs the law, the law of recompense,
That binds our life on earth and heaven in one;
Faith cannot live when all is sight and sense,
But faith can live and sing when these are gone.

We grieve and murmur, for we can but see
The single thread that flies in silence by;
When if we only saw the things to be,
Our lips would breathe a song and not a sigh.

Wait then, my soul, and edge the darkening cloud
With the bright gold that hope can always lend;
And if to-day thou art with sorrow bowed,
Wait till tomorrow and thy grief shall end.

And when we reach the limit of our days,
Beyond the reach of sin, and sorrow, and of night,
Then shall our every look and voice be praise
To him who shines, our everlasting light.

—Henry Burton.

Communicated.

Conversation and Company.

"As in water, face answereth to face, so the heart of man to man." Prov. xxvii. 19.

Strange are the unfathomable mysteries of Jehovah. Man stands at the head of all his great creative power, and with all his intellectual endowments, great scope of reason and can frame his thoughts in words, yet God looks upon him as the flower of the grass, whose life is but a span and passes like the weaver's shuttle, and man with all his science and art could not keep from going down the steep incline to the prison-house of death to slumber, while o'er him rolled the cycles of ages, and why of this sad fate? Because one man transgressed God's law, and sin entered the world, and death by sin, because one man believed the Serpent's falsehood, "Thou shalt not surely die;" because the evil one visited the Garden Home. But God has provided a way for man to be released from the chains of darkness by one man Christ Jesus, who has thrown around us his love and extended to us his mercy and given us a law to obey, which makes us a Son of God and wills us an heirship in the kingdom. Kindly and tenderly he speaks to his children and says, "My son, attend to my words; incline thine ear unto my sayings: Let them not depart from thine eyes; keep them in the midst of thine heart: For they are life unto those that find them, and health to all their flesh. Keep thy heart with all diligence; for out of it are the issues of life. Put away from thee a forward mouth; and perverse lips, put far from thee." Prov. iv. 20. "Keep thy tongue from evil and thy lips from speaking guile." Psa. xxxiv. 13. For "Death and life are in the power of the tongue." Prov. xviii. 21. Is it possible, that little member—the tongue, holds the power of life and death, can it be, that it utters the words of the heart, "For out of the abundance of the heart the mouth speaketh," or "As in water, face answereth to face, so the heart of man to man."

Go with me and let us visit man in his different stations of life: go to the farms, work shops and crowded streets of the cities, go from the palace to the hovel and what do you hear? Ah, let us come closer, listen, but to turn away in disgust when you hear the vile words fall from the lips of the world's church members, but let us come nearer still, yes, to those who profess to belong to the little flock—"The Church of God," and see if we have purified our words and bridled our tongues, not has my brother, but have I? "Behold we put bits in the horses' mouths, that they may obey me; and we turn about the whole body; behold also the ships, which though they be so great and are driven of fierce winds, yet are they turned about with a very small helm, whithersoever the governor listeth; even so our tongue is a little member and boasteth great things. Behold, how great a matter a little fire kindleth and the tongue is a fire, a world of iniquity. So is the tongue among our members, that it defileth the whole body, and set on fire the course of nature; and it is set on fire of hell." Jas. iii. 3. Ah, who can fail to understand these words of the Apostle James he knew man's weakness and warned the child of the heavenly King—Beware, before you is life and death, guard well thy words and they will lead thee safely home.

"Doth a fountain send forth at the same place, sweet water and bitter." How beautiful are the illustrations of God. He shows the impossibilities. There was a fountain opened in the house of David 1900 years ago, for sin and uncleanness and you and I can drink of its water today. That fountain only sent forth sweet water whose example is for us to follow, are you, am I?

"Can the fig tree, my brethren, bear olive berries?" No, and neither does the child of God bear those bitter, fiery fruits of iniquity. "Either a vine figs." Ah! no we gather grapes from the vine and figs from the tree; they bare true to the name; no deception there, and so with the servants of Christ, his fruits are meekness, gentleness, patience, long-suffering, love: and the fruits of the evil are hatred, malice, envying, evil-speaking, back-biting. "Either make the tree good and his fruit good: or else make the tree corrupt and his fruit corrupt; for the tree is known by his fruit." Matt. xiii. 33.

"So can no fountain both yield salt water and fresh." Before us today flows two fountains, one finds its source in God's love, and the other in the evil tempter. One sends forth the sweet water of life, and the other bitter water of death; from which are we drinking? One leads to the throne in glory, and the other to the abode of unrighteousness.

"Who is a wise man, and endowed with knowledge among you? Let him show out of a good conversation, his works with meekness of wisdom." Jas. iii. 12. Hark! what words are these that come floating from the Psalmist: what warning comes from the pen of Jehovah? "A forward heart shall depart from me; I will not know a wicked person. Whoso privily slandereth his neighbor, him will I cut off; him that hath an high look and a proud heart will not I suffer. He that worketh deceit shall not dwell within my house; he that telleth lies shall not tarry in my sight. I will early destroy all the wicked of the land, that I may cut off all wicked doers from the city of the Lord." Psa. ci. 4.

With this warning before us, portraying the fate of an evil tongue, how careful we should be; for death lies in the tongue. Are we led about by the bridle of iniquity, whose reins are in the hands of the wicked adversary? Are we turned about with the deceptive helm whithersoever the governor of unrighteousness willeth, midst the angry waves of deception in this cold, friendless world? Ah, Jesus is walking on the troubled waters now, he has seen a loved one struggling to keep above sorrow's wave; he has seen the unmerciful, the unsympathizing cast upon him unjust and grievous loads to sink him from sight, but Jesus whispers, "Peace be still."

"Where no wood is, there the fire goeth out; so where there is no tale-bearing strife ceaseth; as coals are to burning coals and wood to fire; so is a contentious man to kindle strife." Psa. xxvi. 20. Think of the strife at present among every class, think of the cold, harsh words: think of the heartaches, the tears caused by perhaps our dearest friend. Ah, many a life has gone out, and the cause lies at the door of some one they cherished. All through life they may have been their care, and at last at death's door to say the bitter farewell. There is many a lonely grave unmarked. In foreign land, because some one's love grew cold, because some one was forgotten, because some one's duty was left undone.

Not only our words need the purity of the sacred waters of life, but our company needs the heavenly influence of Paul, Peter and the beloved John, the bosom friend of Jesus, and the willing hands and sympathizing hearts of only those who are like Mary, Martha, and the mother of Jesus. When I see those who claim they are, or have been adopted into Christ by the separating command of God, buried and dead to the world, then to cast aside the robe of righteousness, and give their lives, their company to the world and worldly associates, my heart sinks within me. When they give their time, their company which belongs to the Master and his cause, to those who are their enemies and robbing them of eternal life, I am forced to cry out, How long, O Lord? "Come quickly."

Think of a child of God, one of the Christ, one who is an heir with Jesus, at places with the world, associating with the world for company's sake, when the warning comes from the voice of Jehovah, "Come out from among them and be ye separate." Think of those who are living in open condemnation to God, those who shun the humble followers of the lowly Nazarene, and give their time, company and association to the "Lovers of self, boasters, proud." Those who blaspheme and swear, unthankful and unholy; the traitorous, heady, and those that "Love pleasure more than they love God." When the Spirit of Jesus says to you and me, "From such turn away;" and Paul says, "Do not company." Those who are striving for the inheritance are a separate people. Pilgrims and strangers seeking a city whose builder and maker is God. Some who know me well may ask, "Why do you not give us some thing on doctrinal points?" Ah, my dear ones, you perhaps are very particular when it comes to what you should believe, but when it comes to what you must do and what you must teach others to do, you turn a deaf ear, but every word that is penned some lonely watcher from God's Word, will come up as a witness against you in that day, if you do not obey. Solemn thought.

God's chosen ones have been and are a separate people, and Jesus the author and foundation of our faith says, "Ye are not of the world even as I am not of the world." Dearly beloved, here is your pattern, here is your example; and we see the love, purity and example of the Man of Sorrow, shining in the lives of his followers, sharing the reproaches, enduring his suffering and sending out his warning "Come out and be ye separate:" for "Ye are not your own, ye are bought with a price." Think of his noble immortal life spent in teaching you and I the way of life, think of those eyes so often filled with tears, that poor heart that was broken with untold grief and sorrow. O, that blood that was shed to buy you back from death, to buy those loved ones of whom you have sadly seen laid away with this precious redeeming price. Can you, will you heed his voice? I am writing this for the benefit of the young people of the faith; I am writing this for the benefit of our own young people of Southwest Kansas and Oklahoma, those who may be giving ear and heeding the flatteries worldliness. I have seen the result, I have witnessed the folly, the fatal sin of worldly associations, not only among the young, but painful to say the old. And now just a few words to them.

Let your words, your lives, be a living epistle known and read of all men; teaching the lambs of the flock that there is no time for worldliness; teach them to be sober, grave, temperate, sound in faith and in doctrine, showing to the world that Christianity is not a sham mockery, that they are to shun the followers of Satan giving no place to the evil tempter, "Bearing one another's burdens and so fulfil the law of Christ." If we only will do this

VOLUME XLVIII. PLYMOUTH, INDIANA, OCTOBER 11, 1899. NUMBER 38.

The Restitution.

THE RESTITUTION advocates the final "restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint-heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ, and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for remission of sins, pre-requisites of the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for the salvation.

—an example which we have not found ourselves able to follow.

* * * * * * *

In Berlin, a few years ago, I read a speech which frankly urged the expulsion of the Jews from Germany; and the agitator's reason was as frank as his proposition. It was this; that eighty-five per cent. of the successful lawyers of Berlin were Jews, and that about the same percentage of the [illegible] sorts in Germany was in the hands of the Jewish race!

Isn't it an amazing confession? It was but another way of saying that in a population of 18,000,000, of whom only 500,000 were registered as Jews, eighty-five per cent. of the brains and honesty was lodged in the Jews.

I must insist upon the honesty—it is an essential of successful business, taken by and large. Of course it does not rule out rascals entirely, even among Christians, but it is a good working rule, nevertheless. The speaker's figures may have been inexact, but the motive of persecution stands out as clear as day.

The man claimed that in Berlin the banks, the newspapers, the theatres, the great mercantile, shipping, mining, and manufacturing interests, the big army and city contracts, the tramways, and pretty much all other properties of high value, and also the small businesses—were in the hands of the Jews.

He said the Jew was pushing the Christian to the wall all along the line; that it was all a Christian could do to scrape together a living; and that the Jew must be banished, and soon—there was no other way of saving the Christians.

Here in Vienna, last autumn, an agitator said that all these disastrous details were true of Austria-Hungary also; and in fierce language he demanded the expulsion of the Jews. When politicians come out without a blush and read the baby act in this frank way, unrebuked, it is a very good indication that they have a market back of them, and know where to fish for votes.—Union Gospel News.

Future of Austria-Hungary.

Bitter race quarrels raging in Austria-Hungary have led European politicians to predict the ultimate absorption of the two parts by Germany and Russia. There are many people who believe that the Kaiser and the Czar have an understanding on the subject. At present the Germans and Slavs hate each other so cordially that they are held together only by their common affection for Emperor Franz Josef. He is old and when he dies the differences will become more keen. In Austria itself the Czechs and Germans are at daggers' points all the time. The Austrians are Germans and in sympathy with the German empire. On the other hand the Czechs and the Magyars have more in common with the great Slavonic nation to their north and east. At present the situation is not ripe for a dissolution, but when it comes, as is likely after the death of the Emperor, the general belief of European statesmen is that independence of the parts will be short.

China Looks Only to Japan.

London, Sept. 30.—A Peking letter published here asserts that Russian ascendency there is a thing of the past, and that the Japanese are having all their own way, the Chinese having put themselves unreservedly in the hands of the Japanese for the remodelling of their army and navy. The correspondent adds that as soon as the Japanese battleships and cruisers building abroad are completed Japan will seize Corea, and, with Chinese help, endeavor to drive out Russia from Port Arthur, Manchuria, and northern China.

Mark Twain Concerning the Jews.

It may seem unusual and out of harmony with the "Graces of things" to have an American humorist turn from his fun-making to discuss seriously a race of people that are absorbing the attention of the students of prophecy, but we have an instance before us. Mr. Samuel M. Clemens, known to literature as "Mark Twain," has contributed to the September number of Harper's Magazine a most interesting article entitled "Concerning the Jews." While this author has devoted much of his life to amusing the reading public, he is nevertheless noted as a keen observer and one skilled in describing character, hence these qualities add greatly to the value of this article. We take the following extracts therefrom:

"The Jew is not a disturber of the peace of any country. Even his enemies will concede that. He is not a loafer, he is not a sot, he is not a brawler nor a rioter, he is not quarrelsome. In the statistics of crime his presence is conspicuously rare—in all countries. With murder and other crimes of violence he has but little to do; he is a stranger to the hangman. In the police court's daily long roll of "assaults" and "drunk and disorderlies" his name seldom appears.

That the Jewish home is a home in the truest sense is a fact which no one will dispute. The family is knitted together by the strongest affections; its members show each other every due respect; and reverence for the elders is an inviolate law of the house.

The Jew is not a burden on the charities of the state nor of the city; these could cease from their functions without affecting him. When he is well enough, he works; when he is incapacitated, his own people take care of him. And not in a poor and stingy way, but with a fine and large benevolence.

His race is entitled to be called the most benevolent of all the races of men. A Jewish beggar is not impossible, perhaps; such a thing may exist, but there are few men that can say they have seen that spectacle.

The Jew has been staged in many uncomplimentary forms, but, so far as I know, no dramatist has done him the injustice to stage him as a beggar. Whenever a Jew has real need to beg, his people save him from the necessity of doing it. The charitable institutions of the Jews are supported by Jewish money, and amply.

The Jews make no noise about it; it is done quietly; they do not pester and harass us for contributions; they give us peace, and set us an example tremblingly, fearing to lean upon him? Trust him! You ask the neighbor over yonder to trust you and he does, and he knows you will pay.

"Trust in the Lord." Have confidence in him. He will honor his checks. He will feed you while you work for him.

"Trust in the Lord and do good and verily thou shalt be fed." There is no mistake about it. That "verily" [illegible] young "ravens" when they cry. He clothes the lilies and the grass, "will he not much more clothe you, O ye of little faith?"

The text makes one ashamed. We so often fear to spend money for good. "Will we have enough left for this or that if we give to the poor?" "Will the taxes be paid if we send money to the Jews?" "If we pay for so many Resurrexions, where will the means come from to buy needful books?" If we give to the church and the evangelist fund how repair our houses?" But there is the answer to all these questions. "Trust in the Lord and do good and verily thou shalt be fed." Let the money go when it is needed and in unexpected ways he will send what we must have for all the rest. He is a God of Truth. His Word is never broken. What he promises he performs. Lord, thou hast promised, to thee do we look!

S. ROXANA WINCE.

Trust in the Lord.

"Trust in the Lord and do good, and verily thou shalt be fed."

Is'nt that check good? Then why not present it at the bank of heaven? Why go on worrying from day to day because of an empty larder? Or have you not trusted while doing the Master's work? Have you gone out

Notice is hereby given that a meeting of the Stockholders of the Christian Publishing Association will be held at the office of THE RESTITUTION, Plymouth, Ind. on Nov. 18, 1899 at 2:00 P. READER, have you a favorite cistern? If so, beware! God may break it.

GOSPEL provisions ought to quicken our appetites, rule our desires, animate our hopes, and give energy to our prayers. They are furnished to this end.

THE love of God, in one sense, makes a man poor, for it constrains him to resign all; but in another sense it makes him rich, for it gives a good title to all things.

WHEN affliction comes in contact with guilt, the experience is gloomy and distressing indeed. He who would be happy in affliction, must keep a good conscience toward God.

SALVATION begins with knowledge, the process is carried on through faith, is connected with obedience and culminates at the resurrection in immortality with eternal glory.

THOSE who are acquainted with Brother A. H. Zilmer will be pained to hear that he is undergoing a severe spell of Malarial fever, having been confined to his bed since Sept. 21.

WE enjoyed a few hours visit with Bro. F. L. Austin last Wednesday evening, he being here on his way to Culver to preach the funeral of Sister Fetters, who died last week. Bro. Austin intends to evangelize some the coming year, and will work part of the time in Illinois.

"MY SON, if thou will receive my words, and hide my commandments with thee, so that thou incline thine ear unto wisdom, and apply thine heart to understanding; yea, if thou criest after knowledge, and liftest up thy voice for understanding; if thou seekest her as silver, and searchest for as for hid treasures,—then shalt thou understand the fear of the Lord, and find the knowledge of God."

THE only difference in the condition of things in South Africa is the advance of the Boers to their frontiers, and the hurrying forward of British forces to meet them. War is not declared, and some think it will be averted notwithstanding the great preparations. The delay is an advantage to England, as the Boers sent to the front have poor provision supplies, and some threaten to return to their homes if not better cared for.

AGAIN the Jewish people are made to realize the race prejudice that has so long held its own in spite of the march of civilization. In a province in Austria a young Jew was suspected of the murder of a girl, and the Anti-Semites seized upon the case to arouse the old hatred, declaring that the body of the girl had been drained of its blood for ritualistic purposes, claiming that the Jews used the blood of a Gentile girl in their ceremonies. The jury found a verdict on circumstantial evidence, and not only found him guilty of murder, but that the motive was to secure the blood for the above named gruesome use, and the man is sentenced to be hanged.

CHRIST says the children of the first resurrection are to be like the angels, who are holy, immortal, happy, obedient, worshipful, glorified. If we consider that in one sense, as Bride, joint-possessors and companions of the Christ of God, the redeemed from among men will be exalted above angels,—we will appreciate what the Apostle calls the High Calling of God in Christ Jesus. Let us strive to be more and more like angels now, who hearken to Jehovah's voice and do his commandments, and not wait altogether, for the transformation in the future. This, in fact, is essential to a change like to their incorruptible nature.

IF we give back to God in gratitude what he gives us in mercy, we aresure to enjoy it.

GUILT will make a feather bed hard; but peace of mind will make a straw bed soft and easy.

THAT our readers may know the kind of language used by John Alexander Dowie of the so-called "Zion" at Chicago, Ill., we quote herewith some expressions used by him, and leave you to form your own conclusions as to how much of the gospel is contained in them. He has lately began what he calls "a three-months' holy war against the hosts of hell in Chicago." He is in this case talking about his work of demolishing the Christian Ministers of the city. Regarding D. L. Moody he says he is a "two-faced liar and a hypocrite," calls him "Molasses Moody! Curses on him." Dr. Henson he styles "A dirty boy" and "a clerical clown." Bishop Fowler he calls "a miserable liar." Chicago physicians are called "a collection of curs and cowards." The editor of the Interior, a Presbyterian paper he says is "the most wicked and willful ministerial liar in America," and is akin to "the dogs of the press, the skunks of medical swindlers, the canting sorcerers of the churches." In his Sunday discourse he scolds his own members, those who have failed to pay in to him the amount he demands of them, and in the course of his remarks says, "There sit before me with holy John faces a lot of hypocrites, a lot of low-down thieves and dirty robbers. You have not been giving your lawful tithes, your sworn tithes, to the storehouse of Zion. You have lied; you have stolen: you have held up God. Why don't you keep your oath to your Maker and give your tithes to Zion? Because you are wickedly selfish; you are thieves. Get out of Zion, you perjurers, you lejeune brutes. I do not want you here. I will pray to God that your houses may burn up tonight and that you and your wives and children may perish in them, for I want none of such a breed on earth."

If Dowie's claims of divine guidance be true, it is hard for us to reconcile his words and action with the teachings of God's Word. Fancy Christ or one of the apostles using such language! And we are told that many of the "testimonies" at his meetings are vile and indecent in the extreme. However he may not be able to control all of his followers, and we simply give some of his own language and leave you to draw your own conclusions.

FROM the Chicago Tribune of Oct. 1, we clip the following relative to an article of considerable length that appears in the October number of the Cosmopolitan. The entire article is well worth the cost of the Magazine to any who are interested in the work of combatting the errors of these "Christian Science" people. Following is the extract:

"In the October Cosmopolitan Mark Twain turns the keen edge of his satire against the tenets of Christian Science. A part of his article is delightfully humorous and a part is altogether serious, but the whole is an expose of Mrs. Eddy's weak points. Converts to the new creed will probably accuse the humorist of sacrilege, but the general verdict will be that he is reasonably fair in many of his conclusions. After quoting at considerable length from Mrs. Eddy's book he remarks: "It is the first time since the dawn-days of creation that a voice has gone crashing through space with such a placid and complacent confidence and command." Mark thinks that if the Christian Scientist ever stops with being merely the equal of the Deity it is not clearly provable by his "Christian Science Amended Bible." In the usual Bible the Deity recognizes pain, disease, and death as facts, but the Christian Scientist knows better and is not diffident about saying so.

The hypothetical event that leads Mark up to these observations is a slight accident in which he falls over a cliff seventy-five feet high and defaces a number of boulders at the bottom. Incidentally he becomes "an incoherent series of compound fractures." He immediately finds himself under the delusion that he is hurt. His friends send for a Christian Science healer, who gives him absent treatment during the following night and who calls the next morning to assure him that "pain is unreal; hence pain cannot hurt." When the nurse steps on the cat's tail the cat makes remarks indicative of pain, but the healer denies the evidence and leaves Mark wondering what is the matter with the cat, anyway. This gives an opportunity to introduce the fundamental doctrines of Christian Science, which the author does with a humorous nebulosity that amounts to most effective satire. By the time the patient is thoroughly converted the healing begins:

"Under the powerful influence of the near treatment and the absent treatment together, my bones were gradually retreating inward and disappearing from view. The good work took a brisk start now and went on quite swiftly. My body was diligently straining and stretching, this way and that to accommodate the process of restoration, and every minute or two I heard a dull click inside and knew that the two ends of a fracture had been successfully joined. This muffled clicking, and gritting, and grinding, and gasping continued during the next three hours and then stopped—the connections had all been made. All except dislocations; there were only seven of these—hips, shoulders, knees, neck—so that was soon over; one after another they slipped into their sockets with a sound like pulling a distant cork, and I jumped up as good as new, as to framework, and sent for the horse doctor."

For it seems Christian Science had not been quite equal to curing a stomach ache and a cold in the head, and the horse doctor had to be intrusted with these. Mark's conclusion is that Christian Science had better confine itself to surgery. As the healer charged a dollar apiece for the mending of the 234 fractures he got her to repeat her assurance that "everything is imaginary except mind," and then gave her an imaginary check. "Now she is suing me for substantial dollars," he says. "It looks inconsistent."

Millennial Blessedness.

To some minds it appears impossible that flesh and blood can live without sinning, or transgressing the Law of God. If such an idea were correct, it would seem to reflect on the wisdom of God. It was he that constituted man thus. And more than this, it would contradict his own statement, when he had finished the work of creation: "God saw everything that he had made, and, behold, it was very good." How could man, the chief of God's created works, have been very good, if, from the nature of his constitution he could not keep the Law of God under which he was placed? God's arrangement with the man showed that not only could he keep the law, but that he ought to have kept it. That being so, it would be a reflection on to have required a sinless obedience to his law from a being who could not comply with it from a faulty constitution. It would have been mocking the man to hold out to him the hope of living forever under such circumstances. But who would dare to make that charge? Yet it is done; and the man does it who insists on the necessity of sin and suffering and death on the subjects of the kingdom of God in the Millennial Age, simply because they will be flesh and blood.

THE JUSTICE OF GOD

The little we will yet write, will be for the purpose of showing that the Apocalyptic scenes which were shown to John for the information of his servants are not compatible with the continued reign of sin and death, even in a mitigated form. Listen to the Spirit in John, regarding the period referred to: "And he showed me a pure river of water of life, clear as crystal, proceeding out of and of the Lamb." Ezekiel the prophet was also shown a similar river. The one which the prophet saw was a literal river, the waters of which were to heal the waters of the Dead Sea; so that in it fishes in abundance would live. They would give life and fertility wherever they would flow. The river which John saw, however, was not literal; they were symbolic waters, representing from God. Jesus explains this in John's gospel. He said, "Whosoever drinketh of the water that I shall give him, shall never thirst; but the water that I shall give him shall be in him a well of water springing up into everlasting life," iv. 14. He says again, "He that believeth on me, as the Scriptures hath said, out of his belly shall flow rivers of living water. But this spake he of the Spirit which they that believed on him were to receive; for the Spirit was not yet given; because Jesus was not yet glorified, vii. 38, 39. We can see from the above Scriptures that with which every member of the New Jerusalem corporation will be invested is symbolized by the river of water of life which John saw. The river seen in vision by Ezekiel we understand will be a literal river proceeding from under the threshold of a literal temple to be built when Jesus comes back to the Holy Land. The land will be made a glorious Paradise, the admiration of the whole earth; and in the capital city, built upon the site of the city where David and Solomon reigned, will "the house of prayer for all nations be erected,—from under which the will issue. But the river of John's vision will be a river of Spirit power and life which will flow from the glorified Christ and his Bride, to bless and refresh, with its life-giving, and life-preserving streams, the mortal subjects of the kingdom. Indeed it will be that spirit that will give fertility, life and beauty, not only to the Holy Land, but also to the whole habitable. The promise of the Spirit will then be fulfilled: "I will give unto him that is athirst of the Fountain of

THE SPIRIT OF LIFE

THE SPIRIT POWER

BEAUTIFUL RIVER

THE WATER OF LIFE FREELY."

Each one of the constituents of the Bride of Christ will have become a fountain, from which will flow the living water. This river is seen to originate in the Infinite One, and is a never-failing source—it is from the throne of God and the Lamb." John also saw "in the midst of the street of it," on either side of the river—

THE TREE OF LIFE.

This interesting scene takes us away back to the sinless time when "the Lord God planted a garden eastward in Eden." John's vision shows Paradise Restored, after six thousand years' reign, and punishment of sin; but it will be on a much larger scale. The Tree of Life is also restored; but in the restoration there will be many trees—they are to be on both sides of the river at the same time. We take the literal of Ezekiel to be symbolical of the spiritual John: and the former saw "at the bank of the river very many trees on the one side and on the other." The one explains the other. The fruit shall be for meat, and the leaf thereof for medicine, said the Spirit to Ezekiel; and the Apocalyptic voice said, "the tree of life bearing twelve crops of fruit [margin R. V.] every month, and the leaves of the tree were for the HEALING OF THE NATIONS."

We see from this that there will be no quack vendors of medicine in the age to come. The Great Physician and his associates will be the only healers; and their spiritual water of life, and fruit of life and healing leaves will never fail. Their Word, it seems to us, will be when ever they utter it: although the rule may be that means will be employed, as God's purposes have been carried out in the past, and are at the present. Of every tree of this vast garden the mortals blessed by Abraham and his Seed will be allowed to eat, for all will be good for food; while the trees of John's vision will yield medicinal fruit and healing leaves; but the life-preserving and healing power will freely flow from Christ and his brethren—"the river of water of life," and

LIFE-SUSTAINING

"THE TREES OF LIFE."

Mortals in the thousand years, will be privileged to eat and drink, and are blessed, to the age of trees, as they keep the law of the age, but the soul that sinneth shall die. The sin-offerings in the restored temple seem to indicate that some sins may not be punished with death; but that the Occupant of the great white throne will pardon them.

We read that there shall be no night there; and they need no candle, neither light of the sun; for the Lord God giveth them light." This is spoken of the immortals—"The Holy City," that is. God will dwell in them (by Spirit) which will make them reflectors of light for "above the brightness of the natural sun; a sample of which the trio on the Mount of transfiguration were permitted to see, as also was Paul. Acts xxvi. 13. That writer and reader may be found worthy to be constituents of that city having the foundations, of which God is the designer and Architect, (Heb. xi. 10) is our prayer.

RADIANT WITH LIGHT—

Dear Restitution:

At Boise, Idaho, 19th of Sept., all well and dusty. I believe that my last letter was written at Laramie, Wyoming; since we left there we have come over mountains and through canyons, over rocks and some good roads. We came from Laramie to Ft. Steel, thence to Rollins. There we were advised to take the Sweet Water Route. So we turned northwest at Rollins, for about 75 or 80 miles away from the railroad, and in consequence we found feed scarce and high when we could get it. On the Sweet Water route we paid $2½ per 100 lbs. for oats. No farming on the Sweet Water to speak of. From Rollins we headed for Ronne, on the Sweet Water. I supposed we would see a town of some note when we reached Ronne, but imagine my surprise, when we drove up where I was looking for the town to read the superscription over the door of a log cabin (the only house in town) "Saloon and Cigars," and we found the rest of the towns on our map about the same as the first. While we were away from the railroad we found oats very high, we could buy shelled oats on the railroad for 1½ cents per pound.

It would be impossible for me to describe the scenery mountains and canyons we passed over and through. I was a little afraid at first to start around and down the mountain on a made and sliding road, and the road leaning down the mountain, when if the wagon had turned over, we would have rolled 500 feet, but I got over being scared, and enjoyed the experience. It is good, I think, for an Oklahoma liver to circle around and down the side of the mountain, and plunge into a canyon for a mile or two, and some one holding the wagon to keep it from turning over; wife and daughter would hold our spring wagon, while I sat in and drove, and kept the brake on, and we are here at Boise, Idaho, without a break or overset. Boise is a nice old town, with six or eight thousand souls, the capital of Idaho. The valley and town are loaded with fruit. Boise is situated near the head of the Boise River valley. We have not decided yet whether we will winter here or go on farther down the valley: feed and house rent are high. I see some good corn raised here, some I believe will go forty bushels to the acre, and apples, prunes and pears in abundance. We are now camped in an orchard among the apple trees, with apples falling all around us, have all we want for nothing with prunes thrown in. I may locate here, but can't say yet. I want to look around some. The State fair commences here next week. I guess we will attend. I will write soon again. I learn there are some First Day Adventists and some Seventh Day folks here. They will soon hear from me.

In hope,

M. L. ADAMS.

Dear Restitution:

With an ever grateful heart, I am seated to thank you for your long remembrance for the paper. I have been an earnest seeker for the truth for many years and find it a journal well worth the money, and as I see your calls for it, I cannot feed you on promises longer. I am too poor to pay and must acknowledge it. I will have to leave it as a matter of importance with you whether you are able to continue it longer. I shall miss its weekly visits and will feel that I am alone. I am surrounded with all sorts of faith; my brother and I are the only ones of the one faith. I ask an interest in your prayers, and may kind Providence reward you, is the sincere wish of your Sister,

E. J. C.

The above letter tells its own story. Yet it is only a sample of the condition of a number of others. We would like to supply all such, and trust those who are able to help will provide us sufficient funds to do so.—ED.

Dear Restitution:

Inclosed you will find $3.00, $1.60 to be applied to my subscription, for 85 cents please send the some assorted tracts, and the remainder you can use as you think best. I am sorry to see in my last RESTITUTION, that there are so many that neglect to send in their subscription. Now, brethren, this ought not to be. We have a good paper, and we ought to support it. I do not think there is any one of the brethren who are seeking for glory, honor and immortality, and the soon coming of Christ to set up his kingdom, and rule the world in righteousness, that would be willing to be without THE RESTITUTION. How we all watch and wait for its weekly appearance, and how much we feel refreshed and strengthened in the good news and encouraging letters we read in its columns. Now, if Brother Underwood will allow me a little space, I would like to make a proposition to the sisters, and I think if they will follow my advice there will be no more articles appear in our paper with the heading, "Are You One of Them?" Now, dear sisters, let us all take hold of this in earnest. Now, I want to propose that we each take a box, a shoe box for instance, put on the cover, and sew it down tight, paste some nice paper all over it, and when that is done, cut a little slot, any one inch long, and one-eighth of an inch wide in the center of the cover. And at least once a week, drop a nickel, or a dime, or a quarter in this box, and you will at the end of the year have enough to pay for your paper, and some to send to the helping fund. Now, dear sisters, do not neglect this, but commence to-day.

Submitted in love to you and our paper by your Sister in the gospel hope,

MRS. J. P. JARDINE.

A Soliloquy.

"The Church of God of the Abrahamic faith." God's Church? The congregation of God! Exalted name. And, if the name be rightly applied, a zealous, spiritual, faithful, honored people. "Of the faith of Abraham?" Then no worldlings. Trusters in God; sacrificers, even of that we hold dearest; "workers together with God." What a privilege to be members of God's Church! What promises for the future! What duties for the present! Duties? Yea, sacred duties. God's co-workers—to carry and reflect the true light before mankind: by word, by precept, by action; with pure hearts, with willing lips, and with open purses. Oh Church of God! thy name is great, protect it by thy actions.

Have You Read This?

By examining our list we find there are between 500 and 600 people whose time has expired. Some only a few months and others some years. If each one of you who are thus owing us would go to the office right now and send the money due us, we would have over a thousand dollars with which to push forward our work.

Brothers and Sisters, we need this money very much. We have earned it—it is ours—and if you do not send it to us, but use it on sell, you are simply spending our money. It is not yours—it is ours. Were we in position to do so we would gladly lend you the amount, but the fact is we have bills to pay and cannot lend it to you longer. We ask you kindly and in the spirit of love and justice, to at once send us what you owe us. If you cannot spare it all now, then send part of it, and the balance after awhile. Please do not neglect this, but get a dollar and send to us right away today. We thank you in advance for the favor, and assure you we appreciate it very much.

OBITUARY.

Mrs. Martha Fetters died at her home southwest of Burr Oak, Ind., Oct. 3, 1899, at the age of 49 years and 13 days. She was married to David Fetters July 18, 1872. To this union were born five children, three of whom survive her.

Sister Fetters was baptized in the fall of 1875 by G. M. Myers, since when she has endeavored to follow the teachings of our Master and his Father. The sickness and suffering of the last two years were borne with extraordinary patience. She fell asleep with the glorious hope of the King's soon coming to call forth the righteous dead and change the waiting living. Brother Fetters and family, though their grief was intense, yet they sorrowed not as others who have no hope, but they await the return of our Savior to change the bodies of our humiliation and fashion them like unto his glorious body. "Come Lord Jesus, and come quickly."

Conference Notice.

The first Quarterly Conference of the Church of God of the Abrahamic Faith in Indiana, will be held at Plymouth, commencing Thursday evening, Nov. 16, 1899, and continue over the following Sunday. The brethren here are anxious for a good meeting, so let all come with that end in view. Come with hearts full of love and charity and let us earnestly pray that that divine influence may be with us that will lift us up and consecrate our lives more to his service. This we need above everything else.

A welcome is extended to all lovers of the truth. Let each organization send delegates. A program is being prepared which will appear in due time.

The Pilgrim's Vision.

Weary and worn with his journey,
With care and discouragement pressed,
The pilgrim sank down by the wayside
While seeking the promised rest.

He had seen not a few turn backward,
Forsaking the Shepherd and fold,
And selling their Lord for silver,
As Judas had done of old.

The nominal church was consorting
With worldliness, pomp, and pride,
Preferring the friendship of Mammon—
No longer a spotless bride.

Yet retaining the name of the living,
Spending money for what is not bread;
While ease and pleasure pursuing,
To devotion and sacrifice dead.

He had fainted with face toward Zion;
Though faltering, his heart was still true;
Resolved that though trifles should perish,
He his journey would still pursue.

And sometimes he met a like spirit,
One bent on attaining the goal;
And the iron sharpened the iron,
And their zeal inspired his soul.

And often he tried to picture
What the joys of that morning would be
When sorrow and sighing should vanish,
And creation redemption should see.

And there, as he lay on the wayside,
An angel from heaven came down,
And in vision his cross was changed
For an incorruptible crown.

And over his frame came a quiver—
A thrill which no words could declare.
And he rose as on wings as an eagle
To meet his dear Lord in the air.

And lost in amazement and wonder,
And rapture no words can tell,
He heard the sweet voice of his Master
Say, "Welcome, thou hast done well;

Come, inherit my kingdom and glory;
My Name thou hast not denied,
With me thou hast faithfully suffered,
With me thou art glorified.

I have known thy labor and patience,
I have seen thy every tear,
And all that my Father hath given me
Henceforth thou forever shalt share."

And the veil in twain was then rent,
Like the veil of the temple of old,
And he saw the Lamb in his glory—
The glory so long foretold.

He saw the tide of salvation
Through all the earth had run,
For Jesus had come in his kingdom,
And God's will on earth was done.

And the stone cut out of the mountain
Had smitten the image so vast,
And human rule, with its evils,
Was swept away with the blast.

And famine and want no longer
Were seen in the city nor plain,
And earth its glad increase was yielding
With harvest of golden grain.

And Eden again was blooming
With beauties of every hue,
And the air was filled with its fragrance,
For God had made all things new.

The heavens with radiance were beaming,
And earth had no longer a stain,
Its beauteous garments were gleaming
Like sunshine after the rain.

But the veil again was folded,
And the vision had vanished from view:
But its truth was sure and certain—
Its interpretation true.

And he said, as the matter he pondered,
His soul with intensity fired:—
I have seen the King in his beauty,
And the kingdom so long desired.

The night is far spent, and much longer
I shall not have to wait for the day—
His chariot I hear in the distance;
For his coming I'll wait and pray.

Like Paul I will onward be pressing,
And counting all else but loss;
What madness 'twould be to turn backward
And part with the gold for the dross.

The Gospel of the Kingdom Superceded.

I frequently give strangers attending our church services a copy of THE RESTITUTION. I recently gave one to a Mr. Browning, a gentleman who has gained much light on the kingdom, and nature of man, but does not see the necessity of obeying the gospel. He sent me the following criticism to answer.

My dear sir and brother:

In THE RESTITUTION presented to me on the Lord's day morning, there appears an article prepared for the Church of the Blessed Hope, under the caption: "What we Believe, and Teach, and Why." I recognize in you one of their foremost teachers. I beg to submit a brief criticism of the first two paragraphs.

The writer commences by saying: "No 1. We teach that men can only be saved by an intelligent belief in the gospel," adding these references; Mark xvi. 15; Matt. xiii. 23; Rom. i. 16, 19." "No. 2. This gospel consists of the good news of the kingdom of God, and the name of Jesus Christ; Matt. iv. 23; Acts viii. 12; xxiii. 23."

Now, from these references, it is implied that Rom. i. 16, 19, the gospel of which Paul was not ashamed, is the same as is referred to in Matt. xiii. 23, which two are totally distinct. That the Word of the kingdom, Matt. xiii. 23, and the gospel of the kingdom, Matt. iv. 23, are identical I think none can deny, but that these are expressed in Rom. i. 16, 19, or even in Mark xvi. 15, I object, inasmuch as the glad message of Mark xvi. 15, is the joyous proclamation of our Lord's resurrection, which was to be proclaimed among the Gentiles, whereas the gospel of the kingdom preached and limited to Israel during the latter part of the Mosaic dispensation is not to be preached again, till the close of the present dispensation and, at that time, it shall be preached in all the world for a testimony (not to make disciples) and then shall the end be. With this thought in mind, and by noting the language used, I have come to the conclusion, that the gospel of Rom. i. 19, does not include that which is called the "gospel of the kingdom."

The statement of the Apostle that there is "one gospel," proves conclusively that the gospel revealed to him by revelation, supercedes the gospel as preached by the Master and his apostles throughout Judea and Galilee, prior to his rejection by the Jews. The truth of this will be more apparent when we ascertain the time in which the gospel of the kingdom was preached, and the authority, if any, for preaching it in these days.

It is generally understood, and plainly stated in the article under consideration, that "The gospel of the kingdom consists of the good news of the kingdom of God, by which is meant

1. Literal kingdom.
2. Jewish restoration.
3. Dominion over the Gentiles, and so on.

Now, while I sincerely believe that these things are to be, and are essential, perhaps, to an intelligent belief in the gospel of the kingdom, it is pertinent to the point to enquire: Did not the Jews believe these things before the gospel was preached? If they did, and with your knowledge of the facts, you must admit they did, then if these facts constituted the gospel, it would have been entirely superfluous to preach the gospel to them as an object of faith. No, my brother, while I am free to admit that these things are good news, and are perhaps embraced in the words "preaching the kingdom," a subject of Paul's ministry, yet never once are the recital of these facts denominated "the gospel," either by our Lord, or the subsequent teaching of his Apostles.

The gospel of the kingdom is embraced in and confined to these words, "Fulfilled has been the season, and drawn near has the kingdom of God, repent ye, and have faith in the joyful message." Mark i. 14, 15. (Rotherham). It was the joyful message of its proximity that constituted the gospel, and when our Lord ascended, and the kingdom was deferred till the end of Gentile times, this gospel ceased to be preached, although the things concerning the kingdom remained as a subject for preaching and teaching. Acts xxviii. 31.

In Matt. x. 7, we learn that the Apostles were sent out with very definite instruction to preach, saying "the kingdom of heaven is at hand," an explanation of what was meant by the kingdom was not the gospel, for as just stated the gospel or joyful message lay entirely in the news conveyed by this formula. A comparison of this passage with Luke ix. 6; Mark vi. 12, shows that they carried out their instruction to the letter.

But it will doubtless be objected, was not the gospel preached to Abraham, and the inheritance clearly stated? 'Tis true that it was, but this gospel did not include the land, "The covenant (says Paul) was 430 years before the law." This is not true concerning the promise of the land, for since the 400 years must date from the birth of Isaac, Acts vii. 6, the 30 years previous must date from the time when he (Abraham) was still in Ur of the Chaldees, before he dwelt in Haran, and consequently before the promise of land was made. The land promise consequently was not the first cause of Abraham's faith, but made because of his faith in coming out at God's call into a land which God would show him, and he went out not knowing whither he went. There are those today who obey God and do not see the promises till years after like Abraham.

Moreover, it would appear as though Paul anticipated the contortions that would be made of his testimony and therefore adds the terms in which that gospel was preached. In thee shall all the nations be blessed. Gal. iii. 8. The nature of that blessing is distinctly declared to be justification through faith, and was first offered to the natural seed, Acts iii. 25, where the same terms are used. "In thee shall all nations be blessed," and here again the blessing is said to be the turning of them from their iniquities.

But let us turn yet again to the gospel of the kingdom as preached in this divine formula, "Repent, for the kingdom of heaven is at hand." Here we see that the proximity of the kingdom was urged as a reason for their repentance, this has no application now, in this dispensation. In this age the reason assigned why men should repent, is the terror of the Lord. 2 Cor. v. 11, "God now commandeth all men everywhere to repent." Why? Because the kingdom is near? Indeed no, the kingdom may be drawing near, but it is not at hand yet. Why then should men repent? Because he hath appointed a day in which he will judge the world in righteousness by that man whom he hath ordained, whereof he hath given assurance unto all men by raising him from the dead.

JAMES BROWNING.

ANSWER TO THE ABOVE.

In consenting to review the arguments of Mr. Browning I do so because I recognize him as being representative of a class of objectors, who have made large advances in Bible study, but as yet, have not sufficient light to lead them to the obedience of faith. I therefore enter into this controversy, not in a pugilistic spirit, but with the intent of placing his arguments along side of the Word of the Lord, that error may be discovered by the light thereof.

Please notice the following declarations of Mr. Browning: "The statement of the Apostle that there is 'one gospel, proves conclusively that the gospel revealed to him (Paul Gal. i.) by 'revelation,' SUPERCEDES the gospel as preached by the Master and his apostles throughout Judea and Galilee, prior to his rejection by the Jews." He further said:

"When our Lord ascended, and the kingdom was deferred till the end of Gentile times, THIS gospel CEASED TO BE PREACHED."

Mr. Browning assumes that the gospel Paul received "by revelation," (Gal. i.) was not the same as that "preached by the Master and his apostles, throughout Judea and Galilee," that "gospel ceased to be preached." being "superceded" by "the proclamation of the Lord's resurrection." So says my critic.

If my friend had read God's Holy Book with a little more care, and compared Scripture with Scripture, he would never attempt to separate from the "gospel of the kingdom" one of its most important features, even the glorious resurrection of Jesus. The resurrection of Christ, was a part of God's sworn covenant with David, with regard to the future, and the eternal perpetuity of his throne and kingdom, and "preached by the Master and his apostles throughout Judea and Galilee." I will refer you to Peter's Pentecostal gospel sermon, as found in Acts ii. 30, 31: "Therefore being a prophet, and knowing that God had SWORN WITH AN OATH to him, that of the fruit of his loins, according to the flesh, he would RAISE UP CHRIST (for what purpose?) TO SIT ON HIS THRONE; he seeing this before spake of the RESURRECTION OF CHRIST."

The resurrection of Christ, is just as much a part of God's oath and covenant to David, as is the restoration of David's throne for Jesus to sit upon in his resurrection glory. It is a part of "the gospel of the kingdom," which has never "ceased to be preached." Thank God, there are still a few faithful witnesses who are loyal to the "gospel as preached by the Master and his Apostles throughout Judea and Galilee."

Paul, "by revelation," (Gal. i.) did not receive "another gospel," but the same message Jesus taught the other Apostles to preach. See verse 8: "But though WE (Paul and the other Apostles) or an angel from heaven preach ANY OTHER gospel unto you than that WE (all the Apostles) HAVE PREACHED (in time past unto you, let him be accursed." So we see that absolutely no change from the gospel previously preached, can be indulged in without incurring the curse of heaven. Verses 22 and 23 confirm the same thought. Speaking of Paul's preaching, to the churches of Judea, we have this testimony: "And (he) was unknown by face unto the churches of Judea, which were in Christ: But they heard only that he which persecuted us in time past; now preacheth THE FAITH which once HE DESTROYED." Not a new "gospel," but the message preached by the Master.

He certainly preached no new "revelation," but "the faith," he once sought to exterminate. It has never "ceased to be preached" for the obedience of faith.

In Heb. ii. 3, we have a remarkable evidence that the old gospel was still proclaimed, the very same gospel as "preached by the Master and his Apostles throughout Judea and Galilee," and also showing most clearly, that it was not "limited to Israel, during the latter part of the Mosaic dispensation." The date on the Bible places this record at A. D. 64, at which time, the "Mosaic dispensation" had ENDED, and the Christian era had FULLY SET IN, and yet Paul referred still to the gospel as "preached by the Master and his Apostles throughout Judea and Galilee," as the "great salvation." It reads as follows:

"HOW SHALL WE ESCAPE,
if we neglect so great salvation; which AT FIRST began to be SPOKEN BY THE LORD, and was confirmed unto us BY THEM that HEARD HIM."

And now, Mr. Browning, can you answer the question "How shall we escape" if we "neglect so great salvation, which you say was "limited to Israel during the latter part of the Mosaic dispensation?" Is it a safe matter to "neglect." It was first

1. Preached by the "Master throughout Judea and Galilee."
2. Confirmed by the Apostles whom he sent to "preach the kingdom of God."
3. Its truth and genuineness was attested by God, with "signs and wonders and with diverse miracles, and gifts of the Holy Ghost."

Does it look as though "this gospel had ceased to be preached," as affirmed by Mr. Browning?

I will now introduce some clear Bible evidence to show that this gospel "preached by the Master and his Apostles throughout Judea and Galilee," did not "cease to be preached," and was not "limited to Israel, during the latter part of the Mosaic dispensation," but was also preached to and this also was attested by the Holy Spirit, like it was in the case of Israel. Cornelius was instructed to "send men to Joppa, and call for Simon, whose surname is Peter. Who shall tell thee WORDS, whereby thou and all thy house SHALL BE SAVED." Those "words" must surely be the saving gospel. Peter was accordingly sent for, that he might reveal these saving "words" to Cornelius and his household. On Peter's arrival, Cornelius received him, and said: "Thou hast done well that thou art come. Now therefore we are all here before God, to hear all things that are commanded of God." Peter immediately began to tell them about this saving "Word," and also who it was first sent to, and also the country it was first preached in, and the town where it commenced to be preached, so there could be no mistake about its identity. Peter then began to reveal his divine message unfolding God's unchanging plan to save both Jews and Gentiles. He said:

THE GENTILE HOUSEHOLD OF CORNELIUS,

"The Word which God sent unto
preaching peace by Jesus Christ: (he is Lord of all:) that WORD ye know, which was published throughout Judea, and began from Galilee, after the baptism which John preached."

Mr. Browning said, that the gospel "preached by the Master and his Apostles throughout JUDEA and GALILEE" was "superceded," and "when our Lord ascended, and the kingdom was deferred till the end of Gentile times, THIS gospel CEASED TO BE PREACHED." Now, at the time Peter delivered this message, our "Lord (had) ascended," and Peter was still preaching the Word which "was published throughout Judea, and began from Galilee." By what authority did he do this?

1. It was "the Word which God sent," hence is authoritative.
2. It was first sent unto "the children of Israel."
3. It was sent "by Jesus Christ," God's choosen messenger.
4. The country sent to—"throughout all Judea."
5. The town—"from Galilee."
6. The time it stated—"after the baptism which John preached."

Mark i. 14, records the subject matter of the gospel (or "Word") first sent to Israel, and which Peter, under instruction from heaven gave to the Gentile household of Cornelius as, "Words whereby thou and all thy house shall be saved." The record reads as follows: "Now, after that John was put in prison, Jesus came into Galilee, preaching THE GOSPEL OF THE KINGDOM OF GOD," which were the saving "words" given to the Gentiles by Peter under special instruction from heaven. Our friend says: "When our Lord ascended and the kingdom was deferred till the end of Gentile times this gospel ceased to be preached." If it "ceased to be preached," why was Peter preaching it to the Gentiles, after "our Lord ascended," and that also by instruction from above? What reason have you, my friend?

Right here Mr. Browning asks this question: "Did not the Jews believe these things (concerning the kingdom) BEFORE the gospel was preached?" If they did, he concludes: "It would have been entirely superfluous to preach the gospel to them as an object of faith."

In answer, I would say, the gospel was preached long before there was any Jews. The proof is found in Gal. iii. 8: "The Scripture foreseeing that God would justify the heathen through faith, preached before the GOSPEL unto Abraham, in thee shall all nations be blessed." This blessing was not limited to the pardon of sin through the blood of Christ, but it embraced all the blessings in the Abrahamic covenant.

Paul makes it a condition of heirship (to the things promised in the gospel preached to Abraham) that we must first belong to Christ. "IF YE BE CHRIST'S, then are ye Abraham's seed, and heirs according to the promise." After receiving the pardon of sin, we become heirs to the promises of the gospel preached to Abraham.

How shall we escape if we neglect so great salvation; which at FIRST (in Galilee) began to be spoken by the Lord, and was confirmed unto us by them that heard him," after "our Lord ascended," at which time our friend says, "this gospel (of the kingdom) ceased to be preached." The commission given to them that heard him," is recorded in Luke ix. 1, 2: "Then he called his twelve disciples together, and gave them power and authority over devils, and to cure diseases. And he SENT THEM TO PREACH THE KINGDOM OF GOD." "Jesus came into Galilee, preaching THE GOSPEL OF THE KINGDOM OF GOD." Mark i. 14. My friend, don't you see that the preaching of Jesus, and "them that heard him," is the same? Don't you also see that it is the "great salvation?" "How shall we escape if we neglect so great salvation?" Do you know?

After referring to certain Scriptures where the proclamation of the gospel of the kingdom is mentioned, Mr. Browning says: "Now from these references it is implied that Rom. i. 16, 19, (the gospel of which Paul was not ashamed) is the same as is referred to in Matt. xiii. 23, which are totally distinct." "Totally distinct," means absolutely no resemblance whatever. Let us investigate a little. Matt. xiii. is "the parable of the sower," the seed sown, says Jesus, is "the Word of the kingdom." The seed produces fruitage from thirty to a hundred fold, varying according to soil and conditions. In Rom. i. 16, we read: "I am not ashamed of the gospel of Christ, (Why not?) for it is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth." As there can be no salvation without the pardon of sin, therefore it is legitimate to infer that forgiveness of sin results from believing and obeying the gospel. Now, compare this with Jesus' remarks about the parable of the sower, Mark iv. 9-12: "And he said unto them he that hath ears to hear let him hear." His auditors had ears, but no "ears to hear." Verse 10. "And when he was alone they that were about him with the twelve asked him the parable." Note the reason he gives as to why he spoke in parables. (What for?) That seeing they may see and not perceive; and hearing they may hear, and not understand; (for what object?) lest at any time they should be CONVERTED and their SINS should be forgiven them." A converted (or changed) life, effected through incentives offered in the "good seed,"—the Word of the kingdom.

Connect this with Matt. xiii. 19: "When any one heareth the WORD OF THE KINGDOM, and UNDERSTANDETH it not, then cometh the wicked one, and catcheth away that which was sown in his heart." Jesus said they failed to understand "the Word of the kingdom," "lest they should be converted and their sins forgiven them."

There is forgiveness of sin in a proper understanding of the "Word of the kingdom," when "obeyed from the heart." Wherein does this differ from the gospel Paul was "not ashamed of?" Wherein is it "totally distinct?"

Follow the matter a little further, and you will find them identical, Rom. i. 16, does not give the subject-matter of Paul's gospel preached at Rome, hence from this passage alone, a conclusion to warrant this comparison cannot be made, but Acts xxviii. 20-31, does state the matter quite specifically; accordingly that is where we must go to learn whether his gospel preaching at Rome was "totally distinct" from what was preached as "the gospel of the kingdom."

He appeared before his auditors at Rome, as a prisoner, and says: "For the hope of Israel I am bound with this chain." In another place he declared "the hope of Israel," to be "the hope of the promise made of God unto the fathers." There come many to him into his lodging to whom he expounded and testified THE KINGDOM OF GOD, persuading them concerning JESUS, both out of the law of Moses, and out of the prophets, from morning till evening.

"Paul dwelt two whole years in his own hired house, and received all that came in unto him, preaching THE KINGDOM of GOD, and teaching those things which concern the LORD JESUS CHRIST." THUS was Paul's gospel preaching at ROME, of which he was "not ashamed." The "power of God unto salvation," was in it also. A deaf ear being turned to his preaching he said: "Be it known unto you that THE SALVATION OF GOD ("the power of God unto salvation") is sent unto the Gentiles, and they will hear it."

All the gospel preaching has its base in "the covenants of promise made of God unto the fathers." It is the only gospel that has saving virtue in it. Don't take my say-so, but read it yourself in Eph. ii. 12: "Wherefore remember, that ye being in time past Gentiles in the flesh, * * * that at that time, ye were WITHOUT CHRIST, being ALIENS from the COMMONWEALTH of ISRAEL, and STRANGERS FROM THE COVENANTS OF PROMISE, having NO HOPE, and WITHOUT GOD in the world." A person may be a stranger to a will or covenant by his ignorance of it, or by not being named in it as a party to the covenant.

A commonwealth is a civil polity, the commonwealth of Israel is the civil polity of Israel, (not destroyed, but) in suspension until "he come whose right it is." Citizens of this commonwealth are now being enrolled, by means of "the covenants of promise," which we might call the legal process of naturalization. Having been naturalized, it is said of us: "Now therefore ye are no more strangers (from the covenants of promise) and foreigners, (aliens from the commonwealth of Israel) but fellow citizens (even fellow-country men) with the saints, and of the household of God." We should be glad to greet our friend as a fellow-countryman, a citizen in the commonwealth of Israel. I am proud of my citizenship, are you?

An invitation is extended to all, to incline their ear, and come, and God will make a covenant with you, even the "sure mercies of David," which relate to Israel's commonwealth.

The disciples of old were anxious for the restoration of Israel' commonwealth, and asked the Lord, "wilt thou at this time restore again the kingdom of Israel?" This is the King's business, which requires earnest attention. One of old, requested leave to go and bury his father, but the Lord said: "Let the dead bury their dead, but go thou and preach THE KINGDOM OF GOD."

The legal process of becoming citizens of the commonwealth was doubtless preached at Samaria,—when they believed the preaching concerning the kingdom of God and the name of Jesus Christ, and were baptized both men and women.

Obituary.

Adelia Rice was born in the town of Hebron, Licking Co., Ohio., Aug. 4th 1805. She came with her parents to Illinois in her girlhood where she was married to Samuel S. Noe, January 12th, 1852. Six children were born to them—three sons and three daughters. The oldest, a girl, died in infancy. They moved to Cloud Co., Kansas in 1870, remained one year, returned to Illinois for a short time and finally returned to Kansas, which has been her home ever since. She united with the Church of God in the year 1850, baptized by Elder Clark, of the same faith. She died at the home of her daughter, Mrs. William Maddox, Aug. 17th, 1899, with her husband and all her children present, except a son in Washington State. She was buried Aug. 18th. G. M. Myers preached an able sermon, taking his text from 1st Cor. xv.

Says Jews Will Get Palestine

"Palestine will be secured to us and the Zionites will colonize. The movement is under way and I believe it will meet with success."

So spoke a young man last night in the presence of 3,000 Jews of Chicago. Many of his auditors had grown gray and dim of eye waiting for the command to return to the land of Solomon, and many were turning from childhood into manhood and womanhood who were taught from infancy to look toward the east, where rose the star of Bethlehem. All drank eagerly the words of the speaker. He was Leon Zolotkoff, delegate sent by the Order of Knights of Zion of Chicago to the third congress of Zionists at Basle, Switzerland, last month. West Twelfth street Turner hall was crowded. The speaker was filled with enthusiasm, which he imparted to his listeners. He returned ten days ago and last night's meeting was called that he might make his report.

The great meeting in Switzerland lasted four days and delegates to the number of 300 were present, representing more than 1,200 Zionist organizations scattered in all parts of the world. There were representatives present from the most extreme parts of the continent of China, a small Jewish colony on the Russian-Chinese border. A delegate from the Caucasian Jews, who are almost wholly unknown to the world, living in the Caspian mountains, was in attendance.

Two delegates were present from the Transvaal, one from Argentine, nine from the United States and more than 200 from Russia.

The subject of the securing of Palestine and Syria by the Zionists was the most important part of Mr. Zolotkoff's report.

"The Jewish people will regenerate on historic ground," said he. "Palestine will be purchased and the Zionists will colonize. During the session at Basle an executive committee was selected to visit the Sultan of Turkey and obtain a charter. The charter will be framed for granting home rule under the nominal sovereignty of the Sultan. We do not expect to found a nation, but to colonize.

To aid the movement an institution, the Jewish Colonial Trust of London, has recently been started. It has a capital of $10,000,000, with 2,000,000 shares. More than 100,000 have been disposed of and of that number 2,000 were bought by Jews in Chicago.

"Palestine and Syria will be the home of all the Jews who want to live as they please. Thirty industrial colonies comprising 6,000 people, have been formed. They have fertilized the soil and where waste land has been the ground has been turned into gardens and all kinds of vegetables have been grown. Vineyards have been put into operation through their toil and factories will be built. In years to come the country will be one of the richest in the world.

Another important duty the delegates performed at the congress was to appoint a committee to visit the Czar of Russia. They are to do it as a visit of sympathy and will ask his moral support. Dr. Herzl, president of the Zionists, was at the head of the congress and read hundreds of telegrams and cable messages received by him of doings of the different organizations throughout the world. One of the messages received was from the German emperor, who said he was in sympathy with the cause of the Jews and would aid them. Others were received from the most noble of Christians, who also asserted their sympathy with the Zionists."

An entertainment followed Mr. Zolotkoff's report and dancing was enjoyed until a late hour.

The Order of Knights was organized Jan. 1, 1891, and in Chicago there are several thousand members. The society was the result of numerous meetings held in every section of this city. The plan to purchase the Holy Land originated in Europe. Mr. Zolotkoff was the delegate to the congress from the Chicago Order of Knights of Zion in 1898.

The above is cut from the Chicago Chronicle, and indicates a great awakening in Israel. As time passes by, God's ancient people are becoming active. Their heart yearns for the land of their forefathers.

Rejoice for redemption draws near.

Another Trans-Asiatic Road.

A writer in the Nineteenth Century argues that the reply of Great Britain to the Transsiberian railway must be the construction of a rival grand trunk line to China. The Russians are building their road to strengthen themselves in Asia and bring the whole of northern China within their influence if not their actual grasp. Therefore Great Britain, in the opinion of the magazine writer, should build a continuous line from the Mediterranean through southern Asia to Shanghai to link up and develop the British zone in Asia and gain a commanding position in central and southern China. The proposed western starting point of this south Asian through line is Alexandria or Port Said. From there it should run eastward 3,400 miles through the Isthmus of Suez, northern Arabia, and Baluchistan to Kurrachee. There a connection will be made with the Indian railway system, which extends eastward to Mandalay. From there to Shanghai is 2,400 miles.

The total length of the line will be 6,870 miles, of which 2,000 are already constructed. The physical difficulties to be encountered are not so great as those the builders of the Siberian line have to contend with. One advantage which Russia possesses is that the Siberian road runs through Russian territory. The proposed English road will run through many jurisdictions. But the consent of the Egyptian government is a formality. It is assumed that the Turkish government will give its consent to the crossing of some narrow strips of territory on the Red Sea and the Persian Gulf which is under its jurisdiction. There will be no difficulty about obtaining a permit for the Chinese portion of the line.

It is certain that the construction of this Alexandria-Shanghai road will strengthen the English position in the heart of China and in southern Asia. It will serve to shut out Russia from the Persian Gulf and the Arabian Sea. It will also, in connection with the Siberean road, have an immense influence on Asiatic trade with Europe. The Suez Canal will lose much of its value. The proposed Nicaragua Canal will have new rivals. When the Siberian railway is opened all European passengers for China, Japan, and points east of Singapore will go over it instead of going via Suez. The mails will be sent by the northern route. If the proposed British line is built passenger travel via the Red Sea and the Suez Canal will cease altogether. The more perishable and valuable products of eastern Asia—the teas and the silks—will be sent by land instead of water. The risks will not be so great and the saving in time often will be an inducement to ship by rail. The heavier and less valuable freight will continue to go by water, but the revenues of the Suez Canal will be smaller than they are now.

The British government owns the controlling interest in the canal. Were its dividends diminished that government would be a loser. But there would be counter-balancing gains. If the canal were made less profitable by railroad competition England would have a firmer grip on China, and the volume of Asiatic trade would be increased.—Chicago Tribune.

Works of Bro. Wiley Jones.

TWELVE WORDS, or the true meaning of Hell, Soul, Spirit, Ghost, Paradise, Incorruption, Incorruptible, Immortal, Immortality, Forever, Everlasting, Eternal, and their originals as learned by their uses in the Bible. A tract of 40 pages, sold formerly at 10 cents a copy.

THE GOSPEL OF THE KINGDOM, an 8 page, double column tract, sold formerly at 10 cents a dozen.

EARLY LESSONS, suitable for old and young, 30 pages, sold formerly for 10 cents a copy.

These works are excellent for use by those who wish to do missionary labor, and we offer them at such a low price that they should be out in a short time. Bro. Jones had large editions of these tracts printed, and by dying suddenly, and his Widow being in feeble health, we have undertaken the task of selling them. Her income is quite limited, and all that can be gotten out of the sales goes to her after expenses are paid. When you buy these tracts you get several times the worth of your money, and also a worthy Sister, who will thank you for it.

Assorted package 30 cents per pound. Gospel of the Kingdom, alone at 25 cents per pound.

The Gospel of the Kingdom.

Advocated in a series of Ten Discourses. A Volume of 283 pages, cloth 25 cents, leather bound, embossed, and gilt edges, $1.00. By Wiley Jones. This book is so well known that it is only necessary to announce that it is for sale, to insure a market for it. We have undertaken to dispose of these books for the Widow of our lamented Brother Jones, and while getting them at this low price, you at the same time will help Sister Jones to much-needed money.

Popular Lectures by M. Joblin.

Brethren and Sisters, Have you loved ones who think sincerity will save them? Have you friends who think they worship acceptably while ignorant of God's promises? Have you acquaintances with false hopes of heaven, or who believe themselves immortal by nature, or who think their sins are forgiven, although they are ignorant of the Law of Pardon, or who have no use for a God who consigns sinners to Eternal Torment, and are ignorant of Jehovah's beneficent purpose to fill the earth with his glory and bestow Eternal Life upon believers of the Gospel, so they can enjoy it for ever? If so, send for Popular Lectures by Bro. Joblin, entitled:—"The Kingdom of God;" "Old Mother Earth to Be Born Again;" "Strangers from the Covenants of Promise;" "Vain Worship;" "No Immortality Out of Christ;" "Hope Begotten by the Resurrection of Christ;" "God's Love and Solicitude for Mankind;" and "What Shall We Do to be Saved?"

Each Lecture of 16 pages $1 per 100 post free; or an assortment of the whole, same price. Address M. Joblin, 624 Woodland Av., Cleveland, O.

All persons addressing us should give their name, postoffice, county and state, plainly and distinctly.

All letters should be addressed to "THE RESTITUTION, Plymouth, Marshall Co., Ind."

Remittance should be sent by bank draft, postoffice money order, or registered letter. Money sent in either of the above ways is at our risk, money so I loose in letters is at the risk of the sender. It is folly to think that you can fold bills in a letter so that no one can tell it, for one who handles much mail matter can almost invariably tell a letter with money in it. Take warning and send safely.

All remittances should be made payable to the order of "THE RESTITUTION."

We cannot hold ourselves responsible for the return of manuscripts. Authors should preserve a copy for themselves.

In ordering books or tracts get the latest copy of the paper you have and order only what you see advertized in that.

When desiring a change of address, give both your old and new address.

By complying strictly with the above you will save us much annoyance, and your order will be much more promptly attended to.

A WAR ATLAS.

The exact locality of many places mentioned in the news of the War between the United States and Spain is not known to the general reader, and so recourse is had to geographies. We have decided to offer our readers a complete War Atlas of sixteen pages of maps, showing all the territory where a conflict can occur, besides some valuable statistics. This will be mailed to you for 25 cts. Send orders at once, and get the position of the places named that you can better understand how the various complication will affect the nations of the world. Charity.

In the hour of keenest sorrow,
In the hour of deepest woe,
Wait not for the coming morrow,
To the soul and sorrowing go.
Make it thy sincerest pleasure
To administer relief,
Freely opening thy treasures
To assuage a brother's grief.

Go and seek the orphan sighing,
Seek the widow in her tears;
As on mercy's pinions flying,
Go dispel the darkest fears:
Seek the stranger sad and weary,
Pass not on the other side,
Though the task be sad and dreary,
Heeding not the scorn of pride.

Go with manners unassuming,
In a meek and quiet way,
To the fallen ever pressing,
Though thy brother sadly stray:
'Tis a Savior's kind compassion,
'Tis his righteousness alone,
All unmerited salvation
That around thy path has shone,

When thy heart is warmly glowing
With the sacred love of prayer,
In thy works of kindness flowing
Not as with a miser's care;
Duty ever shall be thy watchword,
Pity drop the balmy tear,
Always toward the fallen cherish
Sympathy and love sincere.

Selections.

The Errors of the Age.

Well, say the men of a certain class, though God may have spoken intelligently and articulately, he has not spoken authoritatively. He has given us the Bible as a book of thought,—a sort of hand book or guide book, but not a statute book, not a promulgation of premonitory law, or infallible and inexorable truth. By this class of reasons, the divine element of authority is stricken out, and man is allowed to trifle with the Scriptures, to play fast and loose with their revelations, as if they were the mere utterances of a higher kind of genius than that which gave us the Iliad, or the Canterbury Tales, or Faust, or Locksley Hall. Beauty, eloquence, lofty thought, tenderness, power, they allow to Scripture—but not authority. They will admire, but not obey, they will listen to its suggestions, but they decline its commands. They will study it, but they will not be bound by it. How this free and easy treatment of the Bible is reconcilable with the idea of revelation from God, I do not now inquire. I point to it simply as another of the eliminations of the divine element from that which is yet recognized as a divine volume. How strangely destroys are some to thrust God out of his own Book! How thoroughly they do this by this repudiation of infallibility and authority! And how blind they are to the loss which they themselves thus sustain in being shut out from all certainty by being deprived of all divine authority.

It is hardly possible to read the Bible without feeling how sternly it condemns this laxity. If some of these free and easy commentators would pronounces it the most bigoted of books. It is so unsparing in its denunciation of error and evil, and so uncompromising in its demands upon men for submission to its teaching. One God, one Christ, one book, one creed, one theology, one religion, one way to salvation! This is its unfaltering utterance, from its first verse to its last. He that believeth shall be saved; he that believeth not shall be damned. It assumes the absolute authority of the Creator. It assumes that as his wisdom is perfect, so all its utterances must be authoritative. It proclaims truth not as an opinion, a speculation, a theory, but a certainty. It takes unhesitatingly for granted that all error is sin; that truth is one, and never becomes antiquated or obsolete, but always blooms in immortal youth, no length of ages availing to extract the divine element from what God has once spoken. Unhistorical, as some have, by means of ancient hieroglyphics, or modern arithmetic, tried to prove it, it calmly yet boldly claims to be one true history of heaven and earth, of things visible and invisible. Mythical, as others call it, it spreads before us the naked, rugged facts of four thousand years, each one a veritable fragment of humanity, the embodiment, not of dreams or fantasies, but of living truth. Unphilosophical, as others affirm it to be it presents to us its revelations as developments of the one authentic philosophy of mind and matter, of good and evil: not solicitous to defend itself from the charges of boasting or of foolishness, which self-sufficient assailants have brought against it; and making no apology for announcing itself as the one volume which, like its author, is immortal and incorruptible. "The grass withereth, the flower faileth, but the Word of our God shall stand forever."

That this disposition to eliminate or extract the divine element from the Bible is the root of wide spread error, is obvious: that the error is deep and perilous, is no less plain. The tendency of each is, in a greater or less degree, to get rid of a personal God, or to remove him to a distance from us, or to interpose a cloud between him and us, so that the reader of his book shall no longer meet him face to face in that book, but simply certain abstractions, certain algebraic symbols, or unknown quantities, which may or may not mean anything which lays no hold upon the conscience, either for alarming or pacifying, which still leave the soul without a living personality either to worship or to love.

But this line of error goes further than the expulsion of the divine Word of God. There is the transference of this to the creature, the deifying of man, the robbing God in order to enrich and magnify man. "Ye shall not surely die," was Satan's insidious commencement of the rejection of the divine element from what God had spoken; his second step was the promised transference of the divine to the human, "ye shall be as gods, knowing good and evil." As man ripens in iniquity, and as the errors we have dwelt upon unfold themselves, this during transference—this full-blown impiety of anti-Christ—this last and worst form of man's infidelity will exhibit itself, both in the church and in the world, consummating the evils of the perilous times of which the apostle has given us so appalling a picture.

Transfer the divine element to creation at large, you have pantheism; to images of brass or stone, you have idolatry; to the priest or the church, you have Romanism; to forms and rites and sacraments, and you have trinitarianism; to the visible things of the senses, and you have materialism; to the intellect, and you have rationalism: to the fancy, and you have religious pictorialism; to the feelings, and you have religious sentimentalism: transfer it to man, simply as man, and you have the last form of anti-Christ—the dethronization of the divine, the enthronization of the human, the rejection of the God-man and the exaltation of a man into his place as the only Messiah of the race, the world's only Redeemer and King.

Most subtle is the error that would have us deal with religious truth as a mere bundle of abstractions or ideas or speculations, of which every man is at liberty to form his own opinion. The essence of the Bible, the Alpha and Omega of revelation, is not truth alone, nor religion alone, but Christianity, a Christianity which is not presented to us merely as the communication of doctrines, but as the settlement of the great personal question between the sinner and God, the solution of the difficulty which law and conscience necessarily raise as to righteousness and grace.

And what is Christianity? Not metaphysics, not mysticism, not a compilation of guesses at the truth. It is the history of the seed of the woman—that seed the Word made flesh; the Word made flesh the revelation of the invisible Jehovah, the representative of the eternal God, the medium of communication between the Creator and the creature, between earth and heaven.

And of this Christianity what is the essential characteristic, the indispensible feature from first to last? Is it incarnation or blood-shedding? Is it the cradle or the cross? Is it the scene at Bethlehem or at Golgotha? Assuredly the latter! "Eli, Eli, Lama Sabachthani" is no mere outcry of suffering nature, the cross is no mere scene of human martyrdom, and the great sepulchre is no mere Hebrew tomb. It is only through blood shedding that conscience is purged; it is only the cross that knits heaven and earth together; it is the cross that bears up the collapsing ruins of [illegible] the pierced hand that holds the golden sceptre; it is at Calvary that we find the open gate of Paradise regained, and the gospel is good news to the sinner of liberty to enter in. Let men with the newly sharpened axes of rationalism do their utmost to hew down that cross, it will stand in spite of them. Let them apply their ecclesiastical paint brush, and daub it all over with the most approved of mediæval pigments to cover its nakedness. Let them scoff at the legal transference of the sinner's guilt to a divine substitute, and of that surety's righteousness to the sinner as in Lutheran delusion or a Puritan fiction, that mutual transference, that wondrous exchange, will be found to be wrapped up with Christianity itself. Let those who, like Cain of old, shrink from the touch of sacrificial blood and mock the "religion of the shambles," purge their consciousness with the idea of God's universal fatherhood, and try to wash their robes and make them white in something else than the blood of the Lamb: to us, as to the saints of other days, there is but one purging of the conscience, one security for pardon, one way of access, one bond of reconciliation, one healing of our wounds—the death of him on whom the chastisement of our peace was laid; and one everlasting song "unto him who loved us, and washed us from our sins in his own blood."

When we speak of error or truth, we speak of an idea, an abstraction. But the Bible does not deal in mere ideas. It has an orbit of its own, a region of its own, a world of its own—very different from that unto which the wisdom of man ever enters—an orbit of which God's throne is the center, a world of reality, a region of personality, in which the distant becomes near, the invisible the visible, and the shadowy substantial and the palpable. In the Bible we look the living God in the face; and he fixes his gaze on us. Divine revelation, as developed in Christianity, is not the elucidation of certain unpractical or impersonal questions: but the adjustment of all that is personal between us and God, so that we shall know, of a certainty, that in believing we are forgiven all our iniquities. Christianity is not the mere improvement of natural religion, nor the correction of certain philosophical obliquities, nor the removal of certain heathen misrepresentations as to the character of God; but the settlement of the great controversy between us and God, the readjustment of our relationship to him, upon a basis and in a way which not merely secures future reconciliation for us, but gives us the present assurance of it, with all the peace, and the liberty, and the holiness which that assurance brings.

It is round the Christ of God that all truth revolves; and hence all error connected either with his person or his work must be perilous. The revelation of the Christ begins at the beginning, and sweeps round a vast circle. It takes up the whole question of the sinner and God, and gives judgment upon every part of it. It condemns man, and justifies God. It pronounces authoritatively, both as to the way of life and the way of death. It does not accept earnestness as a substitute for truth, nor a justification or extenuation of error. It does not show man how to lay the foundation of the great settlement for eternity, it lays the foundation and presents us with everything on God's side as finished. It begins by announcing what God has done, before it says one word of what man is to do; it shows us God as the doer and the giver—man as the receiver, setting aside unsparingly every religion and every doctrine which would make man either in whole or in part his own savior: or which would make worship or service a thing of proxy, and shift the personality and responsibility of the great transaction between the soul and God to a priest, or a minister, or a church, or a ceremony, or a sacrament, or a creed.

Thus [illegible] that, through the belief of God's [illegible] ny to the great propitiation [illegible] only justified, but we know [illegible] are assured, that we are; and thus it is that, through the simple reception of the glad tidings, all the glad things which they contain is transferred to us. Believing, we rejoice; we are saved; we have everlasting life.

The revelation of the Christ embraces in it the revelation of the Church in him, as his temple, his body, his bride: his present witness on earth, and the watcher for his return in glory. This church, even on earth, is no mere association of men holding certain opinions, no mere corporation favored with certain privileges, but a body chosen and called out of a world of darkness. Its legislation is divine, not human: its laws are not its own ideas of expediency and order, but the commandments of its Head. The essence of its constitution is not socialism, nor republicanism, nor despotism, nor anarchy: but an unearthly organization founded on entire subjection to its heavenly Head; an organization working itself out it in order, unity, growth, fruitfulness, love and zeal. Its ministers are not philosophers, nor lecturers, nor theorists, nor humorists, nor orators, nor priests; but messengers of God's free love, expositors of the Word, and shepherds of the flock, and executors of government and discipline. Its members are not politicans, nor lovers of pleasure, nor worshipers of gold, nor men who are trying to make the best of both worlds; but men alive from the dead, through the power of Holy Spirit, possessors of a heavenly peace, bearers of a cross, yet heirs of a kingdom, strangers upon the earth, yet citizens of the New Jerusalem, which cometh down from heaven.

All the errors of the age we cannot hope to shun; yet many more we might be delivered from, did we trust more to the heavenly Teacher and his heavenly teaching; for surely the promise is to us, "He will guide you into all truth).....Ye have an unction from the Holy One, and know all things." Let us learn each truth directly from the Master's lips, so shall it be vital and productive; otherwise we shall be the possessors but of a second-hand, and therefore a second-rate religion—a reflected religion, with all the coldness of moonshine, but none of the warmth of the glorious sun; a timid and shriveled piety that does no mighty deeds, and speaks no words of power—that will not even stand the tear and wear of life, far less brave the brunt of battle, or compete for the martyr's crown.

It is truth that makes us free, for all error is bondage. If, then, you would be free men, grasp the truth, tenaciously, bravely, calmly; bind it round your neck as a girdle, treasure it in your heart of hearts. "Buy the truth and sell it not;" that is, get it at any cost, part with it never. Error is sin, for which every man shall give an account to God; and sin is no mischance or misfortune that claims pity only, but not condemnation nor punishment; see what means the fiery law; what means the cross of the sin-bearer; what means the great white throne; what means the everlasting fire? "Stand, therefore, having your loins girt about with truth," remembering your high calling, as witnesses for the True One. Let neither your words nor your lives give any uncertain sound. Every man to whom the Bible comes is responsible for believing all the truth which that revelation proclaims, and for rejecting all the error which it condemns. Cleave, then, to the Word of the living God; and sit, as teachable disciples, at the feet of him who has said learn of me. So shall you be led into all truth and delivered from all error. Otherwise, how shall you stand, either now or in the evil day? How shall you hope to win the victory, or receive the recompense to him that overcometh? We once saw a painting—the representation of the last struggle of an ancient king. He and three of his pursuers are on horse-back, engaged hand to hand in deadly battle. Even with such odds, he looks a man, for stature and strength and sinew, fitted to win the day. But the shield which he holds in his left hand is broken: the sword which he grasps so firmly in his right, is snapped in two, and his helmet has fallen from his head. With half a sword, with a splintered shield, without a helmet—how can he, old warrior as he is, win the field? What can he do but die? Let us in our great battle of life remember this, and if we would overcome, let us take the whole armor of God—the shield, the breastplate, the helmet, and the sword. So shall we fight: so shall we be more than conquerors: and the God of peace shall bruise Satan under our feet shortly.

The day of error will not always last. The day of truth is coming. For we know that though in the last days perilous times shall come; yet beyond these there is the splendor of the most glorious day that ever dawned upon the earth; for he that shall come, will come, and will not tarry. He that testifieth these things saith, Surely I come quickly. Amen. Even so, come, Lord Jesus.—London Quarterly Journal of Prophecy, 1870.

Unfinished Building.

Men respect ruins which mark the place where a noble edifice once stood: but they despise the fluest foundations which never rose into a finished structure. So long as workmen swarm upon the walls, and the stroke of the hammer or the click of the trowel are heard, the enterprise commands respect. But the moss-grown cornerstones and crumbling masonry meet with scorn from every passer by on the road of life.

Easier far is it to build mansions of marble, than to build manhoods of todays and yesterdays. Finished character is a costly thing. No man who leaves the flower-garden of pleasure, and looks upon the battlefield of real life for one brief hour, can deny the costliness of Christian character. Those who read aright records of the progress of the race perceive that, in all ages, men must make awful sacrifices for the truth of God and the good of their fellows. Righteous living is not child's play, and the way of life is not a "primrose path." The price of finished character is counted in dropping blood, in burning brain, in throbbing nerve and in shrinking sinew.

It is easy to drift with the unthinking multitude to do evil. But no noble purpose was ever born, much less bred to vigorous manhood, amid the shouts of the multitude or the cries of the market-place. "Far from the maddening crowd," the makers of history, the martyrs of God, and the molders of men sit down in solitude and silence, and conceive the burning thoughts which blaze along the crest of crawling centuries as the beacon-fires of him who is the everlasting light. Born in the solitude of obscure Bethlehem, and bred in the holy hush of unknown Nazareth, coming up from the wilderness with garments dyed in the crimson of sacrifice are seen the Messiahs of humanity.

Unfinished character is sometimes explained by a lack of appreciation of its worth. Values must be referred to as a standard, as they are relative. Confusion results from the absence of an absolute and unchanging standard. This is the fatal error of prudential morality, which makes "honesty the best policy," and not an eternal principle. Skeptical Pirate cries, "What is truth?" and practical infidelity questions, "Can any good come out of Nazareth?" The answer is one, "Come and see." Come and see the truth and grace which are incarnated in the Christ. This is the vision which transforms and transfigures life, and enables the soul to see its true purpose and transcendent possibility. How cheap are the things which are bought and sold at the "devil's booth," where "each ounce of dust costs its ounce of gold." Truth is not an article of merchandise. It is the pearl of great price, which must be received as a gift when we have given all. The physical scaffold is but the scaffold which supports the spirit while it builds for itself an imperishable edifice for eternity. The Master Builder will take it down when it has served its end, and our work will stand revealed in the white light of eternity.

Exhausted resources may be another cause of incompleteness. An empty treasury stops the sound of saw and hammer. It is supreme folly to trust in our own resources. Self is a bankrupt beggar. Self-confident Peter is frightened by a splash of spray or a cock-crow, but to God-trusting Daniel pulse is sweet, fire is balmy, and the lion's roar is the deep sub-bass of a celestial symphony. The wise man depends upon the resources of the Master builder. He must hate father, mother, wife, children. That is, he must not depend upon heredity or environment. "They are efficient but not sufficient." He must forsake all that he hath. Both talents and acquisitions must be made tributary to one supreme end. He must not count even his own life dear unto himself.

Let no man falter because of the magnitude of such a task. He who puts himself, with all he has into the only enterprise worthy of a man, need not fear the issue. God will supplement his weakness with divine power, and the structure which he builds shall become at last a fit temple for the indwelling spirit, strong and symmetrical as the towers of heaven.

The Master builder shall say at last:

"Since thou hast done thy best,
It shall be as if all had been;
For I will do the rest."

He shall touch the works of our hand, and, as the clay falls off, there shall stand revealed the perfect workmanship of his own building, a house not made with hands, which shall shine forth in radiant beauty when suns and systems darkle to their doom.—Arthur Edward Johnson in Western Christian Advocate.

Sententious Paragraphs.

Whatever you do for the Lord, do in the name of the Lord; that is referring to his authority, expecting his blessing, and seeking his honor.

They will ne'er say "I'm tired" in the kingdom;
"I'm sad" will be exiled foment.
For a little while sorrow is given,
And then cometh joy and content.
And our Lord who sees farther than we do
Is glad, being sure of the end.
His wisdom and love we can see through
Each cloud. He will always befriend.

The Christian's brow would be the oftener unclouded did he visit more frequently the mount of prayer. There the wounds received by contact with the world are all healed, and the heart rests in the fulness of infinite love.

Holiness is the beauty of God impressed upon the soul, and the impression is everlasting. Other beauty is but a faded flower; time will plough up deep furrows upon the fairest face, but this will be fresh to all eternity.

I do not know if dark the days will be,
Or fraught with sorrow and with heavy care—
I only know that surely he will be
My perfect light, and all my griefs will share.

I do not know if in temptation's hour
My heart will falter and my feet go wrong—
I only know that he who watcheth me
Will guide my feet and make me very strong.

The line of supernatural life may run wholly in the midst of little and lowly things. If one sign surer than any other be chosen to mark the progress of the Divine life, it is when sanctity prevails even in the minutest points of character, and in ordinary ways. The casual act may tell more of the secret power of Jesus in the soul, than world-famed acts of self-devotion.

Oh, breaking heart, by earthly friends forsaken,
Let this your assurance of comfort be,
One who has of earth's bitterest woes partaken,
Through great compassion and pure love for thee—
A heavenly Friend, who will forsake thee never,
Spoke to all grieving ones these words so blest—
"Come unto me," he said, "ye heavy laden,
And I will give you rest."

The Restitution.

"The Restitution of all things Which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his Holy Prophets."

VOLUME XLVIII. PLYMOUTH, INDIANA, OCTOBER 18, 1899. NUMBER 39.

The Restitution.

THE RESTITUTION advocates the final "restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint-heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ, and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for remission of sins, pre-requisites of the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

STOCKHOLDERS' MEETING.

Notice is hereby given that a meeting of the Stockholders of the Christian Publishing Association will be held at the office of THE RESTITUTION, Plymouth, Ind. on Nov. 18, 1899 at 2:00 P. M. for the election of a Board of Directors and to transact such other business as may come before the meeting.

J. H. WILLEY, Pres.

A. R. UNDERWOOD, Sec'y.

It is with pleasure that we inform his many friends, that Brother A. H. Zillmer is much improved in health, and we hope will soon be able to be out again.

Our next issue will contain the report of the Illinois Conference, and papers read at that time. Those wanting extra papers should order them at once so we may know how many will be needed.

From the dispatches it seems the war in the Transvaal is a surety. The Boers have started by blowing up bridges, destroying lines of railroad, and cutting telegraph wires, so isolating many places. It is impossible to get information as to the real situation at the different points, but it is known that there has been fighting at several places.

STUDENTS of prophecy who are interested in the "signs of the times" will watch the present strife in Africa closely. England is fighting for supremacy in the far South of Africa, and as was expected the Continental European powers are figuring on all sorts of schemes. A French diplomat is again urging the plan for a "United States of Europe"—a combination wherein France will be the leader with all Europe against England. He is not alone however, for Russia and Germany have already commenced a work in this direction, whereby the old world Latin-Muscovite races will be united against the Anglo-Saxons. They have appointed commissions who have already entered upon their duties in this line. On account of the strategic position of Spain that country is to be revived and taken into the scheme. It even goes further, and takes in the division of Asia, Russia with Siberia taking in northern China and Afghanistan and gradually working on India. France wants Toukin, with Annam, Cochin China and Siam, thus closing in on India from the East. Germany must be counted as taking the rest, and if they do not quarrel among themselves the plan is well laid, and England with the English speaking people of the world, will have no easy times from now on. Watch these things, brethren, for they lead to the time when the Coming King will take in hand the settlement of all these matters.

Unanswerable Proof.

The Italian correspondent of one of the great dailies of New York City in reviewing the religious status of that country gives the following, which shows that an ignorant woman, led by the Word of God, can vanquish the wily priests of Rome:—

A worthy woman of Turin, a fruit seller, had received the Word of God, and read it with joy. Seated at the entrance of a bridge, in her modest shop, she improved every leisure moment in studying the holy Book. A Romish priest passed by the spot and asked,

"What book are you reading there?"

"It is the Word of God, sir."

"The Word of God? But who told you so?"

"God himself."

"Himself? What folly? Has God spoken to you?"—What proofs can you give me of it?"

"Sir," replied the woman, "prove to me that the sun is there above our heads."

"Why should I prove it? The best proof that the sun is there, is, that it lights and warms us."

"Ah, that is what I wish to say to you;" cried the woman triumphantly; "the best proof that this Book is the Word of God, is that it lights and warms my soul."

The priest went away in anger?

THE friends in Plymouth have enjoyed the compaulonship of Sister A. L. Tichenor of Chicago, who has sojourned here since the Argos Conference. She returned home yesterday. We hope she will return some time in the future, as we cannot have too many like her in our midst.

COMMENTING on the Dreyfus sentence, the Jewish Chronicle says:—"With grief and indignation we hear the second condemnation of Captain Dreyfus. There were some—and ourselves among them—who were loth to believe in the possibility of this crowning infamy. We thought that for the love of common humanity, in veneration of the primal elements of civilization out of regard to the country and the army, in whose name justice has for five years been outraged, a hostile verdict would have been dismissed. But it was a vain and idle dream.....Facts are nothing,—justice is nothing, truth is nothing. Hatred of the Jew and army idolatry are everything. France has made unto itself another god, and is sacrificing the Jew to propitiate it. It has flung away its cap of liberty as an obsolete garment."

The Great Wall of Babylon.

Recent discoveries made under the auspices of the German Oriental Society show that the assertions of ancient writers about the enormous widths of the walls of Babylon were not exaggerated. Says the September Biblia:—In No. 2 of the Mittheilungen of the German Orientgesellschaft, the leader of the Babylonian expedition sent out by the Society, Dr. Koldewey, describes the first fruits of that enterprise, and presents data which make it possible, for the first time in a thousand years, to test the correctness of the claims put forth by Herodotus and Diodorus to the effect that the wall of the city of Babylon was so wide that several chariots could travel upon it side by side. The German expedition has begun its work by digging a wide trench directly into the Great Keir mound from the east, and has made it possible to measure the famous wall. This gigantic bulwark consists of an outer wall 7.25 meters, [23 feet] thick, built of burnt brick bearing the stamp or impress of Nebuchadnezzar and an immense 13.10 metres [43 feet] thick, while the filling between is 21.5 metres [71 feet] thick making the enormous total of 41.85 metres [138 feet]. As yet the diggers have penetrated only 17 metres [56 feet] into this mountain of ruins, but it is thought that now the palace walls themselves are reached. The Society proposes to expend as much as a hundred thousand marks per annum for the next five years at least in this undertaking. A little brochure descriptive of the work, entitled "Babylon," to be issued at once will contain an address by Prof. Delitzsch, delivered in March, in the presence of the Emperor and Empress of Germany, who last year gave 20,000 marks to the association."

We see from the above that God is making it easy for the honest of heart to defend his Word, in even this age of infidelity.

France and the Jew.

George M. Lees in Glad Tidings says:—

"In the case of France and the Jew Dreyfus, we seem to have history repeating itself.

In the past, the nations who ill-treated the Jews have always had to suffer for it, and in remarkable ways.

The Egyptians tried to drown them, but were drowned themselves.

Haman tried to hang Mordecai, and kill all the Jews, but he was hanged himself on the gallows he had made for Mordecai.

The Babylonians tried to kill Daniel in the lion's den, but suffered the fate intended for him.

Dreyfus has been unjustly condemned, but in condemning him the officials of the French army have condemned themselves.

We have the Word of the Almighty that this state of matters will always be, in such as the thrice repeated expression, "I will bless him that blesseth thee, and will curse him that curseth thee." As to his guardianship over the Jews, we have the statement,—"He that toucheth you toucheth the apple of his eye." Zech. ii. 8. How true do we see it today! In this connection is the 15th verse of the 1st chapter of Zechariah. It describes one reason for the displeasure of God on the nations,—namely, for their having exceeded the afflictions of the Jews. The verse reads, "And I am very sore displeased with the nations that are at ease; for I was but a little displeased, and they helped forward the affliction." Many who think they are Christian seem to think they are doing God's service by persecuting the Jews. No Divine command, however, has been given for this. On the contrary, we see in such persecution a reason for God's very sore displeasure."

Russia.

The following, from the pen of the Rev. Samuel G. Wilson M. A., of Tabriz, Persia, tell what an influence Russia has already obtained in Persia. He says:—

"The conversion of a large body of Nestorians in Persia to the Russian Church, is a movement for better protection, not a spiritual change." In this connection he tells the following story:—"A Nestorian was irrigating his fields. A fellow peasant came up and turned off the water to his own field. When asked why he did so, he replied,—'I am able to, for I am a Russian.' The first man thought it useless to resist, and walked off to the village. Presently he returned and began turning the water [illegible] field. When No. 1 began to quarrel with him, he said: 'Go away or I will knock you down with my spade. I have just enrolled as a Russian, too.'"

Aaron and Christ.

In Exodus xxv. 40 we are informed that Jehovah said to Moses, "See that thou make what thou wast caused to see after their pattern showed thee in the Mount," which things, Paul says, are only the "image and shadow of heavenly things," as God said to Moses. And elsewhere he says that the Jews have the model of the knowledge and of the truth in the Law." From these and similar passages it is evident that the Mosaic system of righteousness was symbolic of the righteousness of God in Jesus Christ. In and of itself it sanctified to the purifying of the flesh, but could not free the conscience from sin. To impart this flesh purification and his household, legally set apart were necessary, as was also a tabernacle, sacrifices, washings, etc., etc. The righteousness of God, on the other hand, was justification from all past sin, a purification of the mind, or heart, or conscience without the law of Moses,—but was attested or witnessed to by the Law and the Prophets,—it was a justification through belief of what Jesus and his Apostles preached concerning the kingdom of God and his Name,—in other words through belief of the gospel to all that put on Christ by baptism. This was God's saving power. And so we are told in Hebrews v. 9 that Jesus became the author of eternal salvation to all that obey him,"—and again, "If ye love me keep my commandments;" "If a man love me he WILL keep my commandments." "If a man love me he will keep my words.....the Word that I have spoken the same shall judge him in the last day." "Ye are my friends if ye do whatsoever I command you." "Love is the fulfilling of the law." The reader will see from these Scriptures that love and obedience are the same thing; and that is the reason God accepts no professions of devotion unless they are accompanied by obedience to "whatsoever" he commands. We want to impress this idea deeply,—that love does not exist without obedience; and where these are absent the spirit of him who was is wanting. Love suffers long, and is kind; it envieth not; it boasts not itself,—is not puffed up; doth not behave itself unseemly; seeketh not its own; is not easily provoked; thinketh no evil; rejoiceth not in iniquity, but rejoiceth in the truth; beareth all things, believeth all things; hopeth all things; endureth all things."

A HIGH PRIEST

OBEDIENT UNTO DEATH,

The words of Jesus are, "He that believeth the gospel of the kingdom, and is baptized shall be saved, and he that believeth it not shall be condemned." The gospel is here offered for faith, and baptism is prescribed for the

OBEDIENCE OF FAITH.

Jesus demanded baptism of John, saying, "Thus, (in this way) it is proper for us to fulfill all righteousness." And the Apostle adds, "When he was baptized he went up straightway from the water; clearly evincing that he must have first gone down into it; and after he had done this, God acknowledged him as his Son, and declared himself well pleased with him. Matt. iii. 13-17. And when he spoke of the "all righteousness" to be fulfilled he spoke of the necessity of doing what was symbolized by the institutions of the Mosaic Law. Jesus being the Anointed Seed long promised of God, was therefore the High Priest who was to arise after the similitude of Melchizedec, and to sit upon his throne, and to bear the glory. Zech. vi. This being so, he would have at some time future, to occupy the place formerly occupied by Aaron; and as Aaron's inauguration was representative of the Melchizedec, Jesus had to be consecrated after the same type in order to antitypically fulfill the representation of the law.

Aaron was forbidden to enter into the most Holy Place of the Tabernacle without being adorned and glorified with garments of splendor and holiness. Nor was he permitted to enter even when clothed with these, unless he had been previously baptized, under pain of death. The law said, "He shall in water and so put them on. He was obliged to put off his ordinary attire, and put on the Holy Linen Robe; and if he had put this on without bathing his flesh in water, and proceeded to officiate, this antaptized High Priest would have been struck dead. When legally clothed the Aaronic Priests were Holiness to Jehovah, and the representatives of the Holy and Just One to come, in his character and priestly office. And so they symbolism relative to

THE HOLY PRIEST

was the "righteousness" to be fulfilled by Jesus before he could enter upon his functions by "the power of an endless life," as High Priest, first over the Household of God, and afterwards over the Twelve Tribes of Israel. Moses baptized Aaron and his sons, so the greatest of all the prophets was appointed to baptize Jesus and his brethren. It may be objected that Jesus had and had no need of repentance, and was therefore not a fit subject for such a baptism. We admit that he had no sin of his own; but his nature was that of the condemned race of man, because he was made of a woman and he must be freed from it, before he can impart life everlasting to others; in other words he must himself possess that life before he can bestow it on others. Rom. vi. 4-10 clearly teaches that by death he was freed from the sinful, corruptible nature of Adam.

NO SINS TO BE REMITTED,

HE DIED BY SIN ONCE,

the Apostle says; but not by his own sin—Adam's. It must be evident to every reflecting mind that if Jesus in the days of his flesh had possessed a superior nature to those for whom he was slain these types of law-service could not have found their Antitype in him. His character was SPOTLESS; but we learn from Job that no one born of woman can be clean. Chap. xxv. 4. And the fact that Mary by the birth of Jesus was unclean (Luke ii. 22, 23) under the law (Lev. xxii. 2, 3, 4, 6) together with Hebrew ix. 26, which shows that "Unto them that look for him shall he appear

THE SECOND TIME

WITHOUT SIN, unto salvation,—make it clear that the Word SIN is used in a physical, as well as in a moral sense. Indeed our flesh is called sinful flesh, and God sent his own Son in the likeness of it (Rom. viii. 3), and by a sacrifice (margin) for us, condemned sin in the flesh; (of his Son). From this it is evident that it was with reference to this physical defect, or corruptible condition of his flesh that he was baptized. He put away sin by the sacrifice of himself. He died out of the Adamic nature and now lives by God. Baptism was a confession of his constitutional ailment and the need of a redemption from death; and Heb. xiii. 20 furnishes the evidence that God raised him through his own shed blood. But who dare say he would have been raised had he not fulfilled all righteousness by being baptized, though personally sinless.

Who Were the Angels that Sinned?

2 PETER II. 4 AND JUDE VERSE 6.

Many times the above question has been asked and the intention is on my part, to answer in the words of the Records given for our information and instruction. When answered according to the testimony placed on record for a purpose; then, the popular conception concerning "devils," "evil spirits," "fallen angels," ghosts and goblins, will vanish before the light of truth and narrated facts. Abundant testimony has been placed on record with reference to these messengers, and for good sufficient reasons: Our affair is to search out and profit by the lessons taught by these examples furnished to our hand. The testimony challenges our belief, rather than furnishing material for argument and contention.—"But there were false prophets among the people [of Israel: because we need to look at the testimonies recorded from an Israelitish point of view.] As there will be false teachers among you." Compare Jude verse 4. "For there are certain men crept in unawares," etc. These false teachers entered through deceptive and persuasive words—read and study the context.

Conditions were such in the Ecclesia that Jude desired to put them in remembrance (verse 5) of certain facts placed on record, "Although they once knew this, how that the Lord, having saved the people out of the land of Egypt, afterward destroyed them that believed not (allow the connection to be preserved from verse 5 to, and through verse 6; emphasize "and") "And those messengers that kept not their first estate but left their own habitation; hath been kept in perpetual bonds—under darkness for a judgment of a great day"—Continue reading verse 7—specimens of the false teaching. Verse 11. The conspiracy of Korah another prominent example of the dealings of God with wicked spirits who aspire to become authoritative teachers of falsehood: "And many will follow their pernicious ways, on account of whom the way of truth will be evil spoken of; for whom the judgment lingers not for a long time, and their destruction does not slumber." 2 Pet. ii. 3. These messengers are classed with many noteworthy examples mentioned in the context; and the thought of spiritual beings, good, bad, or indifferent is ruled out by the use of the particles of comparison: And the statement: "Those messengers that sinned," implies that there were messengers who stood related to the same circumstances who did not sin: The distinction is clearly made and should be recognized by the investigator. Those messengers who failed to keep guard over the principality of themselves, together with the false teachers mentioned are, as it were, on the docket for judicial trial according to righteousness.

Our attention is directed by Jude to Israel and the deliverance from Egypt. The exodus of the children of Israel—the power of God manifested in various ways in their deliverance: The story of their unbelief, rebellion and apostasy are all matters of record: And to these we will now attend. "They could not enter in because of unbelief." Heb. iii. 16-19.

Consult Num. xiii. and xiv. and compare Deut. i. and Num. xiii. 2, "Send men—a man for a tribe, every one of them a prince, a ruler." These were heads of the sons of Israel. Twelve messengers for a purpose in connection with the settlement of the promised land according to the covenant with Abraham concerning this land. Follow up the narrative through ch. xiii. Good advice of Caleb—a faithful messenger. Verse 30. Note the attitude of the ten who went up with Caleb. Verses 31, 32, and which stirred up the rebellious spirit of the people, as manifested in xiv. 2. Conspiracy in the camp in consequence of the false report concerning the land (verse 4) Joshua and Caleb announce the truth to the people (7, 8, 9) and gave them good advice. Rebellion becoming general and desperate (verse 10) compare verses 22, 23 with Heb. iii. 16-19 and iv. 2; Deut. i. 14. And note the contrast verse 24, and the reason given. The people were destroyed on account of unbelief in the good message of the two, while they believed the false message of the ten with disastrous results.

Affirmation of Yahveh (verse 35) concerning Israel's consumption in the wilderness. Emphasize verses 36, 37. They lost their lives, their princely estates in the promised land their titles of rank as heads of the tribes, all on account of allowing an evil heart of unbelief to suppress the truth and proclaim the lie, as officials selected on purpose to bear a message of truth according to the facts seen and heard, and confirmed by the product of the land delivered to Moses in evidence corroborating their statements: and yet, notwithstanding all this, they sinned in the manner represented, lost all, and kept in perpetual bonds for future adjudication, while on the other hand Joshuah and Caleb lived to obtain their princely estate in the Holy Land, lived to inherit their tribal allotment with all the rights, titles and estates thereunto belonging. See Josh. xiv. 14, 15. The reason why—"He wholly followed the Lord." xix. 50 and xxi. 12; xxiv. 30. The testimony is ample and to the point. Comment is unnecessary where the recorded testimony meets all the requirements of the case.

It is because of preconceptions handed down to us from our pagan ancestors, through Roman and Protestant channels, that we read very frequently out of the Bible that which is not in it. When we consider the current belief of Christendom three hundred years ago, the wonder is, not that our Common Version is faulty, but the wonder is, that it is so free from error.

Report.

Meetings were again commenced in the school house eleven miles south of Rensselaer, Ind., Monday evening, Oct. 9. The interest was very good when the work had to be dropped after the immersion of two according to previous report. This time the work was kept up through the week resulting in the immersion of twelve more. The church at Rensselaer was much pleased to have these and their neighbors attend services Sunday morning Oct. 15, and in the afternoon to go with them to the water. After baptism all returned to the church when communion service was held. May the Father's blessings attend each, and may each receive a "crown of glory that fadeth not away." A series of meetings will be commenced at Ripley, Brown Co., Ill., Saturday, Oct. 21., D. V.

Editor Restitution:

That the brethren may rejoice together I have to report that on Sunday, Oct. 8, at 3 o'clock, Sister Edith M. Andrew was baptized in the beautiful Rock River, by the writer. Sister Andrew had carefully counted the cost and the foundation of her temple is now laid on the Solid Rock, Christ Jesus. We expect to meet her when the call of the Master is heard. I may say that the influence which went out from the State Conference, which was held here recently, has done much to break down the walls of prejudice that have stood in the way. There are many honest hearts who are hungering for the truth. Those who profess to be looking for the Master and his kingdom and who are standing with their pounds folded up in a napkin may have much to answer for when the Householder returns. There is rejoicing in our little church here at Oregon, Ill., today because of this one who has obeyed the command of the Master. Rejoice with us! Sing praises unto his name.

Yours in the one faith,
S. J. LINDSAY.

Have You Read This?

By examining our list we find there are between 500 and 600 people whose time has expired. Some only a few months and others some years. If each one of you who are thus owing us would go to the office right now and send the money due us, we would have over a thousand dollars with which to push forward our work.

Brothers and Sisters, we need this money very much. We have earned it—it is ours—and if you do not send it to us, but use it on self, you are simply spending our money. It is not yours—it is ours. Were we in position to do so we would gladly lend you the amount, but the fact is we have bills to pay and cannot lend it to you longer. We ask you kindly and in the spirit of love and justice, to at once send us what you owe us. If you cannot spare it all now, then send part of it, and the balance after awhile. Please do not neglect this, but get a dollar and send to us right away today. We thank you in advance for the favor, and assure you we appreciate it very much.

Conference Notice.

The first Quarterly Conference of the Church of God of the Abrahamic Faith in Indiana, will be held at Plymouth, commencing Thursday evening, Nov. 16, 1899, and continue over the following Sunday. The brethren here are anxious for a good meeting, so let all come with that end in view. Come with hearts full of love and charity and let us earnestly pray that that divine influence may be with us that will lift us up and consecrate our lives more to his service. This we need above everything else.

A welcome is extended to all lovers of the truth. Let each organization send delegates. A program is being prepared which will appear in due time.

Poetry.

The Fire by the Sea.

[The following lines will be recognized by the readers of Alice Cary's poems as among the most beautiful of the many stanzas from her pen. Those not familiar with her work will gather therefrom some idea of the style of this talented authoress.]

There were seven fishers with nets in their hands,
And they walked and talked by the sea-side sands;
Yet sweet as the sweetest dew fall
The words they spoke, though they spoke so low,
Across the long dim centuries flow,
And we know them, one and all—
Aye! know them and love them all.

Seven and men in the days of old,
And one was gentle, and one was bold,
And they walked, with downcast eyes;
The bold was Peter, the gentle was John,
And they all were sad, for the Lord was gone,
And they knew not if he would rise—
Knew not if the dead would rise.

The livelong night, till the noon went out,
In the drowsy waters they beat about;
Beat slow through the logs their way,
And the sails dropped down with ringing wet,
And no man drew but an empty net:
And now 'twas the break of the day—
The great glad break of the day.

"Cast your nets on the other side"—
'Twas Jesus speaking across the tide—
And they cast and were dragging hard;
But that disciple whom Jesus loved
Cried straightway out, for his heart was moved:
"It is our risen Lord—
Our Master and our Lord!"

Then Simon, girding his fisher's coat,
Went over the nets out of the boat—
Aye! first of them all was he;
Repenting sore the denial past,
He feared no more his heart to cast
Like an anchor into the sea—
Down deep in the hungry sea.

And the others, through the mists so dim,
In a little ship came after him,
Dragging their nets through the foam;
And when they had gotten close to the land
They saw a fire of coals in the sand,
And with arms of love so wide,
Jesus, the crucified!

'Tis long, and long, and long ago,
Since the rosy lights began to flow
O'er the hills of Galilee,
And with eager eyes and lifted hands
The seven fishers saw on the sands
The fire of coals by the sea—
On the wet, wild sands by the sea—

'Tis long ago, yet faith in our souls
Is kindled just by that fire of coals
That streamed o'er the mists of the sea:
Where Peter, girding his fisher's coat,
Went over the net and out of the boat,
To answer, "Lov'st thou me?"
Thrice over, "Lov'st thou me?"

DRAWBACKS AND HINDRANCES.

"That they all may be one.....that the world may believe that thou hast sent me."

In number 17 of RESTITUTION (May 17, 1899) attention was directed to a certain interpretation by Dr. Thomas concerning the preaching of John the Baptist—"The kingdom of heaven is at hand." He maintained that it was not the kingdom but the King that John announced, and that he was not merely "at hand," but actually come. Again in Num. xx. (Sept. 6, 1899) another phase of the same subject was treated of, namely, the apostolic statements, such as "The Lord is at hand," which the Doctor said were fulfilled at the destruction of Jerusalem, in the person of his deputy Titus.

In closing his article on the first subject referred to above the Doctor says—"Here we must dismiss the subject for the present, in hope that our Campbellite and other sectarian friends will be able to discern the truth of the matter." But it is really difficult to see how the Doctor could reasonably expect by such arguments to make any impression on such a man as Campbell, or indeed on any of his co-religionists.

I mentioned that the Doctor's treatment of this subject had been the occasion of much controversy among the brotherhood in Britain, and I think it will be admitted that such is not at all surprising, considering the character of the Doctor's contention. It may be of interest to the readers of THE RESTITUTION, and also for the instruction of some, if some reference be made to that controversy, as part of it appeared in some prints issued by the brethren in Scotland. This of itself is a lamentable instance of "Drawbacks and Hindrances" of the gospel, inasmuch as strife was needlessly occasioned, and that on a subject so nearly akin to the most vital element of the gospel. There were brethren who showed what many, at least, considered an undue deference to the Doctor's opinions and such were apt to be so displeased if any of his views were called in question.

In article No. 20, I noted that as early as 1840, this question among other things was brought to the Doctor's notice by a writer in the "Christian Messenger," Nottingham, England, to which he made no reference in his reply. Also that in 1848, the same thing occurred in the "Gospel Banner," (Nottingham). This latter was apparently the occasion of a short article in the "Reflector of Divine Truth," in 1853, (Edinburgh). The writer sought to show that the gospel John preached was substantially continued by the Apostles after Pentecost, to both Jew and Gentile. Several articles arose out of this, but it was in 1858, about two years after the Doctor's article in "Herald," that, in a magazine issued at Dundee, entitled the "Gospel Witness," the subject was a prominent topic of discussion. At the head of each number was printed as a motto "Repent, for the kingdom of God is at hand." The leading article of No. 1, on "The Gospel," contains a distinct reference to the preaching of John, Jesus, and the Apostles, as that which constitutes the gospel of subsequent times,—"The kingdom of heaven is at hand." The leading article in No. 2, is entitled—"The kingdom of God at hand," and begins—"Proximity of the kingdom is one of the elements of our faith," quoting all the passages in the gospels and epistles where the term "at hand" occurs. And the subject is touched on in several other articles.

Again in No. 5, we have "The Gospel to Jews and Gentiles," in which the writer asks "In Christ, the Jews and Gentiles were one body, having one faith and one hope. How could this have been if the same gospel had not been preached to both?" The same number contains an article on "Prophetic Periods," in which the "year-day theory" is impugned, and in which occurs this reference to the kingdom "at hand" question—"The Apostles were to go into all the world and preach the gospel 'The kingdom of God is at hand' to every creature."

In number 6, a critic appears from Nottingham, taking up the exact ground, which the Doctor occupied both on the "year-day" view, and on the kingdom at hand. I quote a few of his statements as to the latter point. "There has been much said concerning the kingdom of God being at hand, but here again I think there is some mistake. It was not the kingdom, but the King of the heavens that had arrived, which was the subject of John's preaching. For 'John verily baptized with the baptism of repentance, saying unto the people that they should believe on him which should come after, that is, on Christ Jesus.' Acts xix. 4. Now John announced the approach of this kingdom of Israel. Jesus himself says the kingdom (or king) of God is among you, so that those were the days of the Son of Man among Israel. I am satisfied that it was the Messiah that John announced, and not the kingdom, or church, or reign, as some would have us believe." He then discusses the Greek terms employed, and concludes—"Let the eleven texts given by your correspondent be examined where the word eggike occurs, and it will be easily translated by 'has come.'".....W. OWEN.

A "Rejoinder" to this appeared in the same Number, by the writer of "Prophetic Periods," and was confined to the year-day question; the subject being continued in the next number. He there says, "I have stated the year-day theory is opposed to the words, 'the kingdom of God is at hand.' To this the reply is twofold. 1. It was not the kingdom but the King of the heavens that was the subject of their preaching. 2. The King of the heavens was not preached 'at hand' but as come. In answer to the first of these observations, I remark that in the Greek language and in our language 'king' and 'kingdom' are expressed by two words. We do not put the one word for the other, neither is there anything; so far as I know to show that Christ or his Apostles did so.....The word for king has a masculine termination while the word for kingdom has a feminine termination. My answer to the second of these observations is, in like manner, that in the Greek language 'has approached' and 'has come' are different words, expressing very different ideas."

After amplifying on these points the writer has these words—"We find that one result of our Lord's gospel, coupled with his approach to Jerusalem, was an expectation on the part of his disciples that the kingdom would immediately appear; and he utters a parable which teaches that he had to go to the throne of the heavens to receive the kingdom. This shows that while the word eggike expresses proximity, it does not necessarily mean immediate." Touching on several of the eleven texts mentioned, he says—"Deeply convinced that the Apostolic faith was the true faith, I have impugned a theory which is altogether inconsistent with it, and I have sought to expose the feeble grounds on which that theory stands. The history of the theory is curious, and brings out how desirous men have been to lay hold of some external signs to help their faith that 'the coming of the Lord is at hand.' Our Lord and his Apostles proclaimed, 'The kingdom is at hand,' and that involves the coming of the King, but their words—the very words of the gospel which Christ preached—the very good seed of the kingdom sown by the good sower—have been laid aside, and forgotten or denied. I call attention to them as the words of eternal life, as the salt of the Church's existence: a true an[illegible] help by which we may steer through the trackless waste of human theories, and human and demoniacal doctrines and practices. The kingdom has been delayed, but let us not count the Lord slack concerning his promise, but as long-suffering to us-ward, not willing that any should perish, but that all should come to repentance."

Another article by W. Owen, and one of six pages by the writer of "Prophetic Periods," closed the correspondence, at that period, when the issue of the "Gospel Witness" after one year was brought to a close. The subject was revived at a later period by several contributors to the "Messenger of the Churches." If occasion offers a few extracts may be given in the next article.

Editor Restitution:

Eld. D. M. Hudler has recently closed one of the most interesting meetings ever held in Edison, Neb., commencing on Wednesday evening Oct. 4, and continuing until the 15th inst. Delivering in all 14 discourses to an attentive an audience as I ever witnessed. Every discourse seemed to grow more interesting until the house would not hold the people. The result was four of our neighbors were convinced of the truth and showed their faith by yielding obedience to the same, being buried with Christ in baptism, wherein they are risen with him (we trust) to walk in newness of life.

Brother Hudler, in his preaching, emphasizes the importance of understanding the faith once delivered to the saints before baptism. In a Bible sense, to know is to understand the word of the kingdom. How shall they call on him in whom they have not believed, and how shall they believe on him in whom they have not heard, and how shall they hear without a preacher? These Bible questions, can have but one answer. Impossible to believe a proposition when we are ignorant of it. To be unacquainted with the covenants of promise is to be without Christ, without hope, and without God in the world.

Paul as a wise master builder, has said, Let every man be careful how he builds on the only foundation. Would to God we had more men like Elder Budler and Paul, then we would have much more fruit.

Report.

Dear Household of Faith:

I thought I would write and let you know what we are doing here at Banister, Mo.

According to appointment, Brother George Kidwell began a meeting here on the 2nd of August and closed the 9th, preaching 15 discourses and baptizing one into the All-Saving Name.

The attendance was good all the way through, and good attention was given to the words of eternal truth. The "Little Flock" here has been greatly benefitted by the refreshing showers of spiritual food.

On the 11th Brother Kidwell went to Spout Springs to hold meeting for a week. On the way there he met a man with a written challenge for a debate. This man, Alexander by name. He holds to the Christian or Campellite faith. He had written his propositions one of which was that he would affirm that man's spirit was conscious from death until the general judgment. Brother Kidwell denied.

Another one was that Christ's kingdom was set up on the day of Pentecost. Brother Kidwell denied.

Brother Kidwell affirmed that the Bible taught that man was material and wholly mortal. Alexander denied.

Brother Kidwell affirmed that the kingdom would be set up at the coming of Christ, and the resurrection of the sleeping saints.

It was no trouble for Brother Kidwell to run him into deep water, where he could not get out except by dodging the main questions. They went into an agreement to discuss the same points for ten days next August, at Cross Timbers, Mo.

There is quite an interest at both places where the meetings were held, and no wonder for Brother Kidwell is so earnest and zealous in his great mission to preach the Word, that the most careless becomes interested. He should be kept constantly in the field.

On the 21st of August he came back to my house all worn out and sick. He took to his bed and lay there for over three weeks with typhoid fever. It looked for awhile as though he would die, but thanks be to God, through the skill of two good physicians, good nursing and the prayers of the church, our Brother got able to return to his home in Witter, Ark. If any wish to write to him he would be pleased to have you do so.

One dear Sister in New York sent us $1.00 to help pay expenses, for which we are truly thankful. We gave it to Brother Kidwell.

If any of the one faith wish to correspond with me I would be glad to to have them. Address me at Climax Springs, Mo.

Conference Report.

The Quarterly Conference of the "Church of God" convened as previously appointed at the Decker School House, Millbrook, Oct. 6th. Brother J. F. Wagoner of Rochester, Ind. and Sister M. Nichols of Kent Co., Mich. came on Friday, who with Elder B. W. and M. A. Woodward completed the number from abroad. The congregations were good through the entire meeting. Each service was instructive and interesting, and all felt well repaid for the effort made to have a conference so far from the centre of the state, though much disappointed that so few came from other parts of the State. Several were deprived of the pleasure of attending by sickness, among whom were Elder O. R. L. Crozier, and wife, of Ann Arbor, and Sister Emma Jackman of Grand Rapids. We can only pray God to heal the sick and comfort the sorrowing.

Brother Wagoner's beautiful sermons were a great treat to all.

My husband and myself came north the 23d of September and have been holding meetings at two new places. Began at the Allen School House last Monday evening where gospel truths are entirely new. The interest is splendid, congregations are increasing every night, and the people are beginning to ask questions, and read their Bibles, and come to us after preaching telling us how good, plain and beautiful the subjects seem to them. May God send the truths home to many hearts that they with us may be saved at his coming.

M. A. WOODWARD, Sec'y Pro Tem.

Editor Restitution:

Brother D. M. Hudler of Muscatine, Iowa, has just left Edison, Neb. after delivering fourteen discourses, baptizing four and giving the believers here a general waking up. It was just what we needed only the time was too short, and wish he could have been with us as long again. He is now laboring at Freedom, Neb., and may God prosper the seed he is sowing there.

Yours in Christ.

A. MCLANE.

Dear Restitution:

Some time has elapsed since I have had a word to say through your blessed paper, but I am still trying to serve my Master to the best of my ability. As there is no member here of the one faith, I sometimes feel alit alone but I am looking forward to that grand and glorious time when we shall all be gathered together in that beautiful home of the blest, where sickness and sorow, pain and death can never enter.

Your Sister In Christ,

HATTIE NETT.

Dear Restitution:

I see our time is out on the paper, and as we are among the isolated ones, we cannot get along without the paper, as it is all the preaching we have of the one faith. We are striving to so live that when Christ comes we may hear the "Well done, good and faithful servant."

Your Sister in hope of the soon coming kingdom,

MARY GARTON.

Your mother is your best earthly friend. The world may wilfully do you many wrongs, your mother never; the world may persecute you while living, and when dead plant the ivy and nightshade of slander upon your grassless grave—but your mother will love and cherish you while living, and if she survive you will weep for you when dead, such tears as none but a mother can weep. Love your mother!

my that shall be destroyed is death. It will be a glad time for us to live in when there is no more death. God is no respecter of persons. If Christ died for the guilty he as surely died for the innocent.

Euphrates Valley Railroad.

It is said that an English syndicate has secured the concession from the Sultan of Turkey to build a railroad through the Euphrates Valley to the Persian Gulf. If the scheme materializes, the railroad will run through the reputed Garden of Eden. Biblical scholars have reasoned that this tract was in Mesopotamia, the district lying between the rivers Tigris and Euphrates, and if this is the case the railroad will traverse it. The project of building a railroad from Constantinople to the Persian Gulf was broached many years ago by the late Ferdinand de Lesseps, but his attempts were in vain. England and Russia have both tried to obtain a similar privilege. At last Germany received permission to build a railroad from a port opposite Constantinople to Angora, and the Anatolian Railroad was the result. The extension of this railroad from Koniah, first to Bagdad and thence to Bassora on the Persian Gulf, has been a pet scheme of Emperor William, and according to The New York Herald, the movement which the English syndicate is now about to undertake is a result of the entente cordiale between the two countries.

To Great Britain it means a new and shorter road to India, as five days may be saved, and to Germany it means a new field for colonization and a good feeder for a road already in operation. The first year the Anatolian Railway carried three hundred carloads of wheat, the second year seven hundred carloads of cereals. The railroad has done much to alter the character of the country, to build up towns, to open factories; and bring good European colonists to cultivate the soil. One of the chief obstacles to the progress of the country has been the sloth of the Turkish inhabitants, who did not wish to use modern tools and have not sufficient ambition to try got rich. They will not sit in the seats in the railway cars, but squat on the floor, so that at last it was necessary to take out the seats and leave the passenger coaches almost like cattle cars. The sparse population of the district through which the railroad runs is an advantage for the newcomers from Europe, who have no difficulty in finding all the land they require.

The climate of the different parts of Asia Minor and Mesopotamia is so varied that the greatest variety of products can be raised successfully in different parts of this broad domain. —Scientific American.

Christ is All and in All.

"Christ is our way: we walk in him. He is our truth; we embrace him. He is our life; we live in him. He is our Lord; we choose him to rule over us. He is our Master; we serve him. He is our Teacher, instructing us in the way of salvation. He is our Prophet, pointing out the future. He is our Priest, having atoned for us. He is our Advocate, ever living to make intercession for us. He is our Savior, saving to the utmost. He is our Root; we grow from him. He is our Bread; we feed upon him. He is our Shepherd, leading us into green pastures. He is our true Vine; we abide in him. He is the water of Life; we slake our thirst from him. He is the fairest among ten thousand; we admire him above all others. He is the brightness of the Father's glory, and the express image of his person; we strive to reflect his likeness. He is the Upholder of all things; we rest upon him. He is our Wisdom; we are guided by him. He is our Righteousness; we cast all our imperfections upon him. He is our Sanctification; we draw all our power for holy life from him. He is our Redemption, redeeming us from all iniquity. He is our Healer, curing all our diseases. He is our Friend, relieving us in all our necessities. He is our Brother, cheering us in our difficulties."

The Tongue.

"My brethren, these things ought not so to be." Jas. iii. 10.

I have been led to these few thoughts, from the fact that the very things of which James speaks in this chapter, are at work in our midst; and the result is, an untold amount of evil of which we little dream. We are told that "the tongue boasteth great things." Do we need any proof of this? If so, let any one walk abroad for a day amongst mankind, and I venture to say he will return completely convinced.

Need we be told that there are backbitings and slanders in our very midst? Shall it be said of us that we even "reprove" in a harsh and fault-finding manner? Yet we find that such is the case even with those who are just now looking for the signs of the coming of Jesus.

Let us arise and cast off these besetting sins, and be free from every weight which tends to oppress us; and then we can indeed run the race with patience and with hope, unto the end. We are near the end. We are near the end. Blessed thought! soon to see Jesus. Can we just on the brink of our eternal home speak ought but words of love? God forbid. "Let brotherly love continue."

The Right View.

The mountains, that when you are close to them, are hazy

Communicated.

"Would Father Have Stayed at Home?"

Would father have stayed at home for any reason, save severe illness, when the little house of worship was open for praise and prayer? Would he have made the minister, who had come from a long distance, grieve because of his absence? Would company, or head-ache, or weariness, have kept him from going to listen to the precious message of life? Would any of these things have caused him to disobey God, in forsaking the assembly of faithful ones? I know they would not. And as he was faithful, so do I want to be faithful. The memory of that silver-crowned head,—always in its place—is an incentive to me to always be in mine. I can see it now as I last saw it in church, bent reverently forward, with that reverent, worshipful look on the face that it always bore. Always in place! What a record! Always at it! Hammering away at the anvil of God, over the rough pieces of iron that can only be smoothed by rough strokes and refined in the fire.

An infidel was converted by seeing two godly men pass his window every Sunday morning on their way to church. He never saw them miss. They were constant and faithful. Not a word did he hear them say. He knew only their names, and nothing more. Yet their constancy spoke for them. It appealed to him as nothing else could have done. It said that there was something real in the religion that bound these men, that God and his book was true. It brought him at the feet of Jesus: it made him a soldier of the cross.

Shall we then for trivial excuses, stay at home? It pains our ministers. They study hard that they may say something that will profit us. They go when weary and sick, and burdened with care, that they may "build us up in the most holy faith" and may help us on to the kingdom: they go that they might win new converts to Christ. They expect, and have a right to look for help, our obligations to the lost ones, are the same as theirs. Without us, they can do but little. An indifferent, prayerless, stay-at-home church will never convert a single soul.

Would father have stayed at home? Would Jesus? We may not have many more opportunities for gathering together in the house of God: let us improve every one. God has given us the privilege of coming together to worship him: let us esteem it a privilege and not an onerous task to be shirked if possible. Men can go hundreds of miles to political gatherings, who are too sick, when the minister comes, to go out! How little we care about being saved!

Would father have stayed at home, would Bro. G., would Jesus? As we ask these questions, let us seriously reflect. The Christians of our past, and the Christians back of those, were faithful; it is only in these last times, that the house of God has become a distasteful place, emptied of its, at one time, occupants. This is ominous of the nearness of the end of the age. What if it come and find us away? What if Jesus call and we are not ready to answer? We cannot be ready and be out of the harness. We must be found with the armor on, if we want to be saved.

S. Bonaka Winey.

Government, and Churchism.

"The end of all government, no government, and the end of all churchism, no church." In a recent discourse in Baltimore, the Unitarian minister made the above strange statement. I say strange, because there is at this time in our own and in other parts of the earth such a contention about ruling in Church and State. Cuts appear to have no rights that the thousands should respect. What would the political bosses do if the masses were to wake up some morning and conclude that they could get on just as well with half the government offices closed? When the time comes for these political bosses to go to work and earn their own bread, will they rejoice in the advancement of the "dear people" they had so tenderly led as a flock? I guess not, on the contrary, among the majority of them there will be weeping and wailing and gnashing of teeth.

For several years there has been considerable talk in Baltimore about conducting Sunday services in the churches by the laymen as a Bible reading service. Will the time ever come when our great D. D.'s will suggest a change of this kind? I guess not, how could the poor, silly laymen get on without them? Like the political boss, he too has been leading the dear people as a flock. Will the church boss rejoice when his flock concludes they can get on without him? Will he? He ought and would if he was in the work as a servant and not as a boss.

Works of Bro. Wiley Jones.

Twelve Words, or the true meaning of Hell, Soul, Spirit, Ghost, Paradise, Incorruption, Incorruptible, Immortal, Immortality, Forever, Everlasting, Eternal, and their originals as learned by their uses in the Bible. A tract of 40 pages, sold formerly at 10 cents a copy.

The Gospel of the Kingdom, an 8 page, double column trat, sold formerly at 10 cents a dozen.

Bible Lessons, suitable for old and young, 50 pages, sold formerly for 10 cents a copy.

These works are excellent for use by those who wish to do missionary labor, and we offer them at such a low price that they should be out in a short time. Bro. Jones had large editions of these tracts printed, and by dying suddenly, and his Widow being in feeble health, we have undertaken the task of selling them. Her income is quite limited, and all that can be gotten out of the sales goes to her after expenses are paid. When you buy these tracts you get several times the worth of your money, and also aid a worthy Sister, who will thank you for it.

Assorted package 30 cents per pound. Gospel of the Kingdom, alone at 25 cents per pound.

The Gospel of the Kingdom.

Advocated in a series of Ten Discourses. A Volume of 283 pages, cloth 25 cents, leather bound, embossed, and gilt edges, $1.00. By Wiley Jones. This book is so well known that it is only necessary to announce that it is for sale, to insure a market for it. We have undertaken to dispose of these books for the Widow of our lamented Brother Jones, and while getting them at this low price, you at the same time will help Sister Jones to much-needed money.

THE RESTITUTION advocates the final "restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint-heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ, and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for remission of sins, pre-requisites of the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

Poetry.

God's Love.

Thy love, O God! restores me
From sighs and tears to praise,
And deep my soul adores thee,
Nor thinks of time or place;
I ask no more in good or ill,
But union with thy holy will.

'Tis that which makes my treasure,
'Tis that which brings me gain,
Converting woe to pleasure,
And reaping joy from pain.
Oh, 'tis enough, whate'er befall,
To know that God is all in all.

Conference Report.

Pursuant to notice Conference convened in Oregon, Ill., Thursday evening Sept. 21. The meeting was opened with song, prayer by Bro. Hudler, sermon by Bro. F. L. Austin, subject: "The Question of Immortality." Text John iii. 16, "For God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten Son that whosoever believeth on him should not perish, but have everlasting life." The subject was presented with masterly skill, and with deep earnestness and zeal, and was received with good cheer by the audience. It was, indeed, a very delightful feast for those present. It is a question of vital importance, and second to no other theme in the revealed Word. Proof was given showing that man in his present condition does not now possess it, but to the faithful few "who by patient continuance in well doing seek for glory, honor and immortality, eternal life; it will be given at the second appearing of the Life-giver; who will change the body of our humiliation, that it may be fashioned like unto his glorious body." If the forms of our loved ones here, while subject to sickness, death and decay, with all of their imperfections and misgivings are so precious and dear to our sight, and we part with them so reluctantly and in such deep sorrow, what will be the joy and gladness experienced by those who will be permitted to behold their dear ones redeemed from corruption, "changed from this mortal to immortality?" The King in his beauty and loveliness alone can excell the grandeur of the picture,

"But who shall see the glorious day,
When, throned on Zion's brow,
The Lord shall rend that veil away,
Which blinds the nations now.

When earth no more beneath the fear
Of his rebuke shall lie,—
When pain shall cease, and every tear
Be wiped from every eye."

FRIDAY SEPT. 22.

Meeting began with singing three selections from "Glad Tidings," viz., "Wenona," "In the Morning," and "Standing on the Promises." Bro. A. J. Eychaner then lead in prayer, after which the President read the Scripture lesson as contained in James iii. Then all joined in singing, "Work for the Night is Coming," with prayer by Bro. Aslaksen. As some of the members of the Conference board were not present, the formal opening of the Conference business was deferred till their arrival. The allotted time for business was occupied in short talks and reports of churches, etc.

The first to speak was Bro. S. Wilson of N. Y. who gave an abreviated report of the work in the East, where he said he had done all he could and at the same time attend to other duties. Mention was made of the little band in Brooklyn, Newark and Elizabeth, all of which have been established long years through the efforts of others who have long since ceased their labors and are at rest, waiting the Master's call.

He thought his observation warranted the conclusion that in too many instances those who have been baptized into Christ settle down to a peaceful and quiet attitude, and think they have done all that is necessary for their salvation. But by studying the lessons on the pages of Holy-writ, we learn that this is a mistaken sentiment, for in this there is no progress. We are commanded to be diligent, and to "add to our faith virtue; and to virtue knowledge; and to knowledge temperance; and to temperance patience; and to patience godliness; and to godliness brotherly kindness; and to brotherly kindness charity. For if these things (traits of Christian character) be in you and abound, they make you that ye shall neither be barren nor unfruitful in the knowledge of our Lord Jesus Christ." 2 Pet. i. 5-8. From the reading of this Scripture we may learn the importance of constant application to the Master's work, upon the part of those who have espoused his cause. In the 9th verse we are informed that "he that lacketh these things is blind, and can not see afar off, and hath forgotten that he was purged from his old sins, from which we may also glean the fact that it is not so much what we KNOW, but what we ARE and no that will merit the approbation of the Master when he shall come to reckon with his servants. It will be through the earnest entreaties and constant labor of the present members, that the household of faith will be increased.

Bro. Eychaner was convinced "that the harvest is great but the laborers are few." We agree with him in this, only in part. That "the harvest is truly great" none will deny; but what of the laborers? Are there not more than find support? "The laborer is worthy of his hire," is as true today as ever. We have many most excellent workmen, but for the lack of support are driven into other pursuits of life to earn a livelihood for themselves and families, and too often are charged with a lack of love and zeal for the Master's work—criticized for not preaching all the time for nothing and supporting their families on the same delicious diet, while some others who have tens of thousands never even try to teach in Sunday school, lead a Bible class, make a prayer in public, or try to preach a sermon, and when called upon to subscribe for the salary of the minister, dodge the point with that old, familiar expression: "I'll do my part," and when the year expires and they are called upon for "their part" appear to be greatly surprised that they are called upon so soon, saying, "Why really I'm so sorry, but I haven't a cent with me today! Well I'll see you again and let you know how much I can spare; but wait a minute. I would like to ask if you intend to hire him another year? I do wish you would for I do think he is such a nice speaker, and upon doctrinal matters he has no superior. Why, I like him so well that I haven't missed a sermon during the whole year; no sir, not one! Hire him again by all means and I'll try and do a little better next year." Do such, "honor the Lord with their substance," in thus withholding support from one who devotes his time to the ministry? We think not. We believe if as great zeal were displayed in paying into the evangelist fund as the evangelist manifests in his work, the Illinois Conference could very easily support two evangelists constantly in the field. Whom shall we censure, the two or the many? Judge ye. Is there not some other way to labor for the Master besides preaching? Are there none hungering for meat—for the bread of life? If you cannot give it, send some one who can. Are any thirsting for the water of life? Send some one to tell of those waters which giveth eternal life. Are there any strangers seeking a home? Tell them of "that city which hath foundations, whose builder and maker is God," in which the inhabitants will be forever at "Home, sweet home." Are there any naked? Tell them of the "Robe of Righteousness." Are there any sick? Visit them, and teach them to look upon him who was lifted up that they might be healed. Are any in prison? Go unto them and tell of the "Glorious liberty of the children of God," remembering that they who do those things to one of the least of Christ's brethren, do them unto him and have the promise of a reward. Remember that "we have many members in one body, and all members have not the same office; so we, being many, are one body in Christ, and every one members one of another. Having then gifts differing according to the grace that is given to us, whether prophecy, let us prophesy according to the proportion of faith; or ministry, let us wait on our ministering; or he that teacheth, on teaching; or he that exhorteth on exhortation; he that giveth, let him do it with simplicity; he that ruleth, with diligence, he that showeth mercy, with cheerfulness." and above all things be "not slothful in business, fervent in spirit, serving the Lord; rejoicing in hope; patient in tribulation; continuing instant in prayer; distributing to the necessity of saints; given to hospitality."

The work wrought so recently in Oregon is an illustration of what may be done in new localities. It was a great surprise to all, even to Bro. Lindsay; for when he began his efforts he little thought they would be blessed so soon with such pleasant results. This is but another demonstration of the truth that we know not what our sowing may bring forth. In this instance it is, indeed, very cheering and should encourage all to use their time and means wisely in the Master's vineyard. We may sow, we may plant; "but God giveth the increase."

Bro. Eychaner cited our attention to the maple seed, wondering why so few grew. Upon examination the fact was developed that the soil was preoccupied with leaves, grass and other rubbish which prevented the seed taking root and growing, and so we often wonder why the good seed of the kingdom does not bring forth more bountifully. The reason in this instance, as in the other, is that the soil is preoccupied with the rubbish of sectarian creeds, which must first be cleared away before the soil can be properly tilled. Then clear away the rubbish; sow the seed; till the soil and guard well the tender plants that none be smothered among the tares sown by the evil one.

What would you think of a man who would engage to work in your field and when unobserved would go over into his own? Would you not call him unfaithful? You could not believe him to be diligent. You could not praise him for his conduct. To such the Master will not say "Well done," neither to a slothful servant. It is diligence that will win the prize. Continually doing good. "He went about doing good," is the shortest history of our Master's life; only five words, yet they tell so much. I wish that nothing worse might be said of us that we might be given the palms of victory.

Bro. Lindsay's words of welcome recalled to the minds of many present, sweet reminiscenes of pleasant times long gone by when he mentioned the names of A. J. Eychaner, Reed, Stephenson, Bostwick and Dr. Jacobs who used to work in this same field thirty-five years ago.

To the words of welcome the President responded, thanking the brethren and friends in Oregon for their kind hospitality, and praised them for the noble efforts which they have put forth in refitting the building and organizing the Sunday school, Bible class and church. He said the Conference was held in Oregon and the program was especially prepared to aid and to meet the necessities of the church in Oregon. When we met, a year ago, in Lanark we little thought that this annual meeting would be here. May the choicest blessings of the Father ever attend your labors for his truth which is the light of the world, and which we all are expected to hold up before the world to guide the stranger into eternal rest. The old stone structure in which we take just pride and in which we feel so much at home is not so imposing in appearance nor so grand in design as other church edifices; but we do not consider this the vital point; for we look for another—a better, wherein the glory of God shall shine forth forever. We know that which we now see will perish and pass away, but that which we see not is abiding and eternal, and shall never be removed from its foundation. In this we sing hymns of our composing. In the other one voices will be tuned to sing redemption's song. Here we meet, say farewell and part. There no sad farewell will ever be heard. There every eye will behold the glory of God; every heart will be filled with the vehemence of love, and every tongue burdened with praise.

The discussion of Church Work, Organization, etc. Bro. Austin was [illegible] speak and recommend that [illegible] devise some means [illegible] to give the number of members in each locality, and in each State, and Bro. Eychaner suggested that a calender be prepared for ministers to be sent to head-quarters for the purpose of obtaining ministerial permits.

A number spoke concerning the topic of Church Organization. One thought that the common conceptions of church organization was never taught by God, but that it is expedient for the work. Bro. Conner said that he had wrestled with this subject in Indiana, with little permanent good results. His platform was to elect two elders whose duty it was designed to look after the spiritual service; two deacons to look after the temporal work. A clerk to keep the record and transact the correspondence; and a treasurer (who in many instances isn't burdened with much, either in work or wealth.)

"Let everything be done decently and in order," is the advice of one who spoke with authority. It is the best plan, for "order is heaven's first law." For one band of believers to work upon a certain scheme, and another, upon a contrary mode of action would not be orderly nor very decent; yet how nearly is this condition true. We believe that if the brethren everywhere were to unite upon and work in harmony with a formulated scheme of co-operation in church work and in the dissemination of the gospel, much greater results for good would be obtained.

There is an organization or Church of God, which is formed not by electing deacons and elders, but by faith and obedience. Moses was in the church in the wilderness. Acts vii. 38. He in common with the children of Israel had the power of becoming "a peculiar treasure unto God." They were to be unto him a kingdom of priests, and an holy nation." providing they would obey his voice and keep his commandments, Ex. xix. 3-6; and we, if we continue steadfast have the assurance that we "shall be priests of God and of Christ." Rev. xx. 6. "Moses verily was faithful in all his house, as a servant, for a testimony of those things which were to be spoken after; but Christ as a Son over his own house; whose house are we, if we hold fast the confidence and rejoicing of the hope firm unto the end. Heb. iii. 5, 6. "Wherefore, take heed, brethren, lest there be in any of you an evil heart of unbelief, in departing from the living God. But exhort one another daily, while it is called today; lest any of you be hardened through the deceitfulness of sin. For we are made partakers of Christ, if we hold the beginning of our confidence steadfast unto the end." Heb. iii. 12-14.

COMMUNION.

Upon this topic there were a diversity of opinions, as to the frequency of its observance. Some thought annually, some "as oft as ye come together." The arguments were given in true Christian spirit, and we trust that the thoughts presented may have the tendency of eliminating most of the difference of opinions upon this very important question.

FELLOWSHIP—GIVING.

By some the giving of tithes was held to be the proper mode of giving, and that it was the Lord's way and is supported by both Old and New Testament Scriptures. Others held that they should "lay by in store as the Lord had prospered them." But we are fully persuaded that if all were to give in strict conformity to either of the above methods the amount given to the Lord would be surprisingly increased and there would be no need for collections. The difficulty with one is, he can't figure out one-tenth of his income and the other is unable to determine how much the Lord has prospered him. And therefore the tenth is seldom given, while "prosperity" is held in reserve.

FRIDAY 3.00 P. M.

Bro. L. E. Conner preached a very eloquent, interesting and instructive discourse on the topic. "Is there an Hereafter," or "If a man die shall he live again?" This question was asked [illegible] was said that he was perfect and upright, and that he feared God, and by him it was answered in the following, "I know that my Redeemer liveth, and that he shall stand upon the earth; and though after my skin worms destroy this body, yet in my flesh shall I see God; whom I shall see for myself, and mine eyes shall behold, and not another; though my reins be consumed within me." Job xix. 25-27. His testimony is as assuring in its nature as that of Paul when he was about to be offered up; when the time of his departure was at hand. He said, "I have fought a good fight, I have finished my course, I have kept the faith; henceforth there is laid up for me a crown of righteousness, which the Lord, the righteous Judge shall give me at that day; and not to me only; but unto all them also that love his appearing."

At 6.30, "What God hath wrought," was discussed by several, in short speeches. God has wrought the reverse from man. Man brought sin and death into the world, but God hath wrought a great deliverance for sinful man. Man wrought his own destruction. God hath wrought out a grand and glorious purpose of redemption. After man lost the dominion, the Lord wrought a good thing for the eternal well-being of the fallen race in that he removed the tree of life; of which, if he had partaken, would have been a sad calamity, in that it would have made men deathless sinners. So then it is a wise provision upon the part of the Father that we are permitted to pass into our former state and await the call of him who is the light of the world; who will guide the willing seekers of truth into the radiant light of eternal day. The Father has placed us in the field, provided us with all the necessary equipments for service, and given instructions to regulate our labors, and made promises to reward us in the sweet by and by. We have accepted his offer with pleasure. We know he is able to perform his part. The only danger is that we fail to comply with his request. We enjoy hoping for the promised reward, but what will the fruition be when we shall be called from the field of labor into the Lord's day of rest? The day in which the bride and groom shall meet in triumph.

Saturday 7.30, "The Two Adams and their Kindred," sermon by Bro. S. Wilson, text 1 Cor. xv. 45. He showed two lines of history from the beginning of man's career to his final redemption—a dual nature, and instanced it in reference to the Seed of Woman and of the serpent. The old Jerusalem and the New; Babylon of old and the mystic; The first Adam and the second. The principle of like father, like son, will hold true to a thousand generations. Man by nature is one thing; by regeneration, another. By nature he is mortal; subject to sickness, death and decay, and upon the principle that like begets like his family or kindred all inherit the same nature; and therefore, within their own power, can never change their own destiny. By regeneration the second Adam was made a quickening spirit, or life-giving spirit. Then upon the principle of like begets like, all who partake of the spirit of regeneration through Christ will be made like him, and will, therefore, be of his family or kindred. As generation is the natural is preceded by begettal, so the family of regeneration is increased "by being begotten again;" "of incorruptible seed, by the Word of God which liveth and abideth forever. The Word of God is any expression of the will or mind of the eternal Father, and that is life within itself. If we receive this Word which is from above and it begets within us the "hope of glory," will we not be begotten from above—from on high—from the highest source, because there is no higher authority than the Word of God. If begotten by this Word will we not also be born from above, and therefore children of one family—sons and daughters of God—brethren and sisters of Christ, [illegible] his kindred. Then are we [illegible] Christ Jesus, and if so, we will grow by adding to our faith virtue, etc. As the children of the first Adam grow, and develop; so too the children of the Second grow and develop into perfect men in Christ Jesus, and when they have attained that perfect manhood they will manifest virtue, knowledge, temperance, patience, godliness, brotherly kindness and charity. The first Adam was given a help-meet for him, one worthy to assist him. This help was given him by a creative power of the infinite Father's Word. By regeneration, through the Word of God, a peculiar people are now being chosen for the purpose of becoming the bride of the Second Adam—a help-meet for him—one worthy to assist him in his reign over the nations of the earth. Oh, happy consummation! May the time soon come when it will be realized.

"The Inheritance We Seek," or "The Prize of the High Calling of God." Discourse by Bro. Eychaner, text Phil. iii. 13, 14. It was very good. Time and space forbid a lengthy report, therefore will give only a few points. In the creation of the world, at the close of the fifth day there was no one to care for it. Then it was said, "Let us make man." Accordingly he was made. Dominion given to him over all the earth. He lost it through sin. It was then given into the hands of the angels during this age, but to the saints in the next. Before Adam sinned there was nothing to harm or make afraid, there were no wild animals. All were gentle. Adam could say, come and they would come; go and they would go. Thus will it be in the Restitution age. They will obey the voice of the saints. All of these blessed good things will be enjoyed, and many other blessings that have been promised will be fulfilled after the resurrection. Then who does not truly desire to see that glad day in which we shall enter into possession of our inheritance?

Sermon by Bro. Conner, subject, "When the King comes," "Be ye also ready, for in such an hour as ye think not the Son of Man cometh." Matt. xxiv. 24. All who know Bro. Conner know better than we can write it that he dealt nicely with the subject. "He is a workman that needeth not to be ashamed." We feel especially grateful to him, and Bros. Eychaner and Austin for their assistance in singing, which was excellent all through the meetings. Indeed, we expect to hear no sweeter melodies till the innumerable host of the redeemed sing the song of victory over death and the grave.

Sunday 11 A. M. Bro. S. Wilson preached. Subject, "The Heavenly Jerusalem," instead of "The name of Jesus Christ," announced in the program. Text Rev. xxi. 9, "Come hither, and I will show thee the bride, the Lamb's wife." Matt. v. 14, "Ye are the light of the world." Fearing that we may detract from the grandeur of his beautiful pictures we will not attempt the slightest review but will leave it with him, hoping that he will write it out for publication, so that all may receive the benefit of his thoughts.

Sunday 3.30 P. M. Bro. Austin presented a most excellent treatise on "THE GREAT SALVATION." "Turn ye, turn ye, for why will ye die." Part of Ezek. xxxi. 11.

Sunday 6.30, the exercises in the social prayer meetings were of interest and a number voiced their sentiments upon the topics assigned. The thought that not the greater but the lesser deeds of kindness manifested to our fellow beings is worthy of consideration. This sentiment carries us forward to the day when our deeds

STOCKHOLDERS' MEETING.

Notice is hereby given that a meeting of the Stockholders of the Christian Publishing Association will be held at the office of THE RESTITUTION, Plymouth, Ind. on Nov. 18, 1899 at 2:00 P. M. for the election of a Board of Directors and to transact such other business as may come before the meeting.

THE War in South Africa is in progress, and several battles have been fought, with the odds so far in favor of the English. The losses on both sides are severe, and number many officers of high rank.

As announced last week we give in this issue the extended report of the Illinois Conference, and the papers as read by the young people at the time. This necessarily crowds out other matter, but request was made to have all these papers in one issue that they might be preserved together.

THE daily papers of Sunday announced the death at Goshen, Mass., of H. L. Hastings on Saturday last, of typhoid fever, aged 68. Bro. Hastings is well known to many of our readers as the Editor of The Christian, and publisher of many books and tracts, his "Anti-Infidel Library" being prominent among his works. We hope by next week to be able to give more extended notice of him.

will be weighed and when that time comes we will perhaps learn that the little acts of kindness will outweigh the larger, then it will be not so much what you know, but what have you done. Let all remember that all the deeds of kindness which we offer to others, especially to those of the household of faith; we do to, and for the Master. If trouble and temptation assail you, go to the Lord in prayer; if friends desert and fail you remember the Lord in prayer. It is the Christian's balm for every ill in life.

Sunday 7.30, Bro. Eychaner preached from Acts ii. 27-28, "Men and brethren, what shall we do?" "Repent and be baptized every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sin." In a very clear and comprehensive manner he presented each point of his argument, and we only regret that all the sermons cannot be given verbatim.

Thus closed the Conference which was one of pleasure and profit. Pleasant because of the exceeding warmth of sympathy and Christian love exhibited. Profitable, because all present received a blessing, which can be obtained only in communion and fellowship one with another.

YOUNG PEOPLE'S MEETING.

One of the best features of the Conference was the 'young peoples' meeting. They conducted their exercises in their own way, taking possession of the premises and showing (in a gentle manner) the older people how they handle business. They did credit to their work as their papers will show, which we forward for publication in THE RESTITUTION. We did not get the minutes of their business meeting, but presume their secretary will report.

BUSINESS MEETING.

The Conference opened for business at 9.30 A. M. Saturday. The Secretary made an abreviated report from the minutes of previous meetings as recorded, which was approved. The Treasurer presented the following report and it was approved.

Total amount received, $491.65, of which $88.75 was for quarterlies. The amount paid out for expense, $85.00, of which $66.35 was for quarterlies. To Evangelist, $326.00. The balance of cash on hand, $80.65. Total $491.65.

Tent fund: cash paid in $56.75. Obligations, $36.00. Total, $92.75.

The Evangelist reported having immersed 18 during the year. Could not report number of sermons, etc., because he did not have all the papers with him.

The President of the Ladies' Aid and Bible Societies reported, that while no great amount of work had been accomplished during the year, she approved of the work and purposed continuing it, at least, in her town. Reports of delegates were made from Adaline, Antioch, Chicago, Dixon, Lanark, Moriah, Waynesville and Oregon. These reports show an increase in number and interest. Chicago reported one immersion, and that a pleasant spiritual feeling prevails and discord and friction mostly overcome. All are striving to build each other up in the most holy faith. While they have not done as much in the missionary field as they would like, they feel that it is not from a lack of desire but from ability.

Antioch reported 26 members, 3 immersions in last year. Preaching every 4 weeks by Bro. Hudler. Bible class every 2 weeks.

We give a more extended report from Oregon as it was handed in, thinking it might be pleasing to some who used to reside there.

Church building bought and church organized March 11, '99. Trustees, Mrs. Martha Knodle, Fred H. Knodle and S. J. Lindsay. F. H. Knodle was chosen chairman and S. J. Lindsay Secretary of the Board of Trustees. June 10 three immersed. June 16 Bible class organized to meet in church Friday evening of each week. July 2 Sunday school organized and continues.

Financial statement: Received from the brethren at Lanark $46.00, Adaline $83.16, Antioch $79.50, Chicago $25.00, other sources $15.00, Oregon and friends $231.51; total $480.17.

Paid for preaching $65.05, on church building $130.00, repairs $63.02, incidental expenses $21.21, labor on building $53.00, furnishing $73.15, balance on hand $74.74; total $480.17.

Letters were read from Bros. W. H. Wilson, G. M. Myers, J. S. Hatch and L. W. Page.

Bro. Jas. W. Wilson was re-elected President.

By motion the constitution was amended to create the office of Vice President, and Bro. S. J. Lindsay was elected.

By motion the members of the Conference Board were re-elected.

The motion prevailed to grant ministerial certificates to Bros. S. J. Lindsay, Z. E. Brant and C. P. Graham.

On motion, Bros. Jas. W. Wilson, S. J. Lindsay, A. J. Eychaner, Samuel Wilson and F. L. Austin be appointed as interstate committee to formulate some plan whereby we may keep an account of members removing to other localities, to give numbers in each locality; also in each State. And that a calender be prepared for ministers, to be sent to headquarters for the purpose of obtaining ministerial permits.

The committee formulated the following resolution:

Resolved, that the Executive Board be authorized to take the necessary steps for compiling, printing and distributing information showing the number of members of the several Conferences and congregations of the Churches of God of the Abrahamic Faith in the United States, and the names and addresses of ministers and evangelists; the expense of such compilation and publication to be borne proportionately by the several Conferences and congregations.

In connection with the above resolution the Secretary would call the attention of all parties feeling an interest therein to the following resolution which was passed a year ago at Lanark.

Resolved, that our existing churches throughout the United States join in a delegate Conference to be held in November, 1900. The place to be selected later on.

There were nine present who, last year, pledged to give one-tenth, and all renewed the pledge except one, but another gave the pledge so the account stands even.

It was decided by vote that the Treasurer, Secretary, the committee on printing and the committee on ways and means be retained.

The committee on evangelizing was changed by substituting Bro. Lindsay for Bro. Glotfelty.

By motion it was decided that Bro. Hudler act as evangelist till the next meeting of the Board.

The Board was unanimous in asking the ministers to write out their sermons as delivered at the Conference, for the publication in the Conference quarterly.

By motion all money collected at the Conference be turned to Bro. Lindsay to pay the expense of the Conference.

The motion prevailed to pay each minister $10.00 and railroad expenses.

Collections for Conference expenses $50.55. Conference expenses $102.10. Pledges received for Conference funds $176.00.

By motion the Conference Board adjourned to meet Dec. 9, 1899.

Letters and Papers Read at the Illinois Conference.

Dear Brother Lindsay:

Though strangers to each other, I hope we are not strangers to Christ.

I came from New York to Ogle Co., Ill., in 1856. Settled on a farm in Pine Rock Township, two miles northwest of Antioch church, which I helped to build in the early sixties, and attended meeting there till 1872 when I moved to Oregon, Ill., and lived there till 1885. In those places I formed many acquaintances of brethren and sisters, in Dixon, Lanark, Blue Island and other places, Polymouth, whom I remember with much pleasure and would like to see again, but the infirmities of age forbid it.

Since I first heard of your purchase of the old Catholic Church, and of the success of your meetings, I have wondered where Brother Lindsay sprung from: whether from seed sown by Brother Collins, Stephenson, Reed or Eychaner. However this may be I hope we are founded on the Rock, Christ Jesus. As for myself, I feel the necessity of a well-grounded hope, based on God's Word, more and more.

I am now almost 84 years old, and have nothing else to look for in the future but the coming of the Lord and his kingdom. If these fail us, all is gone, my hope will have proved in vain. But I am not discouraged. The signs of the times, the commotion among the nations at the present time and other signs all combine to say to us, the Bridegroom is near. Be ye ready. I would have enjoyed meeting with you. God bless you all, and grant that we may meet in that kingdom for which we are all looking. God speed the time of Christ's coming.

In love and well-wishes to all.

SIN.

No one by nature delights in God. The humanity of which we partake, is corrupt, self-seeking, sin-loving, unruly, and full of darkness and inordinate desire, the children of wrath. All are by nature sinners. But there is a people who are not averse to God, some for whom God stands, some with whose interests he is identified, some whose sins are covered. How is this? What has happened? What has brought about this change? On the authority of the inspired Apostle Paul we know there are those whose friend God is, God is for them, their friend, their patron, their helper, their Savior. It is not because of less hatred of sin on God's part, sin is contrary to his whole nature and position. He cannot be reconciled to it. Sin strikes at all God's perfections. Sin would unseat him from his throne if it were strong enough. God stands out in eternal antagonism to sin. The law of sin and death is unyielding. It must stand forever. It is not by any letting down in this respect that God has become the friend of sinful men. Neither has this come to pass through the fulfilment of all his demands on the part of those to whom God has become a friend. No mere man has ever, or can ever perfectly keep the law of God. Once a sinner, the most perfect obedience afterward would still leave a back-standing liability which he cannot pay off. Hence it is written in just so many words, that by the deeds of the law can no flesh be justified. Do what he will, no man on the ground of his own doing or righteousness, can ever merit the divine favor or secure the friendship of God. Only by putting faith in his promises and lovingly obeying him, can we hope to please him. To the most of us there is little need of dwelling on the wonderful inducements God makes to win our love. And although the words of the beloved Apostle John in the 2nd chapter, 1st verse, were written nearly 1900 years ago, they can reach us today with equally as great a force as they did the early disciples, if we are new creatures in Christ Jesus. "My little children, these things I write unto you, that ye sin not." And why should we abstain from all manner of sin? My answer would be, because God hates sin. We should love what he loves and hate what he hates. Young people, get rid of the idea of big sins and little sins. God hates sin with a hatred that will not allow him to even listen to our prayers without a Mediator. It is only in Jesus' sin-covering name that he will hear us. Beware of that which is called little slips and white lies, and things which in every day life come to be tolerated by society. Yes, I am convinced that these things which blunt our moral perceptions will consign us to the blackness of darkness forever, tens of thousands more than will what are called heinous sins by the world at large. Beware of the popular opinion of right and wrong, the serpent's slimy trail can be seen all through it, and it is sure to land its victims in sinner's graves.

The Spirit through Paul tells us to avoid not only evil, but the very appearance of evil. Perhaps you may be indulging in habits that you have long ago decided are not sin. But can you say they have not the appearances of evil? Is not the use of tobacco despised by many who have not the knowledge of God? Is not the indulgence in strong drink even moderately condemned by many of the people of our land? These together with other habits are evilly spoken of and should be abstained from. Remember we are not our own, we are bought with a price. Jesus wants a spotless bride when he comes. But one thing can separate us from him and that is sin unrepented of, unforgiven. Sin unrepented of does not mean sin that we are merely sorry for, but sin not turned away from, sin not forsaken. We may ask forgiveness a thousand times, but it will not be granted till we forsake it. To obtain forgiveness for any sin, we must have another mind entirely different from the one we had when we sinned. The repetition of the same sin gives the lie to our prayers; the past is unforgiven, and every fresh offence is piled on the others, and we only deceive ourselves, not God. God forbid that any of us who have experienced the blessedness of those whose iniquities are pardoned, and whose sins are covered be found in that awful condition. The gospel of God and the provisional remedies to meet all our weaknesses are most complete. In words, we have an Advocate at the court of heaven who is touched with the feelings of our infirmities. Blessed Jesus, he has not forgotten the struggles to overcome, nor the suffering through which he was made perfect. We have only to come to God through him, and his blood will cleanse his brethren from all unrighteousness. Yes, he is faithful and just to forgive, if we confess and forsake our evil ways. If we say that we have not sinned, we make him a liar and his Word is not in us. If we say that we have fellowship with him and walk in darkness we lie, and do not the truth. May God in his infinite mercy, seal upon each one of us those inestimable lessons that we may be spiritually quickened and have a more realizing sense of the highness and holiness of our calling, and, as never before, know the blessedness of even now, sitting together in heavenly places in Christ Jesus. Amen.

JAMES C. THOMPSON.

THE MOTE AND THE BEAM.

"After these things Jesus walked in Galilee: for he would not walk in Jewry, because the Jews sought to kill him. Now the Jews' feast of tabernacles was at hand. His brethren therefore said unto him, Depart hence, and go into Judea, that thy disciples also may see the works that thou doest. For there is no man that doeth any thing in secret, and he himself seeketh to be known openly. If thou do these things, shew thyself to the world. For neither did his brethren believe in him." John vii. 1-5.

Who is there that has not a beam in his eye? Who can say, "The sight wherewith I look upon the way of God's salvation is perfect! The eye with which I look upon and judge the world is unfailing." Not one of us can say this. There is a beam of some sort in every eye. In this eye it is a beam of the world—it may be of money, pleasure or ambition. In this eye the beam may be decked out with flowers called "Great effects," and hiding the decay of religious fanaticism. Here is a beam called justice or some times cruelty on whose hard polished sides the ivy of mercy can find no hold. They are all beams, larger or lesser, some more deeply rooted than others. Think how many have one of these beams, or it may be only some part of one.

Then there are other beams more common place and just as ugly, if not so serious. The beams of selfishness, of covetousness, of deception, of frivolity and that hard to-be-rooted-out beam of a quick temper. These are the failings of all of us. It takes the grace of God and long years of Christian living to cast these beams from the eye. How the eye of a Christian love is marred and the vision distorted by one of these beams. We can see nothing in its true image while there is this kind of an obstruction in our eye. We see a brother struggling along with little strength, but much courage—struggling with his own beam perhaps as well as with the obstructions he finds in his path and his strength being little he falls. Then having a large beam of malice in our eye criticises our brother. It is natural. With the beam in the eye we can do nothing else. Before we can truly help a brother we must get rid of our beams. Then our eyes having the scales removed are clear with the light of God's love and from past experience we can help others to cast out their motes or beams. That is the only way which our eye can become trustworthy and capable of really helping others. Knowing this to be true let us hasten to remove the beams from our eyes. We know God will help us. So let us go to him.

BE THOU FAITHFUL UNTO DEATH.

"Be thou faithful unto death and I will give thee a crown of life." Rev. ii. 10.

This was part of the message of Christ through John to the churches. Faithful means firm in the adherence to our duties, which we assumed when we took on the name of Christ. He that hath put his hand to the plow must never turn back. If we have left the world and its follies we must never return to them, we must forget them forever. If we do this we will be as Paul says in 1 Thess., "Preserved blameless to the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ."

We must be ever on the watch, for the day of the Lord cometh as a thief in the night. And if it comes upon us unawares, we will not hear his voice. Therefore we should take heed to Peter's words, "Wherefore, beloved, seeing that ye look for such things, be diligent that ye may be found of him in peace, without spot and blameless. And to be found thus we must leave behind us sin and darkness, and turn our faces toward the light of God and truth.

"I will watch and wait till the storm is o'er,
And a light shines out from the golden shore;
Then the Lord will say, "Weary wand'rer, come
To the land of rest, to thy blissful home."

If we fail in our duty toward God we lose the inheritance promised to the faithful. But it is not by our works of righteousness but by his mercy that we are saved. In 1 Thess. we find some precepts set down which we are to follow if we are to be found ready when he calls. "Pray without ceasing." "In every thing give thanks." "Hold fast to that which is good." "Abstain from all appearances of evil." "Put on the breastplate of faith and love for a helmet of salvation." If we do all these things then, "We which are alive shall be caught up together with him in the clouds to meet the Lord in the air and so shall we ever be with the Lord."

If we do not remain faithful what sorrow we shall experience when we hear him say, "Depart from me, ye cursed, into everlasting fire prepared for the devil and his angels: For I was an hungered and ye took me not in; naked and ye clothed me not, sick and in prison and ye visited me not."

But, on the other hand, if we fulfil the promises we have made and remain faithful, how happy we shall be to be recognized by the King and hear him say, "Come, ye blessed of my Father, enter thou into the joy of thy Lord."

MARY ASLAKSEN.

PERSECUTIONS.

The persecutions invented and perpetrated upon the early Christians, were, undoubtedly, sufficient to have extinguished the liveliest forms of religion ever invented by sage or reformer.

Had Christianity been purely of human origin it never would have survived the great persecutions of A. D. 64 and 65. The policy of the Roman government, the fanaticism of the superstitious people, and the self-interest of pagan priests conspired for the persecution of a religion which threatened to demolish the tottering fabric of idolatry, and they left no expedients of legislation, of violence, of craft, and of wickedness untried, to blot it from the earth.

The aggressive tendancy of Christianity, and the inflexible perseverance of its adherents, made it an object of contempt among the pagans. Christianity was making headway. Daily accessions were being made to the church from ranks of both Jew and Pagan. Heathendom was on the decline. Pagan temples and altars were being deserted. If Christianity became the prevailing religion as it bid fair to do, the priests, gladiators, and those depending upon the rites of the temples, would be deprived of their income. A refusal to recognize the Roman deities was a crime punishable by death. The most ingenious and diabolical contrivances were invented to intensify the sufferings of the victims.

The primitive church received from Christ both by example and precept indications that it would take all their energies and even their lives to plant the gospel in pagan lands.

Christ was betrayed, condemned, buffeted, arrayed in purple, given vinegar and gall and nailed to the cross. We shall not follow Jesus in all those terrible night wanderings, and fearful scenes that precede his final conflict on the cross. We read of great victories, but none so grand as Calvary.

In my meditations I behold a great multitude of people surging toward Golgotha. It is not the step of military discipline, but rather the undisciplined tramp of an infuriated mob. Pilate the Roman procurator has affixed his signature to the death warrant of Jesus. The court-yard is thrown open, and the precious Lord of life and glory is led away bearing his own cross. (It was a Roman custom that all criminals condemned to death by the barbarous mode of crucifixion were compelled to carry their own instruments of torture.) At length the multitude surmount the hill, and fearful is the scene that follows.

Christ predicted the persecution of his followers. In speaking to his twelve apostles before sending them out on their mission, he says, "Behold, I send you forth as sheep in the midst of wolves: be ye therefore, wise as serpents, and harmless as doves. But beware of men; for they will deliver you up to the councils, and they will scourge you in their synagogues. And ye shall be brought before governors and kings for my sake, for a testimony against them, and the Gentiles. And ye shall be hated of all men for my name's sake; but he that endureth to the end shall be saved." Is the recompense sufficient?

Great inducements must be set forth in order to get men and women to accept positions where life is endangered. Yet the present life is compared to "A vapor, that appeareth for a little time, and then vanisheth away." The future life is eternal. If we suffer with Christ, we shall also reign with him. The suffering is short, the glory eternal.

Sometimes the burden laid upon us seems greater than our strength can bear, but compare with it an "Eternal weight of glory" that awaits the faithful.

ALMEDA MITCHELL.

OBEDIENCE.

Obedience is one means that leads to eternal life. Obey your parents as it causes them to show us respect and honor. If we disobey them it will be the cause of great grief to them and will put a thorn in our hearts that is not easily removed. But above all, obey God in all his commandments and it will bring everlasting life and joy. Now if we are sincerely obedient we will not say what we will or will not do. The Savior commands us to repent, believe and be baptized. We cannot say that we will repent and that will do; nor can we repent and believe and say that is enough; but we must repent, believe and be baptized. If we do not, God will hold us accountable.

Mary, the mother of Christ, said to the servants at the feast, "Whatsoever he sayeth unto you, do it." We will turn to Rom. v. 19, where Paul says, "For as by one man's disobedience many were made sinners." The disobedience of one brought sin, misery, grief, tears, heart-aches and every thing that causes distruction. The obedience of one brings love, joy, peace and everlasting life to all who obey him.

In Heb. v. 8, 9, the writer says, "Though he were a Son, yet learned he obedience by the things which he suffered; and being made perfect, he became the author of eternal salvation unto them that obey him."

THOSE WHO WILL NOT REPENT MUST SUFFER.

In these words we have an example of the plain warnings which Amos the prophet, uttered to a people who had wandered from God. It required great courage for this servant of the Lord to go forth from his quiet home in Judea, unto the rival kingdom of Israel, and point out, in bold language, the sins of the people, and the chastisements by which God had endeavored to recall them to himself. These had no lasting impression upon their hard hearts. But the time was coming when they would have to listen to his voice, and hear the judgments they had brought upon themselves by their obstinate wickedness.

The Lord is patient and long-suffering. He showers blessings on his people, and waits for them to look up to him in thankfulness. When they fail to do this, he sends reminders in the form of grief and trouble thus teaching their dependence on him and warning them to return to his loving care. As the husbandman prunes his vines even so does the Lord chastise his people for their own good. The longer we resist God the harder our hearts become. The plowman frequently comes upon a tough place through which it is very difficult to plow. He finds it is an old road-bed, or trodden path. Habitual sins make such tough spots in our natures. Ordinary influences will not break them up. The pick and crow-bar must be applied. Extra spiritual aid must be sought that these hard places do not ruin the crop of grace. Thus do the sins of idolatry, so to speak, make road-beds in the hearts of the people until they are insensible to the gentle influences of God's mercy and can scarcely be aroused by the warnings of the swift-coming judgments. They refuse to walk in the way of God's laws and in spite of warnings and entreaties refuse to turn to it.

God cannot permit his righteous government to be overthrown by the defiance of sinful man. Let us beware how, in times of prosperity, we wander away from God and turn a deaf ear to his commands and the entreaties of his love.

It is a sad thing when a nation or an individual refuses to learn the lessons which God wishes to teach by his chastisements. When all else fails God will turn upon man with destroying judgment to stop the evil tide. The truth is set before us urging us to make a complete surrender to God. The voice of the prophet cries "Prepare to meet thy God." These words are spoken to each soul today as forcibly as they were to the people of Israel. A thousand providences of our lives remind us of our debt of gratitude; disappointments, sickness and loss bid us turn to God and serve him as never before. The day is coming when each one of us must stand in the presence of our Creator and render our account. It would be well to ask ourselves today if we are prepared for that day? We should pray to be delivered from unbelief and to be filled with living, working and all-conquering faith. If we are hindering God's works by our unbelief he may see fit to change our position and get us out of the way of others who are doing his work. If you have not faith enough in the power of the gospel, or in the promises of God, or in the power of prayer, you should be in earnest and ask God for help. We ought to have faith that will be firm in the day of temptation, of trial, of conflict and of opposition.

One sin unrepented of and unforsaken will bring condemnation. The blood of Jesus Christ cleanseth us from all sin. "If we say that we have no sin we deceive ourselves and the truth is not in us." If we confess our sins God is faithful and just to forgive them, and he is able to cleanse us from all unrighteousness. Therefore, we should aim to please him; for he blesses and prospers all those who serve him. We ought to show our love for him in all our daily actions. It is only as God's protecting hand is over us that we will be saved from countless calamities. When this is withdrawn we have no refuge left. Those who are out of Christ, have you read God's promises and warnings and yet linger in paths of sin? How long are you going to tempt the patience of God? That patience which has been so long tried. God will punish the wicked and reward the righteous. We belong to God and have no right to resist his commands. When he forsakes us there is no hope left for us. It will surely be a terrible punishment "When the kings of the earth, and the great men, and the rich men, and the chief captains, and the mighty men, and every bond man, and every free man hide themselves in dens and in the rocks of the mountains, and call on the mountains to fall on them and hide them from the face of him that sitteth on the throne, and from the wrath of the Lamb; for the great day of his wrath is come and who shall be able to stand?"

God will deal as he thinks best with the oppressor or the wealthy who crowd out the poor and needy, disregarding their wants as long as they can themselves revel in luxury, and caring not at whose cost their ease and comfort was gained. Against such the wrath of God is especially directed. Let those, who are eager to exact labor for insufficient pay, rejoice in what they call "bargains;" which have become such through unrecompensed toil; that there will be another side to such "bargains" by and by. "As ye measure, it shall be measured unto you." Such iniquity will not be left unpunished. Destruction will come upon the wicked when they feel the most secure. "For, lo, he that formeth the mountains, and createth the winds, and declareth unto man what is his thoughts, that maketh the morning darkness, and treadeth upon the high places of the earth. The Lord, the God of hosts, is his name." Amos iv. 13.

The grandeur and power of God are vividly pictured in this wonderful verse. God knows us as we cannot know ourselves. He reveals to us the deceitfulness of our hearts, and thus helps us to rise to better things. His condescension and mercy are only equalled by his greatness. The more we study Gods character the more we shall love him. The time is being fulfilled and the kingdom of God is nigh at hand. Repent ye, and believe the gospel. God is able to deliver his people out of their distress. "The wicked fleeth when no man pursueth." We should desire others to share in the blessings which fall to us.

EMMA LINDSAY.

BE NOT WEARY IN WELL DOING.

Paul in Galatians says in the sixth chapter and ninth verse, "And let us not be weary in well doing; for in due season we shall reap if we faint not." Paul in traveling all of the countries, endured very hard trials, but through them all he never thought once of giving up in despair. His persecutions, trials and hardships only kept him close to God; for he knew he would receive strong help and courage. He never grew weary in well doing, as seen by 2 Tim. iv. 6-9. He said, "For I am now ready to be offered, and the time of my departure is at hand. I have fought a good fight, I have finished my course, I have kept the faith; henceforth there is laid up for me a crown of righteousness, which the Lord the righteous Judge, shall give me at that day; and not to me only, but unto all them also that love his appearing." Oh, let us all work as Paul did so that we can rejoice at our Master's appearing. I do believe if we would work as Paul did and not get discouraged in well doing, we could every one of us rejoice.

There is not one of us that ought to get discouraged in doing large works for our Master any quicker than small works. It takes perseverance to accomplish great tasks. We must not get in a hurry to finish our tasks, for if we do perhaps they would not be very well done. Let us not be weary nor neglect to do our small duties. Even the least we do for Jesus is precious in his loving sight. It does not mean the smaller the work we do, but the largest amount of work we do according to our means will be a precious gift. If we are not able to do great deeds for our Master, the small deeds will be received cheerfully by him and we will receive our reward according to our works.

We ought to cultivate loving dispositions and be kind and loving to those around us, always speak a cheerful word to the weak and disheartened. Another great thing is to live a Christian life every day. If we keep a Christian spirit about us and not be haughty, we can accomplish much more for our Master, and our influence over our friends will be much greater.

Now as to our reward, we will not receive money for our work as a laborer receives pay for his work from his master. We will receive a something far more brighter, something of greater value, something that will endure eternally. People who do not work as Paul did for this reward will not be apt to receive one, no matter how wealthy they are, for this reward cannot be bought with money. I am going to try to work as Paul did and receive an everlasting reward. Brothers and sisters, I hope each and every one of us may receive "a crown."

SELF CONTROL.

Sooner or later we find out that life is not a holiday, but a discipline. Earlier or later we all discover that the world is not a playground. When ever we forget that, the puzzle of life begins. It is quite clear God means it for a school. The discipline of life is a preparation for meeting the Father. If we would ever see him as he is and behold him in his beauty we must have the educated eye, and that must be trained here. We are told that the pure in heart shall see God. If we would see him, we must gain the mastery over self and try to pattern our lives after the One absolute pure life that was lived upon the earth; which is the light of men. "Beloved," writes the Apostle John, "now are we [illegible] children of God, and it is not yet manifest what we shall be." We know if he shall be manifested we shall be like him, for we shall see him even as he is, and then he adds "And every one that hath this hope in him purifieth himself, even as he is pure. Absolute purity of life is nothing less than to be pure, even as he is pure. This is the divine standard, a lower one is human, for example if we abstain from the grosser forms of sin, drunkenness, gluttony, impurity, or other fleshly sins, or even from temper, jealousy, envy, strife or other heart sins, this is not enough. To be pure even as he is pure goes far deeper. It means that all the secret springs where the motives are formed must be cleansed from self and must proceed from constant contact with the living God. Jesus was in heaven while he was still on the earth. All that he did on the earth was the outcome of the life lived in the closest oneness with the Father. If we would gain the mastery over self we must be in close communion with the sinless One. Gazing in the face of Christ and beholding the light of the knowledge and glory of God which shines there, will surely sever our hearts from worldly objects.

Dannecker, the German sculptor, spent eight years in producing a face of Christ; and at last wrought out one in which the emotions of love and sorrow were so perfectly blended, that beholders wept as they looked upon it. Being solicited to employ his great talent on a statue of Venus he replied, "After gazing so long into the face of Christ, think you that I can now turn my attention to a heathen God?" Here we have the secret by which we can sever ourselves from worldly idols. The Christ-like life is the only satisfactory evidence any man can give his own conscience and his fellowmen that he is a Christian. The words of Paul to the Galatians are a proof that he held that opinion. They were a strong, impulsive people in whom the vices of the time were very active and they were assailed by powerful temptations from their own natures and their surroundings. The Apostle, no doubt, liked them and sympathized with them, but he did not lower the standard to make the path easier for them. He tells them what are the fruits of the flesh and which are those of the Spirit, and leaves them to judge which life they are living. If their lives bring forth the fruits of the flesh, there can be no doubt as to their nature. The same test operates today. It is left to every man to live the life of a man or that of a brute. He may gratify his body and find happiness in eating and drinking and pleasures of the senses, or he may devote himself to the higher life and understand the law of spiritual elevation. The latter will call for trials, difficulties and continuous effort.

It might be impossible to live this life were it not for the power which Paul describes to the Galatians as he did to all others, to whom he preached. In the power of the resurrection lay the hope for them as it lies for us. The old life is ended, the old power of the flesh is broken, when we become identified with Christ in his death on the cross. Through that death deliverance is wrought. As by the battles of the Civil War, the slave was emancipated and could go free if he would; so by the death of Christ freedom from the dominion of the flesh is placed within the reach of every man. He may cease to be a slave to his appetites and passions; cease to be a mere animal, and become a true man, a son of God. He who would keep the evil out of his heart must be continually on guard, for like the ground it will produce noxious weeds without any sowing. The animal nature with which the spiritual is so intimately associated, will gain the predominance, if it be not rigorously held under. But Christ not only won emancipation for men by his death, but gives power by his resurrection. He lives and lives to help all who would profit by his death. It is the hope of Christ's coming in us, making part and parcel of our lives, which impels us to purify ourselves, even as he is pure. What ever hinders us from rising, whatever the nature of the chain that holds us down to the worldly and physical life is to be cast off. If we would rise from self to become in nature like Christ, we must be willing to sever all the bonds that hold us to the human.

LILLEY MYERS.

A REASONABLE SERVICE.

"I beseech you therefore brethren by the mercies of God, that ye present your bodies a living sacrifice, holy and acceptable unto God, which is your reasonable service."

No person possessing a firm belief in God and his kindness can reasonably deny him the right to the exclusive adoration of mankind. All forms of life and power owe development not to the fortuitous addition of layer upon layer to the exterior portion, not to the mere fact that they are above us, but to a mysterious principle of appropriation from within which causes the gradual development and transformation. This mysterious essential is life, the primitive force which is fundamental to all being whose origin God alone can solve. In the Scriptures it is called the Spirit of God, and it is present in every living diatom and every living man. Death alone can cause it to forsake us.

Thus it follows that every manifestation of human power, skill or reasoning is but the exercise, in a limited way, of what proceeds from him. Every action or deed, every thought or expression, every idea or principle, in fact our very origin makes us more and more indebted to this divine principle. This he becomes more and more dear to us, as through its measures we are able to partake of the joys of our existence displayed through God's handiwork, or win fame and exalted places in the eyes of our fellowmen. But alas, the days come whose time we know not, and all this joy and pleasure comes to an abrupt termination, cut off from us as completely as the branch is severed from the tree; for death stealing over us with its awe inspiring cloud of mystery envelopes us one by one in its fibrous folds, and with no comment, no previous warning this wonderful spirit is gone, and we are as the clay we tread upon.

Where then is the applause that once ravished the ear? Where is the fame that once incensed the mind? Of what avail is the wealth of gold, the accumulations of ages? Down to the ground with a crash have come every piece of bronze or masonry which stood for commemoration of human greatness or power, yea more, shattered to atoms till not one piece rests upon another. The benefit of recognition is lost upon the unconscious one. Though the torch light procession may accompany the bier to its resting place, still God alone is left the sole judge of his power and greatness. But joyful indeed is the hope of regaining this cherished life and still more pleasing is it to know that when once regained it will abide with us forever. But certain restrictions and instructions are imposed upon us if we wish to gain this for a permanent possession. The Scriptures are unique and peculiar in one respect, that they do not extol men for their mental adroitness or for performing some part in a popular movement. On the other hand they praise men who possess great spiritual qualities and fidelity to their Creator. Every character which has a spiritual complexion receives all due recognition, for the eyes of the Lord are in every place and his judgments are fair and just. How the Scriptures dwell upon the meekness of Moses, the faith of Abraham, the patience of Job, the courage of Joshua and the gentleness of David. No hero of the hour has a monument in God's Word. It is the old and tried soldier who receives honorable mention, no matter whether he be ever so humble in worldly eyes.

The right and true estimates of society are those which are formed according to a Divine standard. The ground upon which the world confers its recognition is never akin to those upon which God is prepared to honor men. Here a smart rogue may move unabashed in society. Though he be morally and intellectually beneath contempt, still if he is the possessor of an amassed fortune, people bow down before him and cater to his wants as if he were a saint.

The godly man is not so. He loves the name and Word of his Creator, and rejoices in the hope of the coming day, when the earthly things shall be obliterated and the earth shall be clothed in righteousness and in truth. His ambitions and aspirations are to prove himself worthy in the eyes of his Creator and try to "Leave no memorial but a world made a little better by his life."

What a wonderful aspect the cities of the nations would present should each one of us devote himself a reasonable service to the exaltation of God alone. Men would step about with a less haughty mien and not comport themselves as if the universe was included among their possessions, and on this account we should be under obligations to them, for bearing up their grandiquis. Society would be interesting and pure, while all grave problems which perplex and harass the nations would be disposed of forevermore.

Blessed be his glorious name who made an interference through the body of Jesus Christ in our behalf in order that true religion might become a universal thing, and that we shall be able to join in the grand throng at the beginning of the measureless period and welcome our King.

With this hastily prepared paper goes my best wishes that a good influential meeting may be held and a definitely defined organization perfected, as well as my sincere regret that business affairs at home will not admit my meeting with you.

LAWRENCE E. WILSON.

GOOD WORKS.

This subject we consider a very important one, which ought to be kept constantly before our minds. The Savior exhorted us to love and to good works. In James ii. 20, we read that "faith without works is dead;" also in the 14 verse of the same chapter, "If a man have not works can faith save him?" "Yea, a man may say, Thou hast faith, and I have works: show me thy faith without thy works, and I will show thee my faith by my works." Was not Abraham our father justified by works, when he had offered Isaac his son upon the altar? Seest thou how faith wrought with his works, and by works was faith made perfect? And the Scripture was fulfilled which saith, Abraham believed God, and it was imputed unto him for righteousness: and he was called the friend of God. Ye see then how that by works a man is justified, and not by faith only. Jas. i 22, exhorts his brethren to be doers of the Word, and not hearers only. Many people seem to believe that their salvation depends upon their good works, while others may go to the other extreme and think that if they have the faith that is all sufficient, but by the Scripture above quoted it has been proven that faith and works can not be separated, one being as essential as the other. A real Christian will be known by his works. This truth Jesus taught: "Ye shall know them by their fruits."

We cannot manifest a Christian character without its effects being witnessed by those around us. Works to be approved by God must be incited by love: love to God and to our fellowmen. Luke x. 26 27. When a certain lawyer asked Christ what he should do to inherit eternal life Jesus said to him: "What is written in the law? How readest thou?" He answering said, "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy strength, and with all thy mind; and thy neighbor as thyself." "And he said unto him, Thou hast answered right: this do, and thou shalt live." So much love would certainly lead a person to faith and obedience to all God's requirements. 1 Cor. xiii. The Apostle Paul speaking of charity (love) says: "Though I have the gift of prophecy, and understand all mysteries, and all knowledge; and though I have all faith, so that I could remove mountains, and have not charity, I am nothing. And though I bestow all my goods to feed the poor, and though I give my body to be burned, and have not charity, it profiteth me nothing." He then tells us of the fruit it brings forth in those who possess it and that it never fails. John vi. 28-29. When the people asked Christ what they should do that they might work the works of God? Jesus said unto them, "This is the work of God, that ye believe on him whom he hath sent." 1 John iii. 23-24. "And this is his commandment that we should believe on the name of his Son Jesus Christ, and love one another, as he gave us commandment. And he that keepeth his commandments dwelleth in him, and he in him. And hereby we know that he abideth in us, by the Spirit which he hath given us."

We must carry out the principles taught by Christ in our every day life by our conduct, our conversation, our works, striving day by day, to carry out the golden rule, to hold up the standard of truth, adding to our faith virtue, (courage) telling to others the gospel and urging them to accept it, manifesting patience and forbearance with those who will not listen when we tell them of the coming King and kingdom. We must do good to others, putting down self and working for those by whom we are surrounded, lightening their sorrows and cares as far as we can and we shall have our reward at the coming and kingdom of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ.

ANNA L. ADAMS.

STUMBLING-BLOCKS.

Like many other Bible words this word stumbling alone is a volume in itself. In olden times it is said to have indicated a military instrument put in the way of an enemy to hinder his progress. God said to the children of Israel, "Thou shalt not put a stumbling-block in the way of the blind." Webster defines the word: "That which causes to err." Many sayings of Jesus admonishes us against placing a bad example before our neighbors, and Paul says, in his appealing manner, "Let us not therefore judge one another any more, but judge this rather, that no man put a stumbling block or an occasion to fall in his brother's way." Stumbling-blocks of our placing, hurt Jesus—hurt his cause. Think of it' how can we? Let us ask the question. Is my conduct marring the character of one dear me? Has my thoughtlessness added burdens they can no longer bear, and they being spoiled while I indulge in my sins, and neglect my duty?

As we are traveling the Christian road that leads to immortality let us notice some of the stumbling-blocks encountering us.

IMPATIENCE.

Says one, "I would like to walk with her to the beautiful city of Jerusalem where we expect to see Jesus, but she is so very impatient and fault-finding, she would only be a stumbling block in my way, and so, I'll take the easy way of gliding down with the giddy throng instead of climbing up with the care-ladened few." My impatience has caused my brother to err.

INFLUENCE.

"I don't know how she can talk about honesty and truth for she never tells a bit of news as she hears it, and she takes advantage of the helplessness and poverty of others to gain something for herself," which is a great stumbling-block in the way of her influence.

PURITY OF HEART.

Hardly to be mentioned in the presence of a royal retinue, waiting for their King is the great stumbling-block to heart-purity. Impure conversation. Little, low insinuations, and idle jesting. Remember Jesus said, "Blessed are the pure in heart."

I have noticed but a few stumbling-blocks found in our way. We all know our own imperfections of character. We place these different stumbling-blocks in the way of those who are striving in a weak resolve, perhaps to lead a new life and thereby make it so difficult for them to do right, that enter their closets and cry aloud to God in tears for relief. We may not realize what our influence has been until it flashes upon us from the silver-gleams of a coffin lid or speaks to us from the silent grave that holds them. No pleadings of ours can reach them, and like Esau we seek a place of repentance; but find none, though we seek it with tears. Why can we find no place of repentance? Because to repent means to turn about from doing wrong, to doing right. If the opportunity is gone it never returns: but other opportunities will come. Let us pray mightily to God that we may use them for him. I cannot close until I notice some of the

PRECIOUS HELPS

In God's talks to us, how we may avoid the stumbling-blocks How sweet and restful they are! Love thinketh no evil. Love is the greatest lever known to remove all these stumbling-blocks from our pathway. Oh, love! thou art indeed beautiful. Come and dwell in us and conquer every wrong within us. "Love thinketh no evil." God is faithful, who will not suffer you to be tempted above that ye are able; but will with the temptation also make a way to escape that ye may be able to bear it." Does not this passage lift up the heart and make it sing? God has allowed us to petition to him for help, in the form of prayer. Only the heart that knows its own frailty and weakness can measure this privilege. The more we cry to God for help the sweeter and lovelier will he appear to us.

CHARITY.

Sweet is the power of love in the world, drawing us nearer to our fellow-men and to God, but yet, how all-powerful is the virtue of charity, that divine virtue, which causes us to gaze with pitying eyes on the faults and failures of men.

Just within our view is a group of unsightly bushes and stumps, here and there an old building and broken-down fence, all black and disfigured with the dust and decay of years. Day by day have we gazed on this picture until the darkness hid it from our view, when lo, during the night hours the snow, emblem of purity, falls silently over hill and vale, and covers each hovel and palace with a sparkling robe of whiteness. We arise and where our old landmarks yesterday presented such an unsightly view, we now see them transfigured and shining in the morning sun like the gem-incrusted palaces of kings might be. Just so can we, with the tender mantle of Charity, softly cover the faults of those around us; and in doing so, give to them, out of the fullness of our own blessings, bringing sunshine to hearts that have been darkened with the gloom of care and sorrow; for do we not read, "Charity shall cover the multitude of sins."

Jesus says: "Ye have the poor always with you," and "He that hath pity upon the poor lendeth unto the Lord, and that which he hath given will he pay him again." So let us keep within our hearts a feeling of compassion that will lead us to lighten their load, and help in their troubles. "The righteous considereth the cause of the poor." "He that giveth unto the poor shall not lack."

Is it fulfilling the divine law of charity to toss the coin to the beggar standing on the crossing, and pursue our way without thought or care of how the kind word, or bright smile might have chased the weary look from the haggard eyes, or lightened the heavy heart?

Give them from the bounty of blessings which God has showered upon you. If you cannot help their worldly needs you can give from the fulness of a loving heart the tender sympathy of a friend in need, and by so doing fulfill the trust left by Jesus.

"I was an hungered, and ye gave me meat; I was thirsty, and ye gave me drink; I was a stranger and ye took me in; naked, and ye clothed me; I was sick and ye visited me; I was in prison, and ye came unto me. Verily, I say unto you, inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these, my brethren, ye have done it unto me." Matt. xxv. 35, 36, 40.

Listen to the teaching of Paul, who says, "And above all these things, put on charity, which is the bond of perfectness."

Take the rose without the fragrance, or the bird without its trills of song and what is left will not satisfy. As the flower needs the sweetness, and the bird its song, so must our hearts be filled with the tender feeling of charity, that can overlook the wrong, and can stoop to our fallen and needy ones, helping them up and forward to a better, brighter life.

EDITH ANDERSON.

TAKE HEED HOW YOU BUILD.

"Take heed how you build." What is the significance of this admonition?

The first question might be, What is it that we wish to build? Is it a temporal house, or is it rather a work, built upon the sure foundation, which shall be holy and acceptable before God, a spiritual temple of character, consecrated to the Lord?

Paul tells us, "According to the grace of God which is given unto me, as a wise master-builder, I have laid the foundation, and another buildeth thereon. But let every man take heed how he buildeth thereupon. For other foundation can no man lay than is laid, which is Christ Jesus."

In order to present this matter more clearly to our minds, it may be well to consider the points involved in building a temporal house.

After selecting a suitable site for the building, the builder proceeds to look about for the best possible material for the foundation, that which will best withstand the attacks of time and wear.

If the selection of a good foundation is so important in a mere temporal house, how much more so should be that of the foundation upon which we are to build the incorruptible works which pertain to our eternal welfare.

Let us then waste no time in searching among the treacherous sands of selfishness and lust, but let us rather hasten to accept that sure foundation which God hath given us, even Jesus Christ, the stone which the builders rejected, and which is become the chief corner stone. Then, when the waves of adversity beat against it, it will stand immovable in the face of their fury.

Now, with such a foundation to rest upon, what should the superstructure be? Let us hearken again to the words of the apostle. "Now, if any man build upon this foundation gold, silver, precious stones, wood, hay, stubble; every man's work shall be made manifest; for the day shall declare it, because it shall be revealed by fire; and the fire shall try every man's works, of what sort it is."

If any man's work abide which he hath built thereupon, he shall receive a reward. If any man's work shall be burned, he shall suffer loss; but he himself shall be saved, yet so as by fire.

The (wise) builder, in supplying material for his temporal house, selects that which is both storm and fire proof. It then behooves us to construct our spiritual temple of such material that it shall be proof against the fires of trial and persecution.

Such a steadfast faith then do we need, which will pass unburnished through the fires of tribulation, only to show forth with greater glory in the end.

Such a faith we may fitly compare with the gold, and silver, which are only made the more pure by fire.

And now, having secured the foundation of love and charity, with Jesus Christ the corner stone, let us erect upon it an edifice of character, walled about with incorruptible faith, bound together with chains of loyalty to God, and adorned with the bright jewels of virtue, temperance, patience and godliness, an edifice, strong, noble and eternal under the heavens.

EDWIN T. RENNER.

Have You Read This?

By examining our list we find there are between 500 and 600 people whose time has expired. Some only a few months and others some years. If each one of you who are thus owing us would go to the office right now and send the money due us, we would have over a thousand dollars with which to push forward our work.

Brothers and Sisters, we need this money very much. We have earned it—it is ours—and if you do not send it to us, but use it on self, you are simply spending our money. It is not yours—it is ours. Were we in position to do so we would gladly lend you the amount, but the fact is we have bills to pay and cannot lend it to you longer. We ask you kindly and in the spirit of love and justice, to at once send us what you owe us. If you cannot spare it all now, then send part of it, and the balance after awhile. Please do not neglect this, but get a dollar and send to us right away today. We thank you in advance for the favor, and assure you we appreciate it very much.

Conference Notice.

The first Quarterly Conference of the Church of God of the Abrahamic Faith in Indiana, will be held at Plymouth, commencing Thursday evening, Nov. 16, 1899, and continue over the following Sunday. The brethren here are anxious for a good meeting, so let all come with that end in view. Come with hearts full of love and charity and let us earnestly pray that that divine influence may be with us that will lift us up and consecrate our lives more to his service. This we need above everything else.

A welcome is extended to all lovers of the truth. Let each organization send delegates. A program is being prepared which will appear in due time.

Our Helping Fund.

We whose names are given herewith, believing that it is our duty to provide a fund to be used in sending THE RESTITUTION to those too poor to pay for it themselves, do cheerfully give the amount set opposite our names for the purpose of aiding the managers of the paper to supply the needy ones. This fund to be applied as the doners request, (or when left to the publisher to decide) only for those who themselves state their circumstances and need, or whose case is presented by some one known to be trustworthy.

Works of Bro. Wiley Jones.

TWELVE WORDS, or the true meaning of Hell, Soul, Spirit, Ghost, Paradise, Incorruption, Incorruptible, Immortal, Immortality, Forever, Everlasting, Eternal, and their originals as learned by their uses in the Bible. A tract of 40 pages, sold formerly at 10 cents a copy.

THE GOSPEL OF THE KINGDOM, in 8 page, double column tract, sold formerly at 10 cents a dozen,

EARLY LESSONS, suitable for old and young, 80 pages, sold formerly for 10 cents a copy.

These works are excellent for use by those who wish to do missionary labor, and we offer them at such a low price that they should be out in a short time. Bro. Jones had large editions of these tracts printed, and by dying suddenly, and his Widow being in feeble health, we have undertaken the task of selling them. Her income is quite limited, and all that can be gotten out of the sales goes to her after expenses are paid. When you buy these tracts you get several times the worth of your money, and also aid a worthy Sister, who will thank you for it.

Assorted package 30 cents per pound. Gospel of the Kingdom, alone at 25 cents per pound.

The Gospel of the Kingdom.

Advocated in a series of Ten Discourses. A Volume of 283 pages, cloth 25 cents, leather bound, embossed, and gilt edges, $1.00. By Wiley Jones. This book is so well known that it is only necessary to announce that it is for sale, to insure a market for it. We have undertaken to dispose of these books for the Widow of our lamented Brother Jones, and while getting them at this low price, you at the same time will help Sister Jones to much-needed money.

Popular Lectures by M. Joblin.

Brethren and Sisters, Have you loved ones who think sincerity will save them? Have you friends who think they worship acceptably while ignorant of God's promises? Have you acquaintances with false hopes of heaven, or who believe themselves immortal by nature, or who think their sins are forgiven, although they are ignorant of the Law of Pardon, or who have no use for a God who consigns sinners to Eternal Torment, and are ignorant of Jehovah's beneficent purpose to fill the earth with his glory and bestow Eternal Life upon believers of the Gospel, so they can enjoy it for ever? If so, send for Popular Lectures by Bro. Joblin, entitled:—"The Kingdom of God;" "Old Mother Earth to Be Born Again;" "Strangers from the Covenants of Promise;" "Vain Worship;" "No Immortality Out of Christ;" "Hope Begotten by the Resurrection of Christ;" "God's Love and Solicitude for Mankind;" and "What Shall We Do to be Save-d?"

Each Lecture of 16 pages $1 per 100 post free; or an assortment of the whole, same price. Address M. Joblin, 624 Woodland Av., Cleveland, O.

Important Notices.

All persons addressing us should give their name, postoffice, county and state, plainly and distinctly.

All letters should be addressed to "THE RESTITUTION, Plymouth, Marshall, Co., Ind."

Remittance should be sent by bank draft, postoffice money order, or registered letter. Money sent in either of the above ways is at our risk, money sent loose in letters is at the risk of the sender. It is folly to think that you can fold bills in a letter so that no one can feel it, for one who handles much mail matter can almost invariably tell a letter with money in it. Take warning and send safely.

All remittances should be made payable to the order of "THE RESTITUTION."

We cannot hold ourselves responsible for the return of manuscripts. Authors should preserve a copy for themselves.

In ordering books or tracts get the latest copy of the paper you have and order only what you see advertised in that.

When desiring a change of address, give both your old and new address.

By complying strictly with the above you will save us much annoyance, and your order will be much more promptly attended to.

A WAR ATLAS.

The exact locality of many places mentioned in the news of the War between the United States and Spain is not known to the general reader, and so recourse is had to geographies. We have decided to offer our readers a complete War Atlas of sixteen pages of maps, showing all the territory where a conflict can occur, besides some valuable statistics. This will be mailed to you for 25 cts. Send orders at once, and get the position of the places named that you can better understand how the various complications will affect the nations of the world. Our One Life.

'Tis not for us to think life is brief,
And sin is here,
Our age is but the falling of a leaf—
A dropping tear.
We have no time to sport among the hours,
Life must be earnest in this work of ours.

Not many lives, but one have we,
One, only one—
How sacred should that life ever be!
That narrow span
Day after day filled up with blessed toil,
Hour after hour still bringing in new spoil.

O, day of time, how dark! O, sky and earth,
How dull your hue!
O, day of Christ, how bright, O sky and earth
Made fair and new!
Come, better Eden with thy restored trees;
Come, brighter Salem, gladden all the seas.

PINE WOODS BIBLE CLASS.

Teacher. We have this week a copy of Mr Williams' confession of faith, which he has prepared to submit to the Church of God at Rainesville.

Miss Gordon met him according to previous appointment, to listen to his paper, which reads as follows:

CONFESSION OF FAITH.

To the Church of God at Rainesville:

1. I confess my faith in the Supreme Being. The Scriptures teach us that he which cometh to God must believe that HE IS, and also that he is the rewarder of those who diligently seek him. I apprehend that this is the foundation rock in the temple of faith. Disbelief in the Creator would undermine every other article in the Christian faith.

2. Observation teaches us all, that sooner or later death lays his icy hand upon us, and brings us into a condition which baffles the power and skill of man to release his fellows from its domain.

3. I believe the Bible to be the revealed will of God to man. In that alone, I find the Divine purpose concerning man and earth.

4. I find salvation from death offered in a proposition called "the gospel." Paul, a chosen Apostle of Jesus Christ says in Rom. i. 15, 16: "I am ready to preach the gospel to you that are at Rome also. For I am not ashamed of the gospel of Christ: for it is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth: to the Jew first, and also to the Greek."

Jesus said: "Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature. He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved; but he that believeth not, shall be damned." Mark xvi. 15, 16. These two heralds of the gospel, in the above passages, simply state the saving efficacy of the gospel, but do not give the system of truth which constitute the gospel; but that we find elsewhere.

(1.) From the above passage we learn that Paul preached, the gospel which was the "power of God unto salvation" at Rome. The proper thing to do then, to learn the subject-matter of his preaching at Rome, concerning "the salvation of God," would be to appeal to that, and then we can be sure that we have made no mistake. We find this in Acts xxviii. 20-30. He appeared before his auditors at Rome, as a prisoner, and says: "For the hope of Israel I am bound with this chain." In another place he declared "the hope of Israel," to be "the hope of the promise made of God unto the fathers." "There come many to him into his lodging to whom he expounded and testified THE KINGDOM OF GOD, persuading them concerning JESUS, both out of the law of Moses, and out of the prophets, from morning till evening."

"Paul dwelt two whole years in his own hired house, and received all that came in unto him, preaching THE KINGDOM OF GOD, and teaching those things which concern the LORD JESUS CHRIST." Thus we find Paul's gospel preaching at ROME of which he was "not ashamed." The "power of God unto salvation," was in it also. A dear friend being turned to his preaching he said: "Be it known unto you that THE SALVATION OF GOD ("the power of God unto salvation") is sent unto the Gentiles, and they will hear it."

It may be asked why did the Israelites object to Paul's preaching "the kingdom of God," or in other words "the hope of Israel?"

The objection was not in preaching "the hope of Israel," as can be seen in Acts xxvi. 6, 7: "I stand and am judged for the hope of the promise made of God unto our fathers: unto which our twelve tribes instantly serving God day and night hope to come." The trouble was all found in the phrase: "Persuading them concerning JESUS, both out of the law of Moses and out of the prophets." They were aware the prophet had declared: "But thou Bethlehem, in the land of Judah, art not the least among the princes of Judah; for out of thee shall come a GOVERNOR, that shall RULE MY PEOPLE ISRAEL." They objected to Jesus as being that "Governor," and hence they crucified him, with the accusation over his head, "this is JESUS OF NAZARETH, THE KING OF THE JEWS." Hence Paul's preaching at Rome, was the GOSPEL of the kingdom of God.

(2) What did Jesus preach as the gospel? Mark i. 14, records the subject matter of the gospel (or "Word") first sent to Israel, and which Peter, under instruction from heaven gave to the Gentile household of Cornelius as, "Words whereby thou and all thy house shall be saved." The record reads as follows: "Now, after that John was put in prison, Jesus came into Galilee, preaching THE GOSPEL OF THE KINGDOM OF GOD."

The writer of the Hebrews was deeply impressed with the saving virtue of the gospel as preached by Jesus, as can be seen by referring to Heb ii. 1-4:

"HOW SHALL WE ESCAPE
if we neglect so great salvation; which AT FIRST began to be SPOKEN BY THE LORD, and was confirmed unto us BY THEM that HEARD HIM."

Peter testifies on the same line, and says God sent this message, first to Israel, and afterward commanded it to be sent to the Gentiles, that they also, may enjoy its saving benefits. Peter addressing Cornelius and household concerning that message says: "The Word which God sent unto

THE CHILDREN OF ISRAEL,
preaching peace by Jesus Christ: (he is Lord of all:) that word ye know, which was published throughout Judea, and began from Galilee, after the baptism which John preached."

In Luke ix. 2, 6, we have Jesus' commission to the twelve: "He called his twelve disciples together and * * * sent them to preach THE KINGDOM OF GOD. And they departed and went through the towns preaching the GOSPEL." Here we learn that preaching "the kingdom of God," and preaching "the gospel," is one and the same thing. "Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature. He that BELIEVETH and is BAPTIZED shall be SAVED." What gospel? The gospel he sent them to preach, of course. The Bible never recognized but ONE gospel, and such being the case he advised stability in its belief. "To present you holy and unreprovable in his sight: if ye CONTINUE IN THE FAITH, grounded and settled, and be not moved away from THE HOPE OF THE GOSPEL, which ye have heard." Col. i. 23. Hence, we are at no loss to know what the subject-matter of the gospel is, Paul preached at Rome, of which he was "not ashamed," nor Christ's commission in Mark xvi. 15, 16.

All the gospel preaching has its base in "the covenants of promise made of God unto the fathers." It is the only gospel that has saving virtue in it. Don't take my say-so, but read it yourself in Eph. ii. 12: "Wherefore remember, that ye being in time past Gentiles in the flesh, * * * that at that time, ye were WITHOUT CHRIST, being ALIENS from the COMMONWEALTH of ISRAEL, and STRANGERS FROM THE COVENANTS OF PROMISE, having NO HOPE, and WITHOUT GOD in the world." I believe we are completely mortal by nature. In 2 Tim. i. 10, we are told that Christ has brought life and immortality to light THROUGH THE GOSPEL. How important the gospel message is.

Allied with, and inseparable from the message of the kingdom, are those things concerning the name of the Lord Jesus Christ. His blood ratified the "EVERLASTING COVENANT" and made it sure, and purchased eternal redemption for those who enter into the bonds of the covenant.

Heb. xiii. 20, 21: "Now the God of peace that brought again from the dead, our Lord Jesus, that great Shepherd of the sheep, through the BLOOD OF THE EVERLASTING COVENANT, (God made with Abraham and his seed an everlasting covenant) make you perfect in every good work," etc.

THE MISSION OF JESUS.

I find SIN is the adversary or opponent separating mankind from God, which adversary must be met, overcome and destroyed.

I find the Son of God was manifested or sent for that purpose. I will here quote as proof, 1 John iii. 8; Heb. ii. 14: "For THIS PURPOSE the Son of God was manifested, that he might destroy the works of the devil."

"Forasmuch, then, as the children are partakers of flesh and blood, he (Jesus), also himself took part of the same, that THROUGH DEATH he might DESTROY him that had THE POWER OF DEATH, that is the devil." We have here three points:

1. To destroy the works of the devil.
2. To destroy the devil.
3. The weapon of destruction "through death,"—the atonement, when allied with the covenants of promise.

Now, inasmuch as many people when they read the words, "the devil," their minds at once revert to a supposed personality which they call "the devil," which is but a relic, to my mind of pagan superstition; therefore, to show clearer my conception of the mission of Jesus, I wish to show that Jesus came to destroy SIN and not an omnipotent personal devil, possessing super-natural power. Right here you will perceive an issue can be made in our knowledge of the mission of Jesus.

It must certainly be conceded that the atonement of Jesus can never KILL, or (take the physical life) of the devil of popular conception, who is described as the great arch-enemy and opponent of God who is ever on the alert to defeat his will and purpose. It is not reasonable to suppose that the All Powerful Jehovah, the Great I AM, would permit such a foe to step in between him and his people, and work their eternal ruin. The power ascribed to this supposed evil personality, makes him a species of a god. He is said to be omnipresent, and possessed of supernatural power. He is said to be able to practice his seductive art in the hearts of millions of people in every part of the earth, all at the same moment, and at the same time have a personal knowledge of [illegible] points in each individual of this vast host, and can plan and operate differently in each case.

The belief in such a personality is a belief in a monstrous piece of pagan fiction, and is not the devil named in the passages of Scripture above quoted. A little careful investigation of the Scriptures quoted, will make this apparent to the most simple mind.

It will be helpful to remember what the words devil and Satan mean. Cruden says: "Satan, Sathan, Satanos; this is a mere Hebrew word, and signifies an adversary, an enemy, an accuser."

The word devil "Comes from the Greek diabolos, which signifies calumniator, or accuser," thus any adversary, accuser, etc., may be a devil. The adversary called "the devil," the passages under consideration is SIN, and sin in the flesh, above other adversaries, may in a general term be called "THE devil."

We are at no loss to comprehend what "the devil" was Jesus was commissioned to destroy as given in Heb. ii. 14. The key is found in the words: "THAT HAD THE POWER OF DEATH." "The power of death" is centered in only ONE adversary, or devil. For proof,

See Rom. v. 12: "By one man SIN entered into the world, and DEATH BY SIN;" but life and immortality through the one true gospel.

Rom. vi. 15: "SIN bringeth forth DEATH."

1 Cor. xv. 56: "The STING of DEATH is SIN."

Rom. vi. 23: "The wages of SIN is DEATH."

"The soul that SINNETH it shall DIE."

HOW TO KILL THE SIN-DEVIL.

Heb. ix. 26: "He PUT AWAY SIN by the SACRIFICE of himself."

1 John iii. 5: "He was MANIFESTED TO TAKE AWAY OUR SINS."

Heb. ii. 14: "That THROUGH DEATH he might DESTROY him that had the POWER of DEATH,—that is the devil."

Take notice, that the phrase: "That is the devil" may be taken as a phrase defining the words preceding it, him that had the power of death, as being "the devil"—that is the devil.

Said John: "Behold the Lamb of God, which taketh away the sin of the world."

In the case of Ananias and Sapphira, we have the sin, or devil of covetousness, personified as Satan.

Acts v. 3: "Ananias, why hath Satan filled thine heart with a lie to the Holy Spirit, and to keep back part of the price of the land?"

At first sight we might attribute this work to the personal devil of pagan superstition, but the verse following explains. (It would have been a mean thing to kill them both on account of the work of the supernatural devil, over which they had no power.)

See verse 4: "Why hast thou conceived in thine heart," etc.? Again: "How is it that ye have agreed together to tempt the Spirit of the Lord?"

James i. 14, 15: "Every man is tempted, when he is drawn away of his own lust, (not tempted by a personal devil) and enticed. Then when lust hath conceived, it bringeth forth sin, when it (sin) is finished bringeth forth death." We cease to be servants of sin, and pass from under the dominion of sin, when we receive the pardon of sin in baptism.

"Repent and be baptized, every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins." Acts ii 38.

"And now why tarriest thou? Arise and be baptized, and wash away thy sins, calling on the name of the Lord." Acts xxii. 16. After Peter had preached the gospel which began from Galilee, after the baptism which John preached, to Cornelius and household he said: "Can any man forbid water, that these should not be baptized which have received the Holy Ghost as well as we? And he commanded them to be baptized in the name of the Lord."

"Except a man be born of water and of the Spirit, he cannot enter the kingdom of God." John iii. 5.

I confess that it is my earnest desire to enter the kingdom of God. I confess a belief in the gospel which is the "power of God unto salvation," as given above, and ask for the birth of water, and if I continue faithful, I know I shall be born of the Spirit, when made like my Lord at the resurrection.

Yours in hope,
CHAS. WILLIAMS.

Mr. Williams. Now Miss Gordon, what do you think of the above paper?

Miss Gordon. I am delighted, I feel sure the Church will endorse it.

Mr. Williams. You please take it and present it to the Church.

"I know that my Redeemer liveth," Job xix. 25. "Blessed be the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, which, according to his abundant mercy hath begotten us again, unto a lively hope by the resurrection of Jesus Christ from the dead."—1 Pet. i. 3.

If we take care to keep a good conscience, we may trust God to take care of our good name.

Report.

Dear Household of Faith:

I am home again after visiting and holding meeting with the brothers and sisters at Bosworth, Mo. It had been about seventeen months since they had had any preaching. Oh, what a condition for a church to be in. I find a number of other churches in the same condition. No preaching, and only a few taking THE RESTITUTION, or any religious paper at all. They might get along with these silent preachers for three or four months but not so long as seventeen months. We gave five discourses at this place and immersed two intelligent sisters. On account of school we had to move four miles northeast, where we gave three discourses. We partook of the emblems of bread and wine and then left. We left an appointment for Dec. 24th, to continue to the 1st of January. All that can are invited to attend this meeting.

I can truthfully say that the Lord was with us, all seemed loathe to leave, and seemed to say it was good to be there, and I believe all will try to live better the coming year. 1899 will soon be past, and oh, how many of our brothers and sisters are gone.

On Oct. 15th met at the home of our dear Sister Sturgeon, but alas! she was not there. She had gone to her long home, the place or house that Job said, "If I wait the grave is my house." The occasion was the wedding of J. T. Williford and Francis Sturgeon. After reading the 5th chapter of Eph., we joined them in holy matrimony. Sister Francis is a faithful member of the Church of God, and my prayer is her husband will also be in the near future.

While here we met Sister Hacker, formerly of Ripley, Ill.

JOHN FOORE.

Editor Restitution:

On Friday, Oct. 13, Brother S. J. Lindsay immersed Brother Thomas J. Tilton into the name of Christ, for the remission of sins. But a few weeks previous Brother Hudler immersed two others. Very shortly after leaving the water Brother Tilton regretted not having obeyed, but resolved to do so soon. It was only a very few days thereafter when a malady of a very serious matter (Cancer of the stomach) was known to be consuming his strength and vitality, and being anxious to have a part in the promised inheritance, resolved to obey the Master's call at once. He therefore dispatched a messenger for Brother Lindsay, who being away did not arrive until the second day. While the medical adviser was somewhat fearful of the results, yet he said he was not alarmed and desired to be taken to the water and be buried with his Master in baptism. Twenty-five or thirty friends and relatives went with him to a little stream of water flowing through his land, and there he exchanged the old for the new name. Cast off the old garment of sin for the robe of righteousness, in which we truly hope he, with us, may appear when the Great Physician shall come to rescue his faithful from the ravages of disease, the bonds of corruption and the gloom of death.

L. BOOTH.

Selections.

Faint Not.

"If thou faint in the day of adversity, thy strength is small." Yet there are many things which would often cause the hearts of men to faint. Things are so disappointing and discouraging, that they are almost ready to give way to despondency, and abandon their efforts for good. Hindrances arise, friends prove unfaithful, trusted leaders fail, cherished organizations are wrecked, things which were expected do not come, many a hopeful scheme proves to be ruinous and disastrous, and the temptation is to abandon every thing, to trust nobody, and to give up in despair.

This course is not the part of wisdom, nor is it warranted by the experience of ages and generations.

The Restitution.

THE RESTITUTION advocates the final "restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint-heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ, and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for remission of sins, pre-requisites of the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

Disappointment is the common lot of man; failure is no new thing. Age after age hopes have been blighted, plans have failed, mortals have erred; and men have been disappointed. Everything earthly is uncertain, everything human is fallible, everything temporal is liable to pass away. But there are some things permanent yet. Men may disappoint us, God does not; men may change, but in him there is no variableness or shadow of turning. Our purposes may end in disappointment, but his better purposes may be carried forward to their triumphant accomplishment.

Even the wreck and ruin of our hope is not so disastrous as we fear. When was there ever a more complete and utter wreck of hope than when our Savior lay in the tomb? One trusted disciple, the treasurer, the almoner, the business man of the concern, had turned out to be a hypocrite, a thief and a traitor. Another, the leading spokesman of the party, proved himself a coward and a liar, and swore he did not know the Master whom he had followed for years. All the rest of his disciples forsook him and fled, like frightened sheep before the wolf; and the leader and teacher who had been hailed with shouts and hosannas, was hung between two thieves on a Roman cross. Surely a more absolute and utter failure of every cherished prospect could hardly be imagined; and yet, out of those depths of darkness and discouragement came the light and gladness of immortal hope. A little while and those scattered disciples were gathered; a little while, and those sad hearts were made glad; a little while, and that frightened, doubting, fearing company became bold as lions in their testimony for God, and proclaimed in the ears of the gazing world the resurrection of the Crucified One and salvation through his name. Out of the depths of their despondency was born the height of their triumphant hope, and those who doubted and feared and gave way to discouragement, could say, "Blessed be the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, which according to his abundant mercy, hath begotten us again unto a lively hope, by the resurrection of Jesus Christ from the dead."

You may have been disappointed in many things; hopes which you have cherished have failed, friends which you trusted have proved untrue; schemes from which you expected much have proved abortive, and have finally given way to despondency and despair. But do not for a moment allow such feelings to possess your thoughts or influence your mind. You may have been on the wrong track; there is nothing then to do but get right, and you may be thankful that you know it so soon, and that you have been undeceived before it is too late. For past disappointments make you more cautious and prudent. But do not despond, and do not doubt that God has plans and purposes that are wiser than all which you have known, and that he can bring good out of evil; can overturn the plots and plans of sinful men; can bring to naught the craftiest schemes, and can glorify himself by the wreck of all the plans which we have formed, and the accomplishment of the better purposes which he in his wisdom has devised. A temporary check leads us to more certain success. Schooled by disappointment, we dig deeper, and lay broader foundations, and complete our work triumphantly at last.

"Whatsoever thy hand findeth to do, do it with thy might." Let no discouragement or failure hinder you from doing the present work which God has for you. Today has its duties. Let us not stop to mourn over the past, but let us gird ourselves for present emergencies, and go forward in the strength of the Lord God.

If you want to keep your heart warm keep in the Sun after you get into him—Christ. Walk up to the fire,—that is, the Word of God. "Is not my Word like fire?" How many warming and comforting passages there are. Keep in motion and action, stirring up yourselves and the gifts God has given you, by converse and communion. How can one be warm alone?

Reader, did you ever notice that the apostolic style of address was:—"Children of the stock of Abraham, and whosoever among you that feareth God, to you is the Word of salvation sent." Plainly a man's piety did not exempt him from the necessity of believing the gospel of the kingdom of God; or as Paul styles it, "the Word of this salvation." Peter went to Caesarea to tell pious, God-fearing people, "Words whereby they should be saved." Piety in general has so little to do with an understanding of the Word of the kingdom and the obedience it enjoins, that it has passed into a proverb, that "ignorance is the mother of devotion."

For E. N. D. If you read Matt. xv. 13 without the 12 preceding verses you are likely to be "puzzled" to harmonize it with Mark ix. 38,—40. By reading from the first verse of Matt. xv. you will perceive that the pernicious teachings of the Pharisees so scathingly rebuked by our Lord were the plant the Heavenly Father did not plant, and which shall be rooted up,—and that they were to let alone; because of its human origin.

Mark ix. 38—40 reads as follows:—"And John answered him, saying, Master, we saw one casting out devils in thy name, and he followeth not us." This was precisely what Jesus' disciples were told to do, and did do, by the Spirit's power. John proves that he really cast out devils in Jesus' name, as they did: and that means that it was by spirit power he did it; and it would have been a great wonder if Jesus had not corrected John and his fellows for forbidding him. This is not out of harmony with Matt. xv. 13, it being another matter entirely.

"Dr." John Alexander Dowie is having a tough time of it, and if "persecution" is a sign of "sainthood" then certainly Mr. Dowie has the palm. He has undertaken a series of meetings in different parts of Chicago and towns in that vicinity, but even with the aid of the police and his "Zion Guards," he has been interrupted and the meetings broken up by loud shouts from his audience. Bottles of foul smelling drugs have been spilled on the floors, and when he has left the halls stones and dirt have been thrown on him, obliging him at one place to run a half mile through the muddy street to a car, where the windows were broken and a general smash up was the result before he was finally gotten away. Of course, there is no excuse sufficient to justify such conduct, but it shows the humor of the people. The Illinois State Board of Health is now investigating some cases of diptheria and scarlet fever which are said to have occurred among the followers of Dowie, and where children have died without medical treatment. If this man is a "Divine Healer" it looks as if he should also be able to arrest the contagion arising from contact with these diseases, and so prevent its spreading among others.

Cardinal Ledochowski, Prefect of the Propaganda at Rome, to whom belongs the final settlement of all Roman ecclesiastical controversies arising between the people and Bishops, has decided the trouble that arose at Belleville, Ill., over the appointment of a German priest to have charge of an Irish Catholic Church, in favor of the people, and he has ordered the Bishop to remove the obnoxious priest and give them a man of their own choice. Further he has ordered that the ban of excommunication resting on these people be removed. There is no appeal from this ruling. This means that the members of the Catholic Church in America can in the future ask for the appointment of such priests as they may chose, and the Bishops must not decide contrary to these reasonable requests.

The Gleaner says there is a touching fact related in history of a Scottish chief, who fell wounded by two balls in a battle. Seeing their chief fall the clan wavered, and gave the enemy an advantage. The old chieftain, beholding the effect of the disaster, raised himself up while the blood flowed from his wounds, and shouted aloud, "I am not dead my children, I am looking at you to see you do your duty."

These words revived the sinking courage of his brave Highlanders. There was a charm in the fact that they still fought under the eye of their chief. It roused them to put forth their mightiest energies, and they did all that human strength could do to turn and stem the tide of battle.

And is there not a charm to thee, O believer, in the fact that you contend in the battlefield of life under the eye of your Savior? Wherever you are, however you are oppressed by foes,—however exhausted by the stern strife with evil, the eye of Christ is fixed most lovingly upon you. Noris Jesus the only observer of your conduct. You are also a spectacle unto the angels." "You are compassed about with a crowd of witnesses. This makes the theatre of your life sublime. You contend for victory under circumstances sufficiently grand to arouse your most latent power, and to stimulate you to strive bravely, vigorously and perseveringly even unto victory.

The Twenty-Third Psalm.

The following notes on the Twenty-third Psalm are now going the rounds of the Press and may be helpful to some of our readers, and therefore give them a place:—

"You will notice David does not say, "I shall not need." He used a far better word—want. We often want things we do not need, but the more we come to understand that the Lord is our Shepherd, the more our wants and needs become identical, and we can say, as David said, "I shall not want." If this Twenty-third Psalm be the valley of our present-day experience then we shall want nothing he does not supply.

"I shall not want rest. He maketh me to lie down in green pastures."

"I shall not want drink. He leadeth me beside the still waters."

"I shall not want forgiveness. He restoreth my soul."

"I shall not want guidance. He guideth me in the paths of righteousness for his name's sake."

"I shall not want companionship. Yea, though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death, I will fear no evil: for thou art with me."

"I shall not want comfort. Thy rod and thy staff they comfort me."

"I shall not want food. Thou preparest a table before me in the presence of my enemies."

"I shall not want joy. Thou hast anointed my head with oil."

"I shall not want anything. My cup runneth over."

"I shall not want anything in this life. Surely goodness and mercy shall follow me all the days of my life."

"I shall not want anything in eternity. For I will dwell in the house of the Lord forever."

The South African War.

The situation in Africa is one of plotting and waiting. The Boers are concentrating their forces and looking for a favorable time to strike, realizing full well that they must be quick about it. The British are aware that their forces are not sufficient to cope with the combined forces of the Boers and Free State Burgers, and so are playing for delay of any decisive battles until they are reinforced by the aid that is on the way to them. How long this state can be maintained is a question. The odds at present are against the English.

The question of probable interference by other powers is presented. That there is a movement in Europe to antagonize England, and see that she does not gain too much advantage in this struggle is certain. What it will develop into any tangible form is a question. It is quite evident that President Kruger expects some assistance either by way of attracting England to other parts of the world or else in a direct way by open armed [illegible]. His action in taking the aggressive when he did would indicate an understanding of this kind. We are asked if there is any real ground for belief that any European nation contemplate hostile action against England. So far as this is concerned we will state that Russia and France are both hostile to England all the time, and only await a chance to do her ill. Have they done anything lately to indicate that they were contemplating any active measure? The movement, without any apparent reason, of the Russian and French Black and Mediterranean Sea fleets, to such points that a combining of the [illegible] is a question of only a few days, certainly cause to suspect something. In the official papers of both nations the question of "arbitration" is freely discussed.

England has taken note of this with the result that the Mediterranean and Channel squadrons already join around Gibraltar, and other vessels are in place where the Channel fleet was doing duty. This aggregation of British vessels in the Mediterranean makes a stronger line of ships than any nation in the world aside from England can make, comprising as it does 156 vessels of the first class. Further the calling out of the Militia in England is an act not warranted by the simple trouble in South Africa. So that whether we can explain it or not, certain it is that England scents trouble, and is bound to be in a position to care for herself.

Meanwhile Russia has in hand a side play in the lately discovered plot to seize on Herat in Afghanistan, and thereby check English influence in Persia. This may call for some sharp negotiations.

Again the question is asked, what right has England to engage in this war? And why do the nations of Europe, and our own too, hesitate to tell her she is wrong and must stop? This is a large question to answer, and involves questions of international law. Many men and a good number of newspaper writers in this country are fast to denounce England for fighting the Boers, claiming that they are being trodden under foot by the British, are warring for independence, for freedom, are being oppressed, and like expressions. That they are being treated as were the Cubans by Spain, and that if it was right for our country to interfere for Cuba it is just as right to interfere for the Boers. Our readers may give just as much weight to these utterances as they please. We have no wish to prejudice the minds of any, but to state the case.

During the Spanish-Cuban war no nation recognized the "belligerent rights" of Cuba, because Cuba was recognized as belonging to Spain and to do so would be an "unfriendly act." When at last the United States did so recognize the "independence" of Cuba, she was forced to fight Spain. Incidentally the blowing up of the Maine hastened the beginning of hostilities, but primarily the recognition of Cuban independence caused our war with Spain.

But, says one, is not the "Dutch Republic" with President Kruger at its head independent? Well, the Burgers of the "Orange Free State" have thought so, and taken arms to help them. However, so far no other nation has so said, nor even made "declaration of neutrality." This is sufficient evidence that the "Dutch Republic" is so only in name. The question from which the war was over rights of British subjects, and the fact of the then existing compact between the Cape Colony government and the Transvaal being broken by the Boers, settles the matter as to recognized British suzerainty.

It must be plain then to all that a "declaration of neutrality" between Great Britain and the Transvaal, or a "recognition of belligerent rights" of the Boers, would be an unfriendly act toward England. This so action would mean that in the judgment of the nation so declaring Boer contention they are absolutely independent, is correct, and no power has appeared who will take this step. Should any nation desire to take the polite way would be to offer Mediation. The sterner way would be to address a note of interrogation to Britain asking for her ultimate designs in South Africa. Following this would be armed intervention, a matter would be allowed to linger and nothing be done about it.

When Greece and Turkey were at war the nations of Europe combined and recognized the independence of Greece, then interfered to prevent her absorbtion by Turkey. This was done to maintain the "balance of power."

Should the European nations now combine and declare neutrality it would be only to accuse England of attempting to conquer an independent nation, and intervention would not only be probable but necessary, in order to maintain the international balance. When the United States and Spain were at war some European nations talked of interference and at one time it came near being more than "talk" alone. There is no doubt but what there would have been interference had it not been for England. Only the fact that previous to that time our nation had never been reckoned among the "world powers," made it possible for English influence to hold in check her sister nations, and let us go on and thrash Spain till she could stand no more.

England, however, is in a different position, and only by treating the Boers as under British restraint, from which they have revolted, can she hope to escape interruption. This must be maintained at all hazards. Should the British be successful in the next few days, and the Boers lose ground, then if President Kruger should ask Russia or France, or both to arbitrate the differences, and they should attempt to do so, they will find England in no humor to look kindly on such an act. Should Russia and France be involved in a war with England there would be a re-adjustment of the present condition of Europe if England should gain the ascendancy, and in case of her defeat almost every quarter of the globe would be affected.

A dispatch from Constantinople says that Russia intends at an early date to hand the Porte a note demanding the opening of the Dardanelles and Bosphorus. Commenting on this the Journal at Geneva says, "Unless Great Britain is a party to such a demand Russia's action will undoubtedly stir up a hornet's nest, compared with which the Transvaal question will be quite insignificant."

In view of passing events and possible events we are admonished to watch closely, remembering ever that they but tend to the great change that will occur when the King of Peace shall come.

Aaron and Christ.

Continuing this subject we would remind our readers that the baptism of Jesus, sinless as he was, was necessary to his redemption from death. This may be a startling statement to some perhaps; but we are so fully persuaded of its truth that we expect the honest of heart, who give it the attention it deserves, will agree with it. Hebrews ix. 12, plainly teaches that he obtained eternal redemption himself. Before he obtained it, he needed it. This completely shuts out the theory of his having, because of his sinlessness, a free life to give up in behalf of others. Sinless as he was, he was subject to the law of sin and death because of his connection with the earthly Adam who sinned and introduced death. Possibly, and even probably, those who have not the means of knowing that there is absolutely nothing in the Greek text to warrant the insertion of the words "FOR US," in Heb. ix. 12, may think we are out of the way when we say that Christ himself obtained Eternal Redemption through or by means of his own blood. The Diaglott reading is as follows;—"He entered once for all into the Holy Places. Not indeed by means of the blood of goats and of bullocks, by means of his own blood, having found Alonian Redemption." It stops where the Greek text stops,—and to us that appears the only proper place to stop. The recently published "Interlinear," reads just as the Diaglott—having found. Young's Translation reads:—"Age-during Redemption having obtained." Rotherham,—"An Age-Abiding redemption discovering." The Revised Version also stops at the word Redemption. Sawyer's Translation reads,—"With his own blood entered once into the sanctuary having found Eternal Redemption." The Syriac reads,—"He entered once into the sanctuary, and obtained Eternal Redemption." Jamieson, Fausette and Brown translates the passage thus:—"Having thereby obtained;" and says literally, it means "found for himself." The American Bible Union reads,—"But through his own blood, entered once for all into the holy places obtaining eternal Redemption." Henderson's also ends at the word Redemption. And lastly the Common Version prints the words "for us," in Italics to show that they were supplied by the translators.

We do not see how any one can fail to see from the above, that all in Adamic nature of existence are under the law of sin and death,—and that this shows the meaning of the Scripture which says Christ was made sin for us. Heb. xiii. 20 already quoted, proves that Christ was redeemed from death by his own precious blood, which brought into force the great Life-giving covenant made to Abraham and confirmed to Jacob for an law. And as he himself certainly received the benefit of his own precious blood, what a stupendous error to teach that he possessed free life, and offered it substantially for the natural life of the human race. Heb. xiii. 20 strikes at the root of this idea. To make his death substitutionary in the above sense, is simply to make him a Savior of others before he himself was raised from the dead,—and to credit him with paying the debt of myriads of others with something he did not have himself. This reduces the redemption which is in Christ Jesus to those who comply with the conditions exacted by our Lord himself: "He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved, and he that believeth not shall be condemned," illustrating that other divine statement, that the way to life is narrow, and but few find it.

Again, if Christ died instead of myriads of others, then they should not die, but they do die. If he paid the penalty due us from Adamic sin, he ought not to have risen. But he did rise. If his death alone was substitutionary, then Paul was all astray when he said, "If Christ be not raised then those having fallen asleep in Christ have perished." to say nothing of other countless millions. In a word, if Christ paid our debts, that blots out Forgiveness.

Jesus in the likeness of the sinful flesh in which it was the Father's purpose to condemn it, after awhile, came to John as the ram of consecration, Ex. xxix. 22, 17 to be washed according to the law. For 30 years he had maintained a spotless character and it was this that was granted to him for repentance in fulfilling all the righteousness of the law by baptism, which of course was only typical of the robe of righteousness with which he must be clothed before he could enter the Most Holy Place as High Priest after the order of Melchizedec. Although he had lived without sin so long he does not seem to have been recognized by the Father till he put on the antetype of Aaron's holy garments,—and he could only put it on by washing his flesh in water. If he had heeded John's remonstrance Jesus would have stood before his people as the High Priest, claiming to officiate in the Most Holy Place without baptism.

It is worthy of note that the symbolic righteousness of the Mosaic law not only required the High Priest to put on the holy garments after baptism; but it also commanded his household to be baptized. It reads as follows in Lev. viii. 5, 6, 13; xvi. 4. "This is the thing Jehovah commanded to be done. And Moses brought Aaron and his sons and washed them with water. And he put upon Aaron the coat, etc., and he put coats upon his sons, and girded them with girdles, and put turbans upon them as Jehovah commanded." So we see that John the immersed did for Jesus what Moses did for Aaron and his sons.

Jesus has a household as well as Aaron; and we are apostolically told that Christ is a Son over his own house, whose house we are, if we hold fast the confidence and the rejoicing of the hope firm unto the end. Heb. iii. 6, 14. We also find Jesus saying "Thus it becometh us to fulfill all righteousness," making it necessary for all his house to do as he did, with this difference, that his holiness was his own, while they must be baptized into his through faith and obedience. Jesus and his household are the future kings and priests to rule Israel and the nations. The law and the prophets which attest the righteousness of God required them all to put on that righteousness by the washing of water;—and Jesus requires all who would be of his household to do the same thing, and says, "Till heaven and earth pass, one jot or one tittle shall in no wise pass from the law, till all be fulfilled." Therefore he said to his apostles, "Go ye and preach the gospel to every creature;" and "teach them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you." This constituted them the depositories of his commands, so that he that heareth them heareth him; and he that despiseth him, despiseth him that sent him.

In conclusion we would ask:—Shall it be said that it was necessary for our Great High Priest who was altogether innocent of transgression, and who for 30 years had enjoyed the favor of God and man, to be immersed in a baptism for the remission of sin by nature, and not necessary for the pious who would become members of his household, although sinners by practice as well as by nature? Depend upon it an Immersed High Priest must have, and will only have an immersed household."

Died of heart failure and dropsy at her father's residence, three miles east of Walkerton, Ind., on Sunday Oct. 22, at 1:30 o'clock p. m., Irma Valentine, daughter of Frank E. Head. Her mother died five years ago and she with her little sister was raised by their grand parents, Mr. and Mrs. B. F. Head, of South Plymouth. Irma was a very kind, loving child and endeared herself to all who knew her. We layed her to rest Tuesday by the side of her mother, in the Knox cemetery, where there was a goodly number of friends and relatives gathered, to look for the last time on the face of the little darling that we all loved, but we sorrow not without hope, for Jesus says, "Suffer little children to come unto me, of such is the kingdom of heaven." She was 7 years, 8 months and 8 days old.

Mrs. B. F. Head.

Have You Read This?

By examining our list we find there are between 600 and 800 people whose time has expired. Some only a few months and others some years. If each one of you who are thus owing us would go to the office right now and send the money due us, we would have over a thousand dollars with which to push forward our work.

Brothers and Sisters, we need this money very much. We have earned it—it is ours—and if you do not send it to us, but use it on self, you are simply spending our money. It is not yours—it is ours. Were we in position to do so we would gladly lend you the amount, but the fact is we have bills to pay and cannot lend it to you longer. We ask you kindly and in the spirit of love and justice, to at once send us what you owe us. If you cannot spare it all now, then send part of it, and the balance after awhile. Please do not neglect this, but get a dollar and send to us right away today. We thank you in advance for the favor, and assure you we appreciate it very much.
